and dried by kilns at Salisbury, reduced to 2,000 pounds. Hence the company is paying unnecessary freight charges on 1,000 pounds of water in the material. By a centralization of the industry this waste is saved. At the same time the hauling of the lumber several times is avoided; that is, the lumber is first loaded in cars at Meyville, carried thence to Salisbury where it is unloaded, and after finishing the finished product, it is loaded on cars and sent to market. Under the more economical system the lumber will be handled only at its origin and leaving the mill.

Brad Merrell, Guardian

By HERBERT H. GOODWIN

(Copyright.)

There was vituperation loud and deep on Turkey Creek. The owner of the ranch, himself temporarily brought low by a refractory cayuse, was expecting a visitor from the East—his niece—and Brad Merrell had been told off to act as her guide, if not philosopher and friend.

Brad was the steadiest man on the ranch. This fact was enough for his employer. He was also the worst woman-hater. This fact made it too much for Brad.

"Why couldn't it hev been Paper-Collar Joe?" he demanded collectively and fiercely of the men, as they loitered outside the bunkhouse. "He'd hev been like a high-stepper with a new harness on. He'd sooner talk soft to a woman than rope the liveliest steer that ever bellered. But me! I won't hev nothin' to do with her. I'll take my time in the mornin'. I'll light out overnight—I'll burn down the whole ranch!"

"Now, Brad," wheedled Tom Mason, affectionately known as Old Soft Soap, by reason of his peacemaking proclivities—"now, Brad, jest stop an' think. Ye've yer own nice little place up on Turkey creek, where ye kin look after it handy, an' all plans made fer the summer. What would ye do with the rest of the season if ye take yer time now? Yer place is rented, it's too late to get taken on anywhere else, an' ye'd only lope around an' spend yer wad. This tenderfoot gal'll only stay a few weeks, an' it'll be a rest, fer ye—"

"Rest!" bellowed Brad. "Rest! I'll wreck every nerve in my carcass. She'll be one of two kinds; she'll either squeal every time she sees a lizard, an' be afraid of her own shadow, or she'll carry a blamed tin box fer bugs an' things. She'll either gush around about me bein' 'so picturesque,' or she'll be shocked at my language an' my pipe, an' try to reform me. Rest! A woman'll let a man rest only when she's been buried an' has a granite monument over her!"

Old Soft Soap prevailed, however, in the end. Next morning Brad started for the railroad, as a lamb begins its journey to the shambles, yet with a most unlamblike mien and accoutrement, for his pistol-belt and dirk, his leathern "chaps" and rakish sombrero, proclaimed him a "bad man," indeed.

The Overland Limited was late, and the engine seemed to puff and whistle like a steam locomotive at the little station that raised itself above the surrounding sea of grass. With much complaining and creaking it halted for a moment, and then its rattling links climbed slowly up the rise.

Brad looked for a mass of furbelows and a Saratoga trunk, but the platform was vacant except for an ample female, standing beside a bulging carpet-bag, a heap of boxes and bundles, and a shrouded bird cage.

"She ain't come," muttered Brad, his skies brightening.

The ample figure bore down upon him like a ship under sail. It was surrounded by a pleasant face of florid complexion, beneath a broad hat and a veil of grass green.

"Can you tell me if Turkey Creek ranch is anywhere near here?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am," answered Brad, awkwardly pulling at his hatbrim; "it's only about twenty-five miles over east. Was ye wantin' to go there?"

"That's what I came for," she replied promptly. "I'm Orphella Gordon, an' I've come to visit my uncle, John Taylor."

"Ye're Orph—Miss Gordon!" exclaimed Brad. "Why, I thought—" he checked himself suddenly.

"Yes, I s'pose you did think I was a young girl," she retorted. "No harm done. I was once, an' if I ain't so good-looking as I was then, I know a heap more. If you've come for me, don't let's lose any time, but help me get my baggage loaded, an' we'll be startin'."

The cage cover fell apart, and a brilliant red and green head appeared. It cocked itself impudently on one side, one beady eye looked Brad over from head to foot, and a high-pitched, energetic voice ejaculated:

"You be blamed!"

For the first time the bewildered look on the man's face relaxed, and a grin spread over his bronzed features. The woman's floridity deepened, and finally she, too, laughed.

"I'm ashamed of Polly's language. Old Doctor Henderson told me once that it was as bad for me, a professor, to keep a profane parrot as if I was profane myself; but I might've had a husband that swore, and the minister wouldn't have wanted me to get a divorce for that. Besides, this bird is more knowin' and less troublesome than any man I ever saw."

"I don't mind him swearin' at me," said Brad, recollecting his ferocious argument. "I reckon I ain't much of a picture."

She turned, and for the first time scrutinized her companion.

"Land!" she said reassuringly. "You're all right for a cowboy, away out on the frontier this way. You look like a man, any way, and not like some of them perfumed little counter-jumpers back in Harmon Center."

Brad straightened his slouching shoulders and walked across after the last piece of baggage with a swagger.

that set his spurs jingling. Just as he stooped to pick it up Miss Gordon checked him sharply.

"Leave that basket alone! That's Jeremy Taylor, and he's the toughest Maltese that ever spit. It hurts his feelin's enough to be shut up that way, and if a stranger handled him he'd have a fit. I'll hold him in my lap as we drive. No, you needn't help me. I've been gettin' in and out over wheels alone all my life, and this buckboard is low. I'm glad that you don't use overhead check-reins on your horses. I belong to the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and I'm sorry to see you wear spurs."

They were trotting swiftly over the prairie, and Brad had recovered his faculties sufficiently to give brief answers to Miss Gordon's running fire of questions and observations. Suddenly the man involuntarily checked the mustangs that he drove, and gave vent to a smothered exclamation. He looked in perplexed alarm at Miss Gordon.

"What's the matter? Sick?" she queried.

He pointed to a horseman some distance in front of them.

"Bill Jukes," he answered briefly. "He's promised to shoot me at sight, and he's likely drunk enough not to know whether you're a man or woman. You drive an' I'll get out an' meet him on foot. I'll come back after ye soon, or else—Sykes, a mile north of the station, will bring ye over to Turkey Creek."

As he proffered the reins, Brad already had his revolver out of his belt. She gave an indignant sniff.

"It's likely I'll drive off and leave you to be shot! Give me them reins, and you look to your guns. We'll drive by Mr. Jukes at a pretty good pace, and if you should happen to hurt him—may the Lord have mercy on him!"

Shaking off Brad's restraining touch, and deaf to his expostulations, she put the whip to the ponies, and the buckboard lurched forward on the deeply-cut trail. Jukes was bearing down upon them, his face inflamed with drunken rage. Two or three shots whistled past them. Miss Gordon held the reins tightly and ducked her head. Brad fired repeatedly as they passed, and just beyond them Jukes reeled heavily from the saddle. With an effort the woman brought the team to a standstill.

"I'm glad I fastened Polly's cage on good and tight!" was the first exclamation. Then, noticing a broken check-rein: "I'll get a piece of twine out of my pocket to tie up that strap. Why, your sleeve's all bloody. I do believe that nasty wretch hit you!"

"Jest my arm, I guess, Miss Gordon," replied the man, a little uncertainly; "but I hope—that is, I'm afraid I've done for Jukes!"

They looked back. The outlaw lay motionless by the trail, his bridle rein still over his nerveless arm.

As the rays of the setting sun slanted level across the prairie, a strange procession stopped at Turkey Creek ranch. Miss Gordon still drove, superintended by Jeremy Taylor, who thrust his head through a hole in the lid of his basket and glared balefully at the universe in general. Beside her sat Brad, pale under his tan, with his right arm swung from his neck. At the tail of their chariot, so to speak, was tied the horse of Bill Jukes, and fastened in the saddle, plentifully bandaged and besmeared with blood, was the man himself. His manner was drooping in the extreme, while from an opening in the cage cover Polly bestowed an unbroken succession of choice epithets upon the captive.

Miss Gordon, of them all, was unruffled, and she explained with a cheerfulness that was almost airy:

"Jukes rode down on us, shootin' and swearin' dreadful, and Mr. Merrell had to defend us, of course, so I took the lines. Then we couldn't go off and leave the man layin' there, maybe to die, so we went back, and I bandaged him up, and we brought him along. You can do what you want to with him. I don't reckon he feels very spruce, seein' that he was shot through the lung, an' that Polly's been swearin' at him every step of the way. Mr. Merrell, here, got a bullet in his arm, and has bled consid'able, though it's only a flesh wound."

The gods on Olympus may have been surprised to see Minerva spring full-panoplied from the brain of Jove, but that was the merest ghost of an emotion compared with what the men of Turkey Creek ranch felt when this splendid apparition in dusty black cashmere dawned upon them, with her nonchalant tale of duelry, leading as captive one of the deadliest outlaws of the country. For a minute there were murmurs of exclamations and glances of amazement; and then, as Miss Gordon, bearing Jeremy Taylor, clambered to the ground, Paper Collar Joe, the Chesterfield of the ranch, gracefully advanced.

"Elow me to ersist ye, madam!" he began sweetly, but the visitor waved him back.

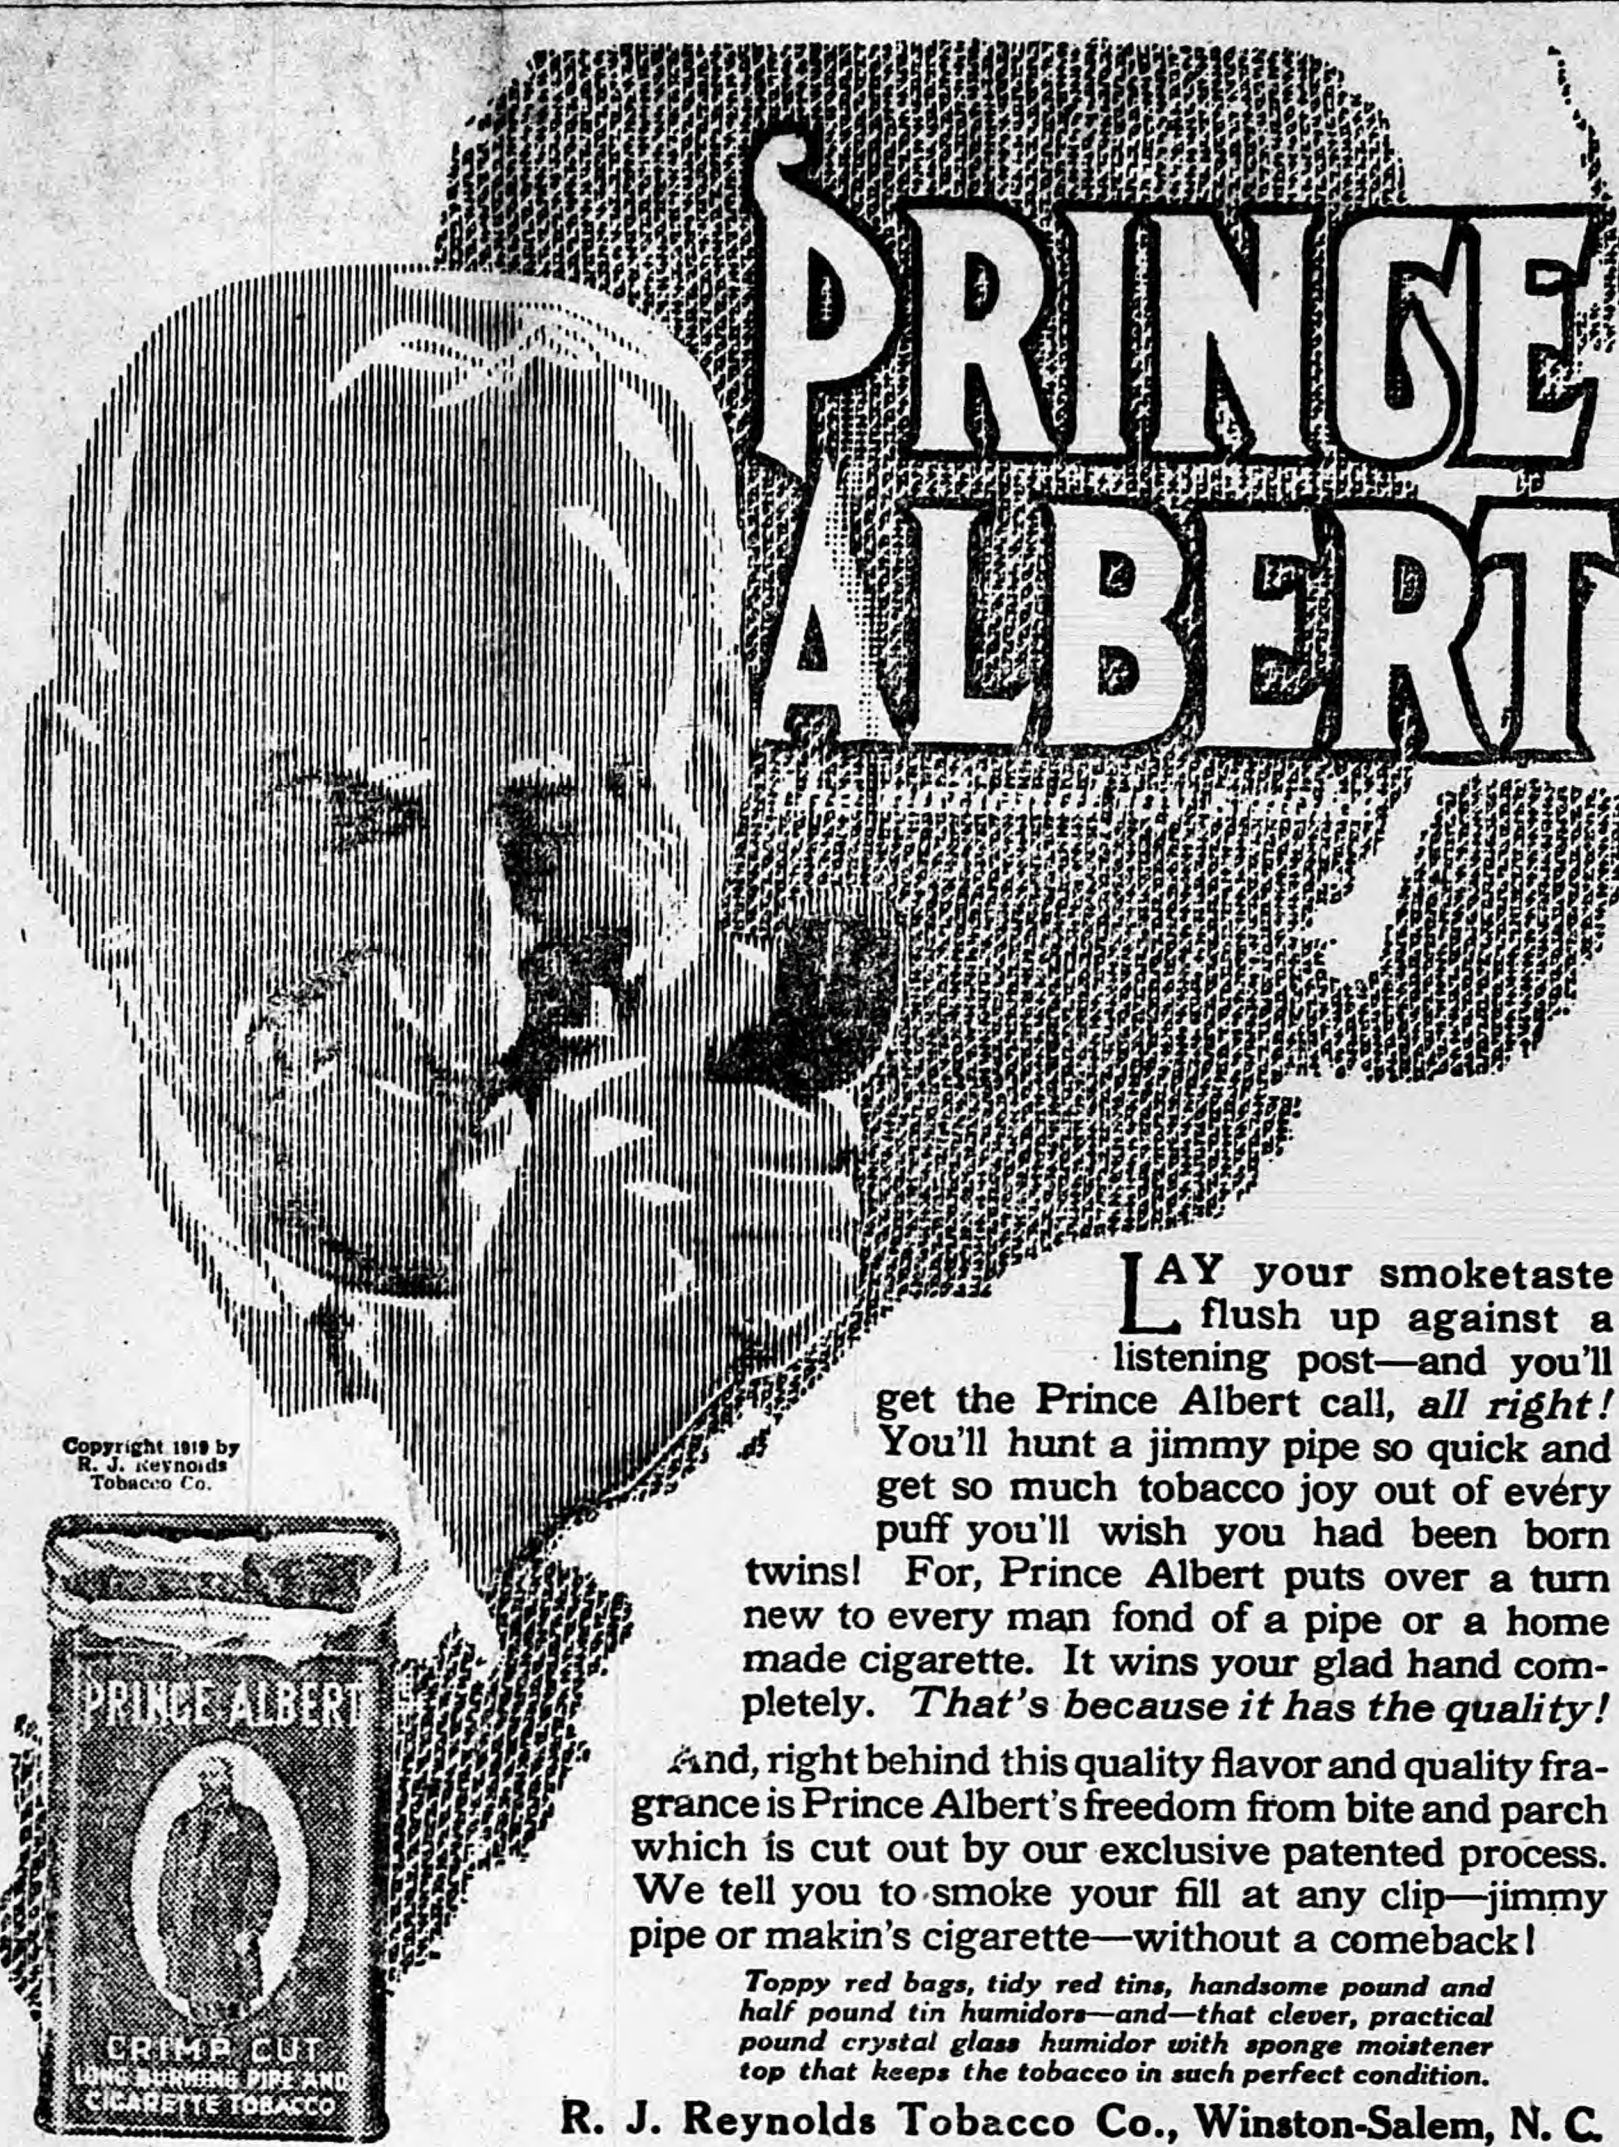

"Don't you touch Jeremy Taylor, my good young man!" she warned. "I reckon he's had all his nerves will stand for one while."

And Brad, being tenderly helped over the wheel, drawled shakily, with a flourish of his hand:

"No use, Joe. It was too good a chance to lose, so I jest improved it. Miss Gordon's going to come up Turkey creek, to my place, an' live with me—the future Mrs. Merrell, gents!"

Polly craned his head around the back of the seat and ejaculated fiercely: "You be blamed!" while Miss Gordon's face flushed a deeper red as she bridled and exclaimed:

"Oh, pohaw! Ain't you ashamed of yourself, Brad?"

No Farm Too Large or Too Small for a Cleveland

CAPABLE of doing a great volume of work; yet so designed and so easily operated that it gets into the corners.

The owner of a small farm can use the Cleveland just as profitably as the owner of a big one. And another advantage is that it works on all kinds of soils. It lays its own track as it goes along and does not pack the soil.

The Cleveland tractor has proven itself able to plow from 8 to 10 acres per day in medium soil, with a two-bottom Oliver plow.

Use it with an Oliver Plow for best results!

Oliver plows were designed especially for tractor service. The rolling coulter and jointer bury all trash and weeds at the bottom of the furrow. The stop device maintains an even depth of furrow. A trip rope enables the operator to control the plow from his seat on the tractor. The plow points enter and leave the ground first, affording good clean furrows clear to the ends of the field.

Come to our salesroom any time and I will show you many other good features of the Cleveland tractor and Oliver plows.

A WAR CAKE

By MARION WORTHLEY.

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"There, you soggy thing, I just knew you would come out horrid," said Marie as she closed the oven door and placed the cake on the kitchen table.

"I have always had bad luck when I want things to be especially good, but it's all the fault of that flour substitute, and mother did want me to use it. Such a day for her to choose to go to town just when Mark and Phil Gordon are coming from camp!"

Marie had never met the Phil Gordon of whom she spoke, but she had seen him several times, and as he was her brother's chum at camp, she was anxious that everything, herself included, should look attractive when he made his first visit; therefore her fretful remarks about a perfectly good war cake.

With a resolution to make the best of what she had, Marie whipped up a frosting for the cake, observed that it didn't look so bad after all, and set it on a chair outside the kitchen door so that the icing would be hard and cool in time for luncheon.

Then she bustled about and set the table for three, as her mother would not be home until late. A hurried glance at the clock showed her that she had just 20 minutes in which to dress before her brother and his chum were due, so with a last look around at the snowy linen, gleaming silver and the glowing chrysanthemums in the center of the table, she gave a satisfied sigh, and went to her room to make good enough better, as Mark used to tell her.

Twenty minutes passed and Marie returned and stepped outside the door to get her cake. What a sight met her eyes! The cake was there, certainly, but perched on top of it, contentedly lapping the frosting, was Spug, a neighbor's cat!

Marie cried out and made a dash for it but the culprit eluded her grasp and sprang off the steps, running for its life. And Marie, thoroughly angry, snatched up the cake and hurried it after the animal, which was nearing the corner of the house.

"You horrid beast!" she cried and stopped short in amazement for around the corner came a young man in khaki just in time to get the cake squarely in the face.

"I win," cried a voice from the other side, and turning quickly Marie saw Mark, who had come from the opposite direction, stop in astonishment.

"Good heavens! sis," he said. "Whatever have you been doing to Phil? Then he burst out laughing and Phil, who had by now disengaged the sticky mess from his face, soon joined him, but Marie, now that her first burst of anger was over, stood dumb with embarrassment. Seeing this, Mark took a hand in the situation and introduced his chum, explaining that they had raced to the door to see which was the nearest way.

By the time the tale was finished Marie had recovered her poise and amid much laughter told them the story of her war cake.

"But," she ended, blushing, throwing a glance at Gordon, "I don't always greet our callers that way, and if you will come in I think we will have our luncheon without the ill-fated cake."

Private Phil Gordon, catching a glimpse of curly, brown hair, bright eyes and elusive dimples, vowed that no matter how she greeted others he would do his best to make her greeting for him always cordial, and some time later, as he found many occasions to call, it proved even more than cordial.

FAMOUS DOGS LONG KNOWN

Breed of St. Bernard Have Been Renowned for Centuries for Their Special Work.

The St. Bernard pass is of historical renown. It connects the valleys of the Rhone and the Dora Baltea. It was traversed by Roman legions thousands of years ago. In medieval times the pass served the armies of conquerors and the bands of mercenaries. Napoleon crossed the Alps at this point in 1800.

The great monastery was built in the middle of the sixteenth century. It was maintained for the relief of travelers who were surprised by snowstorms while crossing the pass. The St. Bernard dogs were used to find the frozen victims of the storms in the snowdrifts. They were specially trained for this work of relief and carried the first aid to the injured in a little basket attached to their collars. These dogs rescued thousands of human beings, many of whom were of historic prominence. And for the first time in the history of this famous monastery the dogs, during the war, had to be slaughtered for want of food.

Boys Who "Make Good."

Probably not 1 per cent of the successful men in the world today gave any evidence of having great ability when they were "kids." The prodigies do not make good. The "exceptional" youngster in school seldom conquers after he has entered real life; but the plain fellow of common sense, slow to learn, slow to become enthused, slow to make companions and slow to give them up—the fellow who sticks to a job until it is finished, that is the fellow who in after life rules and regulates the affairs of this little green ball.—Exchange.

THE SHADOW

By ANNIE A. CURTIS.

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mollie Harrison, with dark curly hair, bewitching brown eyes and known throughout the village of Bend as "the prettiest girl in town," settled herself snugly in the big Morris chair with her knitting in her lap. Had it not been that she, too, knew of her beauty, her personality might have been equal to it. But Mollie, with her lovely clothes, had always considered herself a little above the other girls of her community and associated with but one girl. That girl was Hazel Jaynes, daughter of the only physician in the town.

"Oh, horrors!" said Mollie to her mother, looking out the window, "here comes that Dick Holmes. I suppose he will stay all the afternoon."

Just then Dick rang the bell, and Mollie's mother ushered him into the parlor where Mollie was sitting.

"Why, hello, Dick, I didn't expect you this afternoon," said Mollie. "I have the afternoon to myself, so I decided I would spend it with you," replied Dick. "I have been very busy; I am knitting a sweater." "I suppose it is for that fellow from the city," said Dick, laughing, as he handed her a large box of chocolates. "Thank you, Dick, but I have eaten so many sweets today I believe I will keep these until later," and Mollie placed the box on the piano.

Their conversation was pleasant until Dick said, "Now, Mollie, I would like to talk with you on a very serious question. I love you and ask you to be my wife. I think I have sufficient means to make a home for you. Will you take the question seriously and decide the matter?" Before leaving, Dick invited her to attend a ball with him the following evening.

After Dick left that evening, Mollie had a long talk with her mother concerning Dick's welfare. Mrs. Harrison approved of Dick's company and considered him a gentleman in every way.

"I am going to test his love for me some day, mother," said Mollie, thoughtfully. "Remember, Mollie, that may mean a broken heart," said her mother in a thoughtful tone.

The next evening, Mollie, as light-hearted as a bird, dressed for the ball. Her gown of deep pink with its silver trimmings brought out her beauty as never before. Although there were girls from far and near, Mollie was the loveliest. All went well until Mollie refused Dick the "Good Night" waltz and gave her order to the "fellow from the city." However, Dick in a good-natured way overlooked this and enjoyed the waltz with Martha Irving, whose gentle manner had always pleased him. When Dick left Mollie at her home that evening he asked to spend Friday evening at her home, and to his great surprise, Mollie said she would be pleased to have him. Little did he realize Mollie's deceit and what a reception he would get.

"Mother," said Mollie, "I can never think enough of Dick to marry him. My nature calls for a man of different nature."

"Well, dear, if that is the way you feel, tell Dick so and do not keep him in suspense," replied her mother.

"He will find out soon enough," said Mollie, as she tossed her head pertly. Friday evening, Dick who was as true as his word, entered the yard at Mollie's home and noticed a light in the parlor. What did he see? Could he believe his own eyes? For there was the shadow of Mollie and a masculine figure with his arms around her, embracing her. "It's the 'fellow from the city,'" said Dick, as he turned and walked toward his home. Then Mollie's suitor took off her masculine dress, and the tears rolled down her cheek as she laughed at her success.

"Perhaps he thought your gentleman friend very impolite not to remove his hat, but my hair would have given me away," said Hazel Jaynes.

"Hazel, you're a trump. I bet he will never come to see me again," said Mollie.

About a month later Mollie read the announcement of the engagement of Richard Holmes and Martha Irving. But as yet Mollie has no other suitors, because she is known as "tricky," and she now realizes that her mother was right when she told her she would have to suffer the consequences.

Dialect Was Once Good English.
A dialect is folk-speech, a form of the mother tongue spoken by people of native stock, long settled in the district where it prevails. It is of quite an ancient and respectable descent as the accepted speech. Accident has reduced it to the condition of a local or provincial idiom. It has diverged from the standard literary language, or the latter has diverged from it. For dialects, as is well known, are conservative, and cling to many vocabularies, inflections, syntactical usages and pronunciations which are nearer to the primitive tongue than those which have displaced them in the accepted speech.

THOROUGHLY STOOD WAR HARDSHIPS BEST.

Estimates of army officers on the Allied side show that more than 50,000 horses working on the Allied side were killed and many other thousands were worn to the extent that they lost virtually all of their usefulness. The records show, however, that the thoroughbred was far more able to stand the strain of work and fatigue than the coarser bred horses.

The average life of the thoroughbred in service during the war on the Allied side was 25 days while the quarter bred horse's life averaged but 16 days. The scale ran further down along the line of the more coarsely bred horses with the half-bred averaging but 10 days, the quarter-bred but seven days while the life of the average grade horse was but five days. Thus it can be seen obviously that the thoroughbred did a duty that the poorer bred could not compete with and it was the presence of thousands of these fine animals that helped the Allies to their final success.

The terrible drain through warfare practically depleted the stock of better grade animals as far as the American army was concerned, and the Yanks were forced to depend to some extent on aid in the horse line from their Allies.

Despite the widespread use of motor vehicles in the German war the horse demonstrated that he filled a need that was vital. The horse in many cases was able to go where a motor vehicle, no matter how powerful, could not travel and added to this was his forte in the great follow-up work performed by the Allied cavalry.

America was unprepared when she entered the world war but in many avenues she was able to prepare. Not so far as her horse supply was concerned, however. Army officers are anxious that this condition shall not exist again and hence the Government has announced its intention of encouraging the breeding of horses in every way possible.

The Maryland Breeding Bureau, through this paper, will be glad to answer all inquiries concerning horse breeding and the care and management of stallions and of mares and colts. Address all questions to the editor of this paper who will forward them. The answers will be printed in an early number of this paper.

POULTRY FACTS.

ROOSTER LOWERS EGG YIELD

Interesting Tests Made at New York Experiment Station on Presence of Males in Flock.

The belief used to be general many years ago that hens would not lay without the presence of a male bird in the flock. And even today there are a few people that contend the male stimulates egg production to a greater or less extent. Men who have raised poultry for years still cling to this notion and persist in keeping a lot of males hanging about where only eggs are wanted.

The New York Experimental station made up four pens of pullets, two consisting of pure-bred stock and two of mixed stock. With one pen of each class cockerels were kept, while with the others none were allowed. The cockerels were put with the two pens two months before any began laying. Some pullets in each of the two pens in which no cockerels were put began laying a month before any in the two containing cockerels. The fowls were of the Asiatic breeds and rather persistent sitters. No attempt was made to discourage any of the hens from sitting, and there seemed to be no difference in the relative number of sitters in the contrasted pens. Of the cross-bred pullets the lot without males laid better throughout the season and also during the best egg season. Of the other lot the one without males began laying earlier and did better than the one with males during the first part of the season, but it fell slightly behind for the latter months, though during that period they kept even with the lot which was accompanied by males. It was thought that the vice of feather eating which broke out in this pen had much to do with the falling off in egg production.

From these experiments it would seem that the presence of males has a detrimental influence upon the egg yield. This is also the theory advanced by many in recent years, and it is now pretty generally accepted by prominent egg farmers.

HINTS ON DUCKS AND GEES

Newly Hatched Goslings Weigh About Four Ounces—Turkeys Are Slow at the Start.

A Pekin duckling weighs about two ounces when hatched and should take on weight as follows: Three to four weeks, 1 pound; six to eight weeks, 4 to 4½ pounds; and at ten weeks,

White China Geese.

5½ to 6 pounds. Ducklings should be marketed from nine to twelve weeks of age. After that they take on weight slowly, and it is not profitable to keep them longer than twelve weeks.

Geese grow about as rapidly as ducks. Allowance of course must be made for the original difference in size—newly hatched goslings weighing about four ounces. Turkeys do not grow rapidly at the start, but develop much quicker after three months of age.

POULTRY NOTES

It is hard to fatten a stunted chicken.

Boys and girls should be encouraged to raise poultry.

Wet feet are just as bad for hens as they are for folks.

The hen that lays 150 eggs in a year is doing mighty good laying.

For the city market there is nothing between the broiler and roaster.

Every week there should be a fresh supply of clean, fine earth in the dust box.

No wonder some men's hens never weigh anything. The lice have just about carried them away.

Nobody wants to buy a dirty egg, and the only way to keep the eggs clean is to keep the nests clean.

Middlings and cornmeal wet with skim milk make a fine forcing feed for culs that are to be marketed.

Spraying a chicken house with 1 to 20 solution of lime-sulphur will effectively destroy all mites and lice.

An unruly or greedy rooster has no place in a chicken yard; the dinner table is the safest roost for him.

Well managed poultry is preferable to farm crops in that poultry will produce an income at all times of the year.

There is no such thing as egg laying type. There is but one true test of the layer, and that is by the aid of the trap nest.

VARIED "VOICES" OF FROGS

Man Who Has Studied Subject Asserts He Can Tell Different Species by the Notes.

The first vertebrate creatures to succeed in producing vocal sounds were the amphibians, and, although there has been little variety in their individual repertoires through the ages, they have diligently cultivated their powers. Dr. Frank Overton, in an account of the frogs and the toads of Long Island, describes their distinctive calls and songs. The common toad of Long Island has "a combination of a low whistle and a moan"; the common toad of the mainland utters "a sweet, thrilling whistle"; the spadefoot makes a squawk "like the groan of a deep-voiced man who is having his tooth pulled"; the chorus of the cricket frog "heard at a distance sounds like jingling of small sleigh bells," and close by "like the rattle of small pebbles poured upon a cement pavement." The common tree frog utters a loud, musical trill, and now and then a note "exactly like the sound made by a hen turkey that is calling to her mates." The spring "peeper" whistles shrilly; the leopard frog says "croak" very slowly, "in an extremely low-pitched bass voice"; the pickerel frog makes a soft sound like "a gentle musical snore"; the wood frogs heard at a distance "sound like a flock of barnyard ducks clucking, not quacking"; the note of the green frog "resembles that made by plucking a string on a harp or a bass violin." The bullfrog has a voice that in volume corresponds to the size of his body, which is more than eight inches long. "The sound resembles the bellowing of a bull," Doctor Overton can pick out the species by their voices and the notes.—Youth's Companion.

CARPET WEAVERS OF INDIA

Hard to Imagine Work More Monotonous Than That in Which They Pass Their Lives.

Carpet weavers of India work in a long, narrow shed, straw-thatched, without any walls, open to sunshine and the fitful breeze that stirs the swaying plumelike leaves of the slender palm and coconut trees rearing their tall, proud heads above it. Four or five or even more boys sit on wooden boards on the mud floor in front of the old-fashioned loom, their feet resting in a shallow pit underneath it, dug especially to receive them. In one corner squats a man, his back probably turned to the weavers, his eyes dreamily gazing into space or quite shut, droning: "Three magent, two green, five blue, one orange," and so on. His sleepy sing-song sounds, to one unfamiliar with his language, like the babbling of one talking in his sleep, or like muttered prayers. But he is neither dreaming nor performing his devotions. He is dictating to the boys at the loom the colors of the thread that each respective worker is to twist about the particular strand on which he is working. The lads obey his commands as mechanically as if they were automatons. None of them knows aught of the scheme of the carpet, nor is any of them conscious of the progress that is being worked out on the other side of the carpet from that of which the weavers gaze.

Why Navy Blue.

The blue color so prominent in the uniforms of almost all marines is of hoary origin. Vegetius, in his fifth book on the military affairs of the Romans, traces the origin of this color to the Veneti, an ancient people dwelling near the coast of Biscay and well versed in seamanship. It was customary among them to paint their outgoing ships as well as the masts and sails with a blue color; also their soldiers and sailors wore blue uniforms. According to our author, the Latin word "Venetus," which was both the name of the color and that of the people, points to its origin. From the Veneti the custom was adopted by the Romans. Thus the son of Pompeius, after defeating Caesar's fleet in a naval battle, wore the navy blue, although entitled to the purple. The Veneti were subdued by Caesar after a severe maritime war in 56 B. C.

Keeping a Diary.

Every once in a while we read of men who have kept diaries for years and years—since babyhood or longer. What a weird idea to be locked up in that relentless manner with the past! Only of course they don't really. They say they did, but they lie about it.

We saw one of these diaries once. Six months of it were filled with two entries repeated over and over: "Saw May," "Did not see May." The last entry was, "Married May."

That was the only sensible diary we ever saw, and we haven't a doubt in the world that it was all faked up afterward to jolly along May.—Los Angeles Times.

"Gude Tidins o' Muckle Joy."

The Scottish American reprints the story of the first Christmas in dialect from "The New Testament in Braid Scots," a translation by the Rev. William Wye Smith. Here are sample verses (Luke II: 10-12):

And the angel said, "Be na gliff'd: for I bring ye gude tidins o' muckle joy to the hall warld! For thar is born t' ye this day, in Dauvid's town, a Saviour, wha is the Anointit Lord. And here is the token for ye; ye se fin' the bairn rowt in a barricoat, lyin' in a manger."—The Outlook.

DAIRY

BETTER BREEDING HELPS

In dairying large production and profit go hand in hand. Breeding furnishes the most economical way to obtain large-producing cows. The purebred bull, with generations of high-producing ancestors back of him, must be used for breeding, and only the best heifers from the best cows should be chosen to be the dams of the next generation.

CERTAIN BULK IS NECESSARY

Table Gives Classification of Common Feeds as to Bulkiness—Palatability Important.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A certain bulk is necessary in the grain mixture given to the dairy cow to obtain the best results. When heavy feeds are used, some bulky ones should be included to lighten the mixture, since it is probable that a certain degree of bulkiness aids digestion. Some of the common feeds are classified as to bulk in the following table: Classification of Common Feeds as to Bulkiness.

Bulky.	Gluten feed.
Alfalfa meal	Rye
Corn-and-cob meal	Barley
Bran (wheat)	Heavy or Compact.
Dried brewers' grains	Buckwheat middlings
Dried distillers' grns.	Cottonseed meal
Oats, ground	Linseed meal
Malt sprouts	Coconut meal
Dried beet pulp	Peanut meal
Medium	Gluten meal
Corn meal or feed	Wheat middlings
Hominy

Palatability is of great importance in successful feeding. The best results can not be obtained with any feed which is not well relished by the cow; consequently any unpalatable feed to be used should be mixed with those that are appetizing.

In making the grain mixture care should be exercised that too large a quantity of either constipating or laxative feed is not included. Cottonseed meal, for example, is decidedly constipating and should be fed with silage or roots. For ordinary feeding in most parts of the United States not more than one-third of the grain should be cottonseed meal. In some sections larger quantities have been fed, but this practice is not recommended. On the other hand, linseed-oil meal, because of its distinctly laxative action, should not be fed ordinarily in greater quantities than 1½ pounds a day.

MAKE TEST OF YOUNG BULLS

Some of Best Breeders Loan Out Animals to Dairymen in Community to Try Them Out.

Some of the best breeders follow the practice of lending out a number of the young bulls to dairymen in the community merely for the purpose of trying them out. Of course, many of these bulls prove to be mediocre, but when a valuable one is found he is the property of the lender and will repay any expense involved in his discovery. A sire that has proved his worth always is in demand and can be sold readily if the public knows of his whereabouts. The purchaser can be found by advertising.

FATAL WEAKNESS OF DAIRY

Use of Sires Whose Ability to Improve Production Is Unknown Cause of Trouble.

A fatal weakness in the dairy business is haphazard breeding, that is the use of sires whose ability to improve dairy production is unknown. Of course this cannot be known until some of his daughters come into production. And it cannot then be known with any degree of accuracy unless performance records are kept upon the cows and their daughters. Up to this time reliance has been placed upon the ancestry of a bull almost entirely, with the stress laid upon the fact of registration.

TUESDAY MORNING, MAR. 4, 1919

Washington society note: Monsieur W. Wilson, of Paris, is spending the week-end in this city.

It is claimed that since the war stopped the work of the Red Cross has only been going new.

A great many people are going to observe Lent as usual this year by giving up the things their neighbors like to do.

Save regularly. Put your money into Thrift Stamps. Convert those into War Savings Stamps. Then watch your money grow.

It is claimed the school children should be taught more courtesy. It's a mighty handy faculty for a live kid when he's caught hooking fruit.

The bakers claim they are willing to restore the five cent loaf, but some ructions and never satisfied people claim it will look more like a biscuit.

The girl's theory of welcoming the soldiers is to get a lot of swell new clothes and show them what they have got to support one of these days.

After starting a war that killed 10,000,000 people the Germans feel that a terrible crime is committed because they don't get better on their bread.

Do your full duty by holding the War Savings Stamps after you buy them. The government receives no benefit if you immediately demand redemption. Buy all you can. Keep what you buy.

With the kind of service now being given, the people who send stuff by parcel post wish they had sent it by express, and the people who ship by express feel they made a mistake in not shipping by parcel post.

Continue to lend Uncle Sam your money. The security is the safest in the world. The investment is profitable. Take all the War Savings Stamps you can. Be ready to subscribe when the Victory Liberty Loan is offered.

Co-operative stores are urged as a means of meeting the cost of living. Good idea, but neither they nor any other kind of store can succeed merely by opening up the front door and sitting on a cracker box until the people come in.

When the people kick on the price of bread, the government can sell its wheat at market price and pay the balance in taxes; and when the people begin to kick on the taxes, then the government can sell the wheat for what it paid and let the price of bread go up.

TWO SYSTEMS OF COUNTRY LIFE

Soldiers returning from France speak of the wholly different system on which country life is organized in that country. They tell of the common tendency in France for the farmers to build their homes close together in compact villages. That gives the social minded French a pleasant community life. The women in particular enjoy the intimate life of the village and avoid the common isolation of the American farm home. The men go out by day to their outlying fields.

This idea of organizing a rural community has been much less common in this country. The majority of farmers settle on their own soil at considerable distances from community centers. The farmer wants to live as close to his farm as possible. He would begrudge the time it would take to go back and forth several miles to his fields. If he has farm animals under shelter he wants them close by.

The American farmer, and his wife even more, made a sacrifice in so far as they departed from this old world custom and fixed their homes in the center of their fields regardless of whether they had near neighbors or not. They thereby lost some of the conveniences and pleasures of community life.

Whatever sacrifices the farmers thereby made through such isolation are being well repaid. Their life close to the soil established their work on a better economic foundation. Now the farm telephone has brought them nearer together. As they have advanced in prosperity the automobile has come and made intimate community life possible even to isolated people. So today they have achieved an economic stability far greater than exist with the Old World farmer, while in addition they have acquired the facilities and privileges of community life.

THE MOTOR TRADE

The motor companies are returning to a peace time basis and they promise a very wonderful development in the next few years. Great as has been their growth out of nothing in a few years the possibilities of the motor in daily life are only partly developed. There are greater things to come in this department of modern progress.

The motor industry feels it did more to win the war than any other line of manufacturing business except steel. A marvellous product of trucks, airplane motors, etc., was turned out.

The motor industries are revolutionizing transportation and agriculture. The vast supply of pleasure cars which they turn out for the diversion of the people is only one side of this great activity. Motor trucks are going to make great changes in country life and agriculture. They promise a vast new equipment to the transportation system for all products. The young man who enters the motor industry goes into a line of business that will have a tremendous development and offer many good opportunities.

THE VALUE OF REPUTATION

It is amazing how a business reputation will last once it becomes thoroughly established. A man walked into a drug store the other day and bought a cake of shaving soap. He remarked afterward that it had just the same familiar trade name as the first cake he ever bought for his downy beard thirty years before. During that time no doubt hundreds of rivals had tried to get a foothold. But the established line, if kept up and well pushed, will hold its line against a field of competitors a long time.

In most cases where some noted article has maintained its hold that way for a period of years, it will almost invariably be found to have been accomplished by a consistent policy of advertising. If you make no special effort to push an article it will gradually fade out of the stores. But the established lines figure on a certain percentage of publicity every year and they know they have to keep it up.

A good will of that kind has such a tremendous cumulative value, showing better returns constantly for a given amount of publicity work, that the returns of publicity should not be figured merely on the results shown in the first years of promotion. The owner of the proposition should be satisfied for a few years with a moderate return if he is building up a business that by and by is going to become a permanent possession.

The same policy applies both to nationally advertised goods and to a retail store. The returns from efforts to increase sales and in particular of newspaper publicity, are not to be measured as some merchants think, with the sales that come in from day to day as the particular notice of that date is read. For every sale made immediately as a result of advertising, many future sales will follow as the result of the reputation the advertising establishes. So when a merchant figures on the profit of advertising on his immediate returns only, he fails to count as worth anything the tremendously valuable good will he is developing. Cast your bread upon the waters and it shall return to you after many days.

SAVING IDEAS, HOW AND WHAT TO SAVE

An increase of production over consumption is essential to provide to the country and to the individual the capital with which, best to solve personal, national and international peace problems. Everyone, within his means, should buy to provide for his real necessities, and each one must wisely define for himself what are those present necessities. At the same time everyone should make provision for future necessities in the form of savings.

Those who save by going without things they would like to have but which are not really vital at the moment to their efficiency which includes real happiness, should do so with the conviction, as a British savings committee put it, that "they are asked only to postpone their expenditures and meanwhile to lend their surplus earnings to the nation." By so doing, moreover, they will refrain from using up much labor that is needed for what might be called staple production—the production of food and everyday necessities. It is clear that if the well-to-do use their purchasing power to the utmost they will compete with their poorer neighbors for a limited supply of the necessities. There are probably many who have not gained higher wages because of the war and who therefore feel more keenly the war-time rise in the prices of their necessities.

Some postponement of expenditure in the non-necessary field should be of economic help to those who find living over-costly and if the money so saved is invested in War Savings Stamps, or government bonds, it will both assist the economics of production and help the government carry out its plans and show a healthy social consciousness.

A Timely Suggestion

The next time you have a cough or cold try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is pleasant to take and you are sure to be pleased with the relief it affords. This remedy has a wide reputation for its cures of coughs and colds.

WHAT A WELCOME IT WILL BE

No man or woman in the city of Baltimore or any part of the State will need urging to induce them to join in the welcome which is planned for the Maryland units of the Twenty-ninth Division when they return home. Every one of these units and every man in every one of these units is dear to the people of Maryland. They hold a peculiar place in our hearts—something like that which the first-born holds in the heart of a mother. When they come marching through our streets they will realize, if they have never realized it before, what they mean to Maryland; how tender, how deep, how enduring a place they hold in her pride and love.

We have had many popular outpourings of enthusiasm and patriotic fervor in Baltimore since April, 1917, but the welcome that will be extended to the Maryland units of the Twenty-ninth Division bids fair to eclipse any war or peace demonstration that the town has ever witnessed. The difficulty will not be in getting up a welcome, but in keeping it within bounds. If we all gave way to our feelings, these returning heroes would be in greater danger of being killed with kindness than they were of being killed by bullets when they were making history along the Meuse.

They deserve the best that we can offer them in the way of appreciation and honor. In all her history Maryland never sent forth a more magnificent body of young men, and none of which she has had greater cause to be proud. The One Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry and the other Maryland organizations that form part of the Twenty-ninth Division have made a record of valor and achievement that constitutes one of the most memorable and brilliant pages in the annals of a State glorious in its wealth of heroes.

Welcome them! We'll give them just about the warmest welcome that any homecomers ever got anywhere on this old globe. When we get through with them they will have no doubt as to where they stand in the esteem and admiration of the folks they left behind them. But this welcome should not end with a few days of hurrahing, of marching and public and private receptions. It should include an organized and systematic scheme that will provide a certain business opportunity for every Marylander who is demobilized. Let us unite in the aim of the shield of our loving kindness as they take up the shield of peace again, as they covered us with the shield of their splendid valor in the bloody and trying days in France.—Baltimore Sun.

Why Colds Are Dangerous

You are often told to "beware of a cold," but why? We will tell you: Every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for the more serious diseases. People who contract pneumonia first take cold. The longer a cold hangs on, the greater the danger, especially from the germ diseases, as a cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs of consumption, diphtheria, scarlet fever and whooping cough. The danger of rest, of the cold, the less the danger of contracting these diseases. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a great reputation as a cure for colds and can be depended upon. It is pleasant to take.

Lillian Ford vs. Virgil Ford

No. 3231 Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing Lillian Ford, a vinculo matrimonii, from her husband, Virgil Ford, and to award the custody and control of their two children, Granville and Dorris, to the petitioner, with a monthly allowance for their support and maintenance. The Bill states that Lillian Ford married Virgil Ford on August 8th, 1912, with which she resided in Somerset county till February 1917, when he abandoned and deserted her; that two children were born by this marriage, viz: Granville, a boy 5 years old, and Dorris, a girl 2 years old, who are now being cared for by their mother at their grandfather's home in Somerset county; that ever since this marriage the petitioner has behaved herself as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife toward the said Virgil Ford, but notwithstanding this, the said defendant has on various days and at times since the said marriage, to wit, between the 1st day of April, 1917, and the filing of this bill, committed the crime of adultery with one Bertha Murdock, in the city of New London, Connecticut, and elsewhere, and with diverse other lewd and abandoned women in the city of Chester, Pa., and elsewhere, whose names are to the petitioner unknown; that your oratrix has not lived or cohabited with the said Virgil Ford since she has discovered his said adulteries; that the said Virgil Ford is a non-resident of this State.

It is thereupon this 12th day of February, 1919, ordered by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Somerset county once in each of four successive weeks before the 14th day of March, 1919, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 18th day of March, 1919, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Sarah Whittington vs. Peter S. Whittington

No. 3233 Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce, a vinculo matrimonii, for Sarah Whittington from her husband, Peter S. Whittington, with alimony, attorney's fees and costs. The Bill, in substance, states that plaintiff married defendant on September the 11th, 1901, with whom she resided in Somerset county for at least over four years ago, and that one child, viz: Edna, a girl 17 years old, who now lives with her mother in Somerset county, was born by this marriage; that though the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, defendant has abandoned and deserted plaintiff without just cause or reason, and has declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that ever since the said marriage plaintiff has behaved herself as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife toward the said defendant, but notwithstanding this, defendant, on or before the 17th day of March, 1919, has committed the crime of adultery with one Hattie Coulbourne, in Somerset county and elsewhere, as well as with diverse other lewd and abandoned women in said county, whose names are to plaintiff unknown, and plaintiff has not lived or cohabited with defendant since she discovered his said adulteries; that said defendant owns and possesses property consisting of a house and lot, situated in land in Asbury district, Somerset county, granted to defendant by deed from Thos. S. Hodson and wife, made the 28th day of April, 1906, worth about $500, and claims alimony, counsel fees and costs of suit; that the said defendant is a non-resident of this State.

It is thereupon this 18th day of February, 1919, ordered by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Somerset county once in each of four successive weeks before the 14th day of March, 1919, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 17th day of March, 1919, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Higher Patriotism Must Float Loan

"It will take patriotism, but a higher type of patriotism than was required in the delirium of war to float the Fifth Liberty Loan," says Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Glass refuses to believe that this one remaining and most important piece of war work should be dealt with as a cold-blooded proposition only—merely as an investment. On the other hand, he believes that the spirit of the American nation will take care of the Fifth Liberty Loan as it did the four preceding loans. Answering the question as to what shall be the basis of the appeal of the approaching loan, whether patriotism or its investment feature, Mr. Glass says: "It is inconceivable folly to suppose that this Government or any other Government may, under the circumstances, float a bond issue of $6,000,000,000 without appealing to the spirit and patriotism of the American people, which has so superbly asserted itself in the exigencies we have met. We have a right to invoke the patriotism of the people, and today it takes a higher type of patriotism to serve the nation than was required in the delirium of war. Upon this I shall confidently rely and I here predict that the response will be in no measure disappointing the expectation of those who set a high estimate upon the fine spirit of the American nation."

Lenten Services

The Lenten services will begin at St. Andrews Church on Wednesday morning with a celebration of Holy Communion at 7.30. Morning Prayer and Penitential office at 10.30 and evening prayer at 4.30. All these Lenten services will be held in the Sunday School room. The Sunday services will be in the Nave of the church.

February Weather

The weather report for the month of February as compiled by Mr. James R. Stewart, co-operative observer of Princess Anne, follows:

Maximum temperature, 69 degrees on the 14th; minimum temperature, 19 degrees on the 11th; total precipitation, 2.62 inches. Clear days, 11; partly cloudy, 10; cloudy, 7. Light frosts on the 3rd, and 18th, killing frosts on the 1st, 6th, 7th, 11th, 18th, 19th, 20th and 27th. Hail on 15th and 21st. Auroras on the 27th. The prevailing wind was northwest.

Tomato Seed For Distribution

County Agent C. Z. Keller will distribute free to all farmers having wilt disease of tomatoes on their farms, a small package of wilt resistant tomato seed of the Stone and Greater Baltimore canning varieties. This strain of seed has been obtained through the Extension Service of the Maryland State College, who have conducted a number of trials in obtaining this wilt resistant strain. Farmers in this county who obtained this strain of seed last year were very much pleased with the results and in many cases saved their own seed for this season.

Horsely Strawberry Plants

I found this plant in the spring of 1915, while it was in fruit. It looked better to me than anything I had ever seen in the way of early berries, and I had some of the plants set out and have fruited them every year since. They bear full every season and seem to be frost proof. The plant is a vigorous grower, has plenty of foliage, stays green through the winter. It blossoms well under the foliage which protects them from frost, and so far there has not been a sign of rust. Last spring (1918), which was an unfavorable season on all varieties of berries, is the first year I had any to ship, and they picked more than 140 crates per acre on the average. They ripen a few days earlier than the Klondike and Missionary. The berry is a large bright red, and runs large through the season. It has a fine flavor and is a hard, good carrying berry. While I do not claim them to be fall bearers, I had lots of berries on old patches last fall, but none on the new patches. They sold well under the block; some loads sold as high as $7.05 per crate. I had them sell as high as 35c per quart in New York. The brokers all like them, and some have spoken for as high as 25,000 plants already. All I shipped on the market I shipped to W. O. & H. W. Davis, New York, the following is what they have to say about them: "At the time the Horsely berry is ripened, we consider it a very fine seller. It is a good carrier and sells well on account of its size. At the time this berry is ripened large berries are scarce on the market. They should bring 8c to 10c more than any other berry. It is a valuable berry and a berry that fancy trade looks for. If I were planting berries, I would plant heavy of this variety." I have them for sale this season, one to four thousand, $5.00 per thousand. Five thousand and above, $4.50. First come first served, and the cash orders filled first. I am now looking orders. I also have Klondike, Missionary and Gandy for $2.50 per thousand. J. C. HORSEY, Marion, Md. Adv.

MODERN PROGRESS.

A noted English parliamentarian passed back his thick white mane of hair, stroked his white beard and said in broad Scotch accent to a New York reporter:

"The rise in world wages has been great, but the rise in world prices has been greater. We have had progress, but it has been progress in the wrong direction."

"A tourist was traveling in your far west. As he inspected an Indian encampment he said to his cowboy guide:

"And are these Indians progressing?"

"Betcher life," the cowboy answered, taking a fresh chew of tobacco. "Betcher life they're progressing. All their medicine men are patent medicine men now."

Large Enough.
Salesman—Carpet. This way, madam. Are your rooms of good size?
Customer—We live in a flat.

MOURNFUL NUMBERS.

Barlie—What are "mournful numbers," dad?
His Dad—Figures in bills for Easter bonnets, my son.

What a Father Wrote.
I remember, I remember, the house I was born,
The little window where my son came creeping in at morn.

Modern Conditions.
"Now, this is a witch's test," said the young man who was the life of the Halloween party, "and in performing it I must pretend to ride a broomstick."

"I'm sorry, but we haven't a broom in the house," faltered the hostess. "Would it work with a carpet sweeper?"

Candor No Man Ever Exhibited.
"Now that you have made $50,000,000, I suppose you are going to keep right on for the purpose of trying to get a hundred millions?"
"No, sir. You do me an injustice. I'm going to put in the rest of my time trying to get my conscience into a satisfactory condition."

Just a Game.
"Didn't I tell you what I'd do if I caught you drinking those cocktails again?"
"Honest, dad, I'm just playing a Halloween game."
"A Halloween game?"
"Yes; ducking for cherries."

Scarce as Men's Teeth.
Mr. Crimsonbeak—That bachelor friend of mine is looking for a partner for his joys and sorrows.
Mrs. Crimsonbeak—Well, it seems to me he's a long time about it.
"Yes; you see, he's looking for a salient partner."

WAITING.

Visitor—That new acrobat is very tight on his feet.
Vaudeville Manager—Reckon he is. He's jumped three contracts so far this season.

Well Supplied.
What if the rain
His top-piece wets?
He won six lids
On 'lection bets.

Easy.
"If I were dealing with those English snuffboxes who go on hunger strikes I'd soon break up the scheme."
"How would you do it?"
"Whenever they started anything of that kind I'd slip a plate of pickles inside the cell door."

Mostly Wind.
"What kind of a man is Squire Simmons, anyway?"
"Well, I'll tell you. You've seen them snow storms along airily in the winter, when there's a good deal of wind, but not much sleighing? That's the sort he is."—Judge.

ON THE FUNNY SIDE

Optimistic.
First Hobo (at early dawn)—I dreamed last night that I found a quart bottle of alcohol. Just as I removed the cork and raised the neck to my lips a rooster crowed somewhere and I woke up. Dhat's hard luck.
Second Hobo—Not so, pardner; in the first place probably it was wood alcohol, and, secondly, we may be able to locate dat rooster and have him for breakfast.

Valuable Connections.
"You treat your cook as if she were a privileged character."
"As long as she is here we expect to be well taken care of."
"In a culinary way?"
"Not entirely. She has a brother on the police force, another brother drives a coal truck and her sweetheart is our iceman."

What's a Tip for, Anyway?
Noah (bossing the ark building)—Day dreaming on the job again, son? What's the idea?
Japhet—With the inside information we've got, dad, can't you think of some way we can beat the market for a few thousand simoleons?—Buffalo Express.

Even It Up.
Jones—I understand that you have promised that one job to twenty different men if you are elected.
Politician—True. But as I have but one chance in twenty of being elected they all stand as good a chance as I do.

Diffidence.
"Do you dictate your speeches to a stenographer?"
"No," answered Senator Sorghum. "My stenographer is a grammarian and a logician. I'd rather write 'em out myself and try 'em for the first time on an easier audience."

TRUE.

He—Much is forgiven man because he's a man.
She—Yes, and a woman's much condemned because she is a woman.

Then She Laughed.
His freshness she could not abide.
She lashed him with her tongue.
"How dare you call me 'Be'!" she cried;
He quailed and murmured "stung!"

Its Use.
"Did you read where some American firms in China are encouraging their younger employees to study Chinese?"
"Well, it must be one advantage to be able to read your laundry ticket."

A Misdeal.
Weary Traveler—Say, my friend, there's no meat in this sandwich.
Waitress—No?
Weary Traveler—Don't you think you'd better give that pack another shuffle and let me draw again?

His Business.
"So Hack gave up his part. Wasn't it a good one?"
"No; he expected to be quite prominent in the cast, but they gave him the role of a cook, and he found he was to be only a feeder."

Their Way.
"It wouldn't do for farmers to get control of the national finances."
"Why not?"
"Because from force of habit they would always be watering the stock."

An Objection.
"Pop, a pugilist fights in rounds, doesn't he?"
"Sure, son."
"Then how can he ever put up a square fight?"

The Retort Courteous.
He—I was going to offer a penny for your thoughts, but perhaps they're not worth it.
She—They're not. I was thinking of you.

Joint Ownership of Purebred Sires Enables Herd Improvement at Minimum Expense.

Dairymen who would like to use purebred bulls to improve their herds but who cannot afford to purchase such animals should investigate the advantages of a co-operative bull association. These organizations are formed by farmers for the joint ownership, use and exchange of purebred bulls. The purchase price and cost of maintenance are distributed according to the number of cows owned by each member, thereby giving the dairyman an opportunity to build up his herd at a minimum expense. The organization also helps its members to market dairy stock and dairy products, to fight contagious diseases of cattle intelligently, and in other ways to assist in improving the dairy industry.

The typical co-operative bull association is composed of from fifteen to thirty farmers, who jointly own five bulls. The territory in which these farmers live is divided into five "breeding blocks," one bull being assigned to each block. As many as fifty or sixty cows may belong to the farmers in each block, and the bull in the block should be kept on a conveniently located farm. To prevent inbreeding each bull is moved to the next block every two years. If all the bulls live, and if all are kept until each has made one complete circuit, no new bulls need to be purchased for ten years. In this way each member of the association has the use of good purebred bulls for many years, at a cost of only a small part of the purchase price of one good bull—usually less than is invested in a more inferior bull owned by individual dairymen.

In a survey conducted by the United States department of agriculture on 1,219 farms in eight districts in Iowa, Minnesota and Massachusetts in which there were no associations, it was found that there were 817 bulls, having an average value of $76. Had the owners of these cheap bulls been properly organized the same investment would have purchased the necessary bulls of an average value of $283. In one association having more than 100 members the original cost of good purebred bulls to each member was only $23. When questioned regarding the value of co-operative bull associations, 150 farmers in Maryland, Michigan and Minnesota estimated that the use of bulls belonging to the organization increased the value of the offspring in the first generation from 80 to 80 per cent, with an average of 65 per cent.

The selection of the bulls for an association is one of the most important considerations. A good purebred bull will make rapid and marked improvement in the herds, and the association interest increase in proportion to the improvement obtained. If a poor dairy bull is used the milk production of the members' herds is sometimes reduced, the interest is lessened, and these conditions may lead to the breaking up of the association. Success in the operation of an association depends a great deal on the care that is used in its organization. Dairymen contemplating forming an association should consult the local county agent, write to the state agricultural college or to the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture at Washington for advice and assistance. The farmers' bulletin previously mentioned will be found of great value along this line, particularly the suggestions which are given in connection with the constitution and by-laws.

ATTRACTIVE CONTAINERS

The use of neat and attractive containers for butter, standardized to a uniform size and style, is highly desirable both for local and foreign markets. Carelessly packed butter has not only a poor appearance but also usually brings a lower price.

AGITATION OF COLD CREAM

Sometimes It Will Whip and Expand Until Churn Is Full and Butter Will Not Form.

Sometimes when cold cream is agitated in the churn it will whip and expand until the churn is nearly full. In this condition butter will not form because the cream cannot be sufficiently agitated. When a low temperature of the cream is the cause of difficult churning the trouble may be easily corrected by raising the temperature.

All Smoking Tobaccos are Flavored

"Your Nose Knows"

The Encyclopaedia Britannica says about the manufacture of smoking tobacco, "... on the Continent and in America certain 'sauces' are employed ... the use of the 'sauces' is to improve the flavour and burning qualities of the leaves."

Your smoke-enjoyment depends as much upon the Quality and kind of flavoring used as upon the Quality and aging of the tobacco.

Tuxedo tobacco uses the purest, most wholesome and delicious of all flavorings—chocolate! That flavoring, added to the finest of carefully aged and blended burley tobacco, produces Tuxedo—the perfect tobacco—

"Your Nose Knows."

Try This Test: Rub a little Tuxedo briskly in the palm of your hand to bring out its full aroma. Then smell it deep—its delicious, pure fragrance will convince you. Try this test with any other tobacco and we will let Tuxedo stand or fall on your judgment—"Your Nose Knows."

MARYLANDER AND HERALD

REMEDY FOR NUMEROUS ILLS

As You May Remember, an Old Song Says "It's a Very Good Plan to Forget It!"

When a piece of American slang shows vitality and effective use for four or five years, it is safe to say that fairly universal human quality lies within it, the Rutland (Vt.) Herald observes. Such is the terse and characteristic Americanism, "forget it!"

When annoyed to the point of exasperation by trivial people—people who gnaw the nerves and scarify the disposition—what a balm and healing lies in the magic philosophy "forget it!"

When it seems borne in upon us like a heaven-directed mission to go attiling windmills, what a solid, common-sense ring there is to the inward mentor which whispers, "forget it!"

When bored by a stupid editorial, incensed by an intolerant sermon or swindled by a silly play, how much better to stifle the seething wrath and "forget it!"

When victimized by a petty rascal, the loss not adequate to the necessary energy for redress, "forget it!"

When abused by a drunkard, fool or silly child, "forget it!"

When betrayed by a friend so deeply that the heart changes and the pleasant faces takes on falsity, "forget it!"

When Old Man Bile poisons the disposition and life is saffron instead of blue and fair, take a pill and—"forget it!"

How many wrongs are worth remembering? How many annoyances are worth noticing? How many trivialities are worth attention? The pit of oblivion swallows them, once we can take our philosophy in both hands to "forget it!"

And if the reader takes life so seriously that this convenient nullity offends, the remedy lies close at hand—"forget it!"

USED BY OLD GREEK SURGEON

Instruments Employed Two Thousand Years Ago Much Like Those of Modern Day.

American surgeons realize now how much a rubbish heap may teach a man. A complete set of surgical instruments was found recently by men digging in a scrap pile in Colophon, an ancient Greek city. In spite of the fact that they were used 2,000 years ago there is not much difference between them and the implements that are poked into the anatomy of a modern man. In the set are small knives with handles of decorated bronze, a metal which the Greeks thought was especially healing. There are also several pairs of forceps, one of them used to extract the heads of arrows and lances from wounded warriors. Another instrument is for drilling holes in the bones of the skull, another for cauterizing the flesh. Besides these are vessels for cupping and bleeding, a small covered bronze box for delicate instruments, a slab of stone for mixing certain drugs, and a pair of scales which still balance perfectly. In addition to these there is the handsome purple glass beaker, probably the drinking cup of the unknown surgeon who made use of all these instruments.

Packing House By-Products.

The by-products in the packing house industry may be divided into two classes—the edible and the inedible. The inedible constitute the external covering (hair, horns, hoofs and hides), some of the offal, and the bones. From these are prepared a great variety of substances, some of which have developed into enormous industries in themselves, such as leather, soap, glue and fertilizer. The last mentioned represents the ultimate utilization of packing house waste. For example, in the manufacture of buttons, combs, knife handles and spatulas from the horns and hoofs of cattle and sheep and the hoofs of hogs the waste resulting from the preparation of these articles was at one time thrown away, but it has been found that by treating such material with sulphuric acid the nitrogen which it contains becomes available as a fertilizer.

From the Morning Fields.

No other writers speak to us with the authority of those whose ordinary speech was that of our translation of the Scriptures; to no modern is that frank unconsciousness possible which was natural to a period when as yet reviews were not; and no later style breathes that country charm characteristic of the days are the metropolis had drawn all literary activity to itself, and the tramping feet of the multitude had banished the lark and the daisy from the fresh privacies of language. Truly, as compared with the present, these old voices seem to come from the morning fields and not the paved thoroughfares of thought.—Lowell.

Fine Compliment.

A great bishop not long ago paid a high tribute to the work of the fraternal society. In fact, he paid fraternalists a compliment that we ought to appreciate:

"I plead for the time when the tie of the Christian church shall be as binding on men as the tie of the lodge. All honor to the fraternity that grips its men and makes them potent in good works for humanity's uplift. The fraternities are putting shame to our cheeks as church men, when we think of their widely diverging lines of social service."—Modern Brotherhood.

DAIRY

DON'T FEED ROUGHAGE ALONE

Leguminous Hays, Such as Alfalfa, Clover, Soy Bean or Cowpea Hay Are Favored.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The best kind of dry roughage to be fed to the dairy cow, in connection with corn silage or roots, are leguminous hays, such as alfalfa, red, crimson, or alsike clover and soy bean or cowpea hay. While corn silage is an excellent feed, it is not a balanced one, as it does not contain sufficient protein and mineral matter to meet fully the requirements of the cow. The leguminous hays, in addition to being very palatable, have a tendency to correct this deficiency. They are also one of the best and cheapest sources of protein. One or more of these hays can be grown on any farm, and in addition to their value for feeding purposes, they improve the soil in which they are grown. Hay from Canada field peas, sown with oats to prevent the peas from lodging, also makes an excellent roughage.

Corn stover, coarse hay, etc., also find a good market through the dairy cow. This class of roughage is low in protein, however, and when it is used the grain must be richer in protein.

No positive rule can be laid down as to the quantity of dry roughage that should be fed, but about 6 to 12 pounds a day for each cow, in addition to silage, will be found to be satisfactory in most cases. When the dry roughage is of poor quality, such as coarse, weedy hay or a poor grade of cornstalks, a large portion can often be given to advantage, allowing the cow to pick out the best and using the rejected part for bedding. With this quantity of dry roughage the cow will take, according to her size, from 25 to 50 pounds of silage. This may be considered as a guide for feeding to apply when the roughage is grown on the farm. When everything has to be purchased, it is often more economical to limit the quantity of roughage fed and increase the grain ration.

While a cow's stomach is large and her whole digestive system is especially designed to utilize coarse feeds, there is a limit to the bulk that she can take. This limit is below the quantity of roughage that it would require to furnish the nutrients she must have for maximum production; that is, a ration may contain the proper proportions of protein and carbohydrates and still be so bulky that she cannot handle it. She therefore should have some grain even though the roughage in itself is a balanced ration.

FIRST-GRADE MILK

The five essentials for production of first-grade milk are: (1) Healthy cows and men, (2) clean cans and pails, (3) covered milking pails, (4) cooling milk to 55 degrees Fahrenheit or below within an hour after production and holding it as low as possible until delivered.

LACK OF ICE AT CREAMERIES

One Concern Turned Back to Farmers $2,700 Worth of Food Products—Many Other Losses.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One large creamery, which buys about 350,000 gallons of sweet milk and cream per year, returned to farmers last year nearly $2,700 worth of these food products on account of lack of proper care which caused souring, churning and off flavors.

The records of another plant show that nearly 50,000 gallons of sour milk were received in one year. Insufficient cooling caused most of these losses, which are duplicated many times all over the country during the heated season.

TREATING COWS FOR GARGET

Afflicted Animals Should Be Milked Regularly—Hands of Milker Should Be Washed.

Cows that are subject to garget should be milked regularly and clean. In some cases it may be advisable to milk oftener than twice a day. The hands of the milker should be washed after milking a cow that is affected with garget before milking another cow, to prevent carrying the germs. The practice of milking out an affected cow on the ground is a bad one, for the germs are spread in this way to other cows.

WYANDOTTE IN FAVOR

Excels in Ability to Be Pushed for Rapid Growth.

Breed Ranks About With Plymouth Rocks as Layers, but is More Active and Has Less Tendency to Overfatness.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.) The Wyandotte is smaller than the Plymouth Rock, but an equally rapid grower. It is generally claimed that the White Wyandotte will stand pushing for rapid growth the best of any breed.

As layers the Wyandottes seem to rank about with the Plymouth Rocks, but being somewhat more active and having less tendency to overfatness they should be credited with a slight advantage.

The Rhode Island Red breed constitutes the latest addition to the list of popular American breeds of chickens. This variety differs from the majority of breeds in claiming for themselves an origin based solely on practical considerations.

They are partly of Asiatic blood, but in their selection, which extends over a period of fifty years, attention has been paid to rapid growth and egg production, so that the breed today more nearly resembles the Leghorns than does either the Plymouth Rock or Wyandotte.

One fundamental difference still exists that shows the Asiatic origin of the red chicken, they being persistent sitters.

The Rhode Island Reds do not reproduce themselves with certainty as to shade of color or style of comb, but in practical points they may be considered a distinct and well-established breed.

In the eastern part of the United States are many farms keeping from one to several thousand hens and devoted exclusively to the production of poultry and eggs for the market. The use of any breed on such farms should be good witness of its utility. The tabulation of the breeds used on such plants as are shown to the writer gives the following results:

White Wyandottes occupy first place, being used on about twice as many plants as any other one breed. Single-comb White Leghorns, Barred Plymouth Rocks and White Plymouth Rocks follow next in order. Rhode Island Reds, Light Brahmans, Buff Wyandottes, Buff Plymouth Rocks, Brown Leghorns and Black Minorcas are the other breeds in use. Leghorns, Minorcas and Rhode Island Reds are used on the egg farms. Light Brahmans and Plymouth Rocks on the roaster and capon plants, while the broiler and combination plants use Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes or Rhode Island Reds.

Cause of Gapes. Gapes are caused by a worm-like parasite that becomes attached to the lining of the windpipe. Wet and filthy grounds are a prolific cause. Isolate the infected birds and spade up the yard with slacked lime once a week. Remove the parasites from the windpipe with a feather dipped in turpentine. Put a little turpentine or camphor in the drinking water.

Limit on Eggs. One good mother hen can brood twenty chicks and even more with ease, while she cannot successfully cover more than thirteen. Thus it is well to set two hens at the same time and give one the chicks from the two hatchings. The other hen can thus cover thirteen eggs again and raise her own little family when these are hatched.

Grit in the Ration. A hen cannot digest her food properly without plenty of grit in her digestive apparatus. Keep a good supply of it always on where she can have free access to it, for, no grit, no digestion; no digestion, no eggs; no eggs, no dividends from the direction of the henhouse.

APPROPRIATE MARCH.

Patience—Some wedding, was it? Patrice—It certainly was. You see Peggy had six men for ushers and she had been engaged to everyone of them at some time or another.

"Odd, wasn't it?" "Yes, and she wouldn't let the organist play Mendelssohn's Wedding March." "No?" "No, no. She had him play 'Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here!'"

Broadened Ideals. "Crimson Gulch has become one of the most peaceable towns on the map." "Yep," replied Cactus Bill; "most of the boys have been in the war and they have jes' about as much respect for one of these private shootin' scraps as a regular poker player has for penny ante."

How It Happened. Medical Officer—And what is your ailment? Aviation Recruit—The roof of my mouth is sunburnt, sir. Medical Officer—The roof of your mouth? Aviation Recruit—Yes, sir, I've been watching the airships.—Judge.

Pleasure to Hear It. "See here, wife, Mrs. Gad says you said I was a second hand husband. What do you mean by such a remark?" "Now, don't get angry, dear. I meant you were like the second hand of a watch—so awfully quick about getting around."—Florida Times Union.

BAD BREAK.

Miss Oldgirl—I've just turned 25. Mr. Joak—Gracious! You don't mean that you are 52?

Bill Badger Sez. "Since Kate and me got married we have fit and fit like all tarnation; My leading to the altar Kate led to a constant altercation."

Constructive Criticism. "What do you understand by constructive criticism?" "My idea of constructive criticism," replied Senator Sorghum, "is a line of discussions showing why a man ought to vote for me instead of against me."

Attentions. "We are all more or less appreciative of a little notice from the great." "Sometimes," replied Miss Cayenne. "But just now most of us are perfectly satisfied if we can get a little notice from a salesman in a store."

How About You, Neighbor? "When I attend an entertainment and notice on the program that there are to be 'selections,'" observed the near-cynic, "I always feel a little doubtful of the good taste of the fellow who did the selecting."

The Heir Lip. Gallery God (to newly arrived youth, who is obstructing the view)—Down in front! Down in front! Newly Arrived Youth (fingering his upper lip)—No such thing! It's a mustache!—Cartoons Magazine.

GOT ONE IN.

Mrs. Henpeck—Both of my other husbands had more sense than you. Mr. Henpeck—Oh! I don't know. They both married you, too.

Good Dope. "Make this your creed." Said wise old Dan; "Advice won't feed A hungry man."

Her Majesty Serene. "There is never an angry word spoken in your home." "No one dares lift his voice. The cook might think we were talking to her."

Hard to Get. "Sir, I demand to get satisfaction for this insult." "Well, I don't see how you could get one more satisfactory."

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF SENTRY

How South African Farmers Repel Invasion of Their Corn Fields by Bands of Baboons.

Apocryphal of a statement in the newspapers that the baboons in South Africa were easy victims of the Spanish "flu," very few people realize how human these animals are. They are very like men in some respects, observes a writer in London Answers. For instance, a troop of baboons—for it has been proved that they nearly always go about in large companies—always post a sentry. He is placed in some prominent position, so that he can give immediate warning in the event of any hostile attack.

The baboon's cry somewhat resembles a German "Hoch!" shouted through a megaphone, and it is possible to talk to them by means of it. A baboon is said to be able to count up to two, and not beyond that; and as they come in large numbers and carry off the ripe mealies, steps have to be taken to repel them. And so, when the mealies get ripe, three men walk into the field with their guns and lie down.

After a time one of them gets up and goes out and the baboon sentry counts—One. Later on another goes out, and as the sentry only counted two men coming in, he concludes that there is nobody left in the field and accordingly gives the signal, whereupon the whole troop swarms over the fence and begins to gather the corn. As soon as they are near enough the third man shoots them down with a repeating rifle, and if he is a fairly good shot their numbers are greatly diminished.

SUCCESSFUL WAR ON WEEVIL

Australian Grain Growers Used Poison Gas to Combat Deadly Enemy of Their Crops.

The weevil is a well-known curse to the grain-growing farmer. He is a member of a very large group, rejoicing in the family name of curculionidae. There are some other members which live to spoil nuts, some which ravage apple orchards, while others make war upon clover and legumes generally. One variety is threatening the very existence of the cotton plantations of the southern states, another lives to make difficult—at times impossible—Egyptian agriculture. The weevil's eggs are laid in immature grains and the creature develops itself through the larva stage at their expense. Wherever grain is taken, the weevil goes along and so discovers new countries for its habitation. Everywhere it is at home, and grows with the growing grain. Australia has suffered, and its unsold grain accumulated through the war years, during which the length of the voyage made it impossible to obtain transportation to Europe, was found to deteriorate through its ravages. But our fellow citizens on the other side of the world are notoriously hard to beat, and set to work vigorously to war against these restless grubs. A leaf was taken from the German book, and the use of poison gas was resorted to with apparently deadly effect.

The Hottest City. The city of Hyderabad, on the great Sind desert of India, has the reputation of being the hottest place in the world, having a shade temperature of 127 degrees during the summer months! Even the natives find it hot—and that is saying something. In order to cool their houses as much as possible, the people make use of curious ventilators very much like those on shipboard, "setting" them so as to convey a breeze to the dwellers in the hot rooms below. Every residential building has several of these queer airshafts leading down to the principal living rooms, and especially to the bedrooms. Even so, it is practically impossible, during the terrible heat of summer, to get to sleep until two or three o'clock in the morning, and then one only gets a couple of hours' rest, as the rays of the Indian sun are especially strong early in the morning, and soon raise the temperature again to an unbearable extent.

Papal Guard a Picked Body. Service in the papal guard has become an hereditary honor in many prominent families in the cantons of Zurich and Lucerne, handed down from father to son through generations. Its requirements are of the highest, and few military organizations have as strict discipline. Every candidate for the corps must be a Swiss citizen, at least 5 feet 8 inches tall, unmarried, in good health and free from all bodily disfigurements. He must present his baptismal certificate, a certificate or pass from his home and a testimonial of good character from his parish authorities. After one year of good conduct the cost of his journey from Switzerland to Rome is refunded.

How Flying-Fish Fly. The popular notion that flying-fish beat their "wings" is a mistake, if one is to rely upon the results of studies of these fish by an authority, Capt. Barrett Hamilton.

It appears that the wings are not true organs of flight, but rather play the part of a parachute or an airplane. The whole motive power is supplied by the tail, which acts as a propeller, and the vibration or quivering of the wings in the air currents and their occasional shift of inclination are not phenomena connected with the propulsion of the fish in its aerial flights.

Construction And Sanitation

After several months service with the Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., Mr. Robert C. Walker, of Ocean City, Maryland, has resumed his engineering practice in Washington, D. C., with the announcement that he will continue to devote special attention to create construction, town-surveying and the design of modern sewage disposal plants. His original modification of the Imhoff system of sewage disposal by sedimentation, bacterial purification and final oxidation of effluent, eliminates dangerous cesspools and provides an ideal sanitary improvement at moderate cost where no regular town sewer-system is available.

One of Mr. Walker's first designs of this character was in 1917 for the U. S. Naval Academy Dairy at Gambrille, Maryland, while another for the Dominican College at Ocean City was installed last summer in spite of war-time construction difficulties and is now in fully successful operation along with many private residential plants in Maryland and Virginia, all approved by State Boards of Health.

Has Had Stomach Trouble For Seven Years

Theodore Sanford of Fenmore, Mich., has had stomach trouble for seven years and could not eat vegetables or fruit without pain in the stomach and restless nights. By taking Chamberlain's Tablets he is now able to eat vegetables or fruit without causing pain or sleeplessness. If troubled with indigestion or constipation give these tablets a trial. They are certain to prove beneficial.

Government To Utilize Motor Cars

Edwin F. George, of Washington, D. C., chief of the motors branch of the Purchase, Storage and Traffic Department of the army, said the Government had completed plans for the utilization of every motor car, motor truck and tractor now in the service, and that in no event would machines be placed on public sale.

To a representative of Motor World, Colonel George said the War Department would first decide upon the number of machines required for the permanent army organization. The remaining trucks will be turned over to the Post Office Department, the Department of the Interior and other Government departments. What trucks then remain would be placed at the disposal of each State for agricultural or National Guard purposes.

ONE WEAK SPOT

Many Princess Anne People Have a Weak Part and Too Often It's The Back

Many people have a weak spot. Too often it's a bad back. Twinges follow every sudden twist. Dull aching keeps up, day and night. Backache is often from weak kidneys. In such case a kidney medicine is needed.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys. For backache and urinary ills. Princess Anne people recommend the remedy.

Mrs. H. B. Wherrett, Extension Antioch Ave., Princess Anne, says: "I had been troubled nearly all my life with kidney complaint and had severe backaches at times. If I did anything that caused me to stoop over, I suffered very much with severe pains through the small of my back, especially when I straightened up. At times I could see little, black specks and fiery flashes in front of me. During the last attack, I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I have had no further trouble. I cannot recommend this medicine too highly."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wherrett had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

MARYLANDER AND HERALD

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF PRINCESS ANNE AND SOMERSET COUNTY

SOMERSET HERALD. " 1888

PRINCESS ANNE, MARYLAND, MARCH 11, 1919

Vol. XXI No. 31

HISTORY OF BANK OF SOMERSET

Established June 4, 1889—Has Had Faithful Service By Its Officers

The decision by the directors of the Bank of Somerset to provide modern quarters for their activities indicates better than anything else the remarkable growth of that institution, which is coincident with the prosperity and development of this community.

The history of the Bank of Somerset, replete with interesting achievements, certainly warrants up-to-date facilities, and the remodeling now being undertaken by Hoggson Brothers cannot help but add to the bank's increasing importance to Princess Anne and to Somerset county. When the bank was established on June 4th, 1889, with an initial capital of $25,000.00, it began business with a quiet determination to succeed and at the end of the first year there were approximately 300 depositors. Today the bank serves between 3,200 and 3,300 depositors, its capital having been doubled and the last reports indicate surplus and profits of $177,000.00.

The bank has had exceptionally faithful service on the part of its various officers. The cashier, Wm. B. Spiva, entered the bank as a clerk way back in 1889, having to his credit a clean record for nearly thirty years. During that period he has risen from clerk to assistant cashier and finally, in 1900, assumed his present important position. During its entire period of organization there have been but four presidents, the present incumbent, Joshua W. Miles, having been elected to office in 1900. The present vice president, H. Fillmore Lankford, was also elected in the same year.

The Bank of Somerset is looking forward with lively interest to resuming business once more in its former quarters, which will be completely transformed under the direction of bank planning experts who are giving careful consideration to the work in hand.

Chautauqua Starts Today

If you wish to be entertained attend the opening performance of the Chautauqua this (Tuesday) afternoon and each afternoon and night, including Thursday, and witness the three days' program from start to finish, at the Auditorium.

The McKinnie Operatic Company, in their rendition of the last Act of "Il Trovatore" and the comic opera, "The Sleeping Queen," will be enjoyed by all. Ross Crane will give a wonderful program. Miss Louise Holmberg is one of the best fiddlers in the country. Miss Myrtle Jordan is a pianist of exceptional ability. Misses McDonough and Eagleston are two of the best entertainers ever on a Chautauqua program. The lectures by George Lawrence Parker and George H. Turner you cannot afford to miss. They are both eloquent speakers, with vital subjects.

Boys To Organize Pig Club

County Agent C. Z. Keller is enrolling a number of boys in this community in a registered pig club. The banks of Princess Anne will finance the boys who desire to obtain registered pigs. The boys in the vicinity of Pocomoke are now engaged in raising registered hogs and the work is meeting with great success. The same plan of registered pig club work will be conducted this season in this vicinity.

All farm boys between ages of 10 years and 18 years are eligible to enter this club work. Enrollment should be made at once as only a limited number of boys can be handled. Write or see your bank or county agent for particulars in regard to this registered pig club.

Civic Club Elect Officers

The Civic Club met at the Washington Hotel last Wednesday afternoon and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Columbus Lankford; vice president, Mrs. J. T. Taylor, Jr.; treasurer, Mrs. Robert F. Duer; secretary, Mrs. Alvah N. Gibbons. The next meeting will be held at the same place on the first Wednesday in April, at which time arrangements will be made for "Clean Up" week in Princess Anne.

Bishop Adams Coming

The Rt. Rev. Wm. F. Adams will visit Somerset Parish Sunday morning, March 30th. In the afternoon of the same day, he will officiate at Grace Church, Mt. Vernon, at 8 o'clock. A class is in course of preparation for the visitation to St. Andrew's.

Take care of your dollars now and they will take care of you later. Put them into War Savings Stamps and watch them grow.

Tomato Growers Organize

A meeting of tomato growers was held at Venton Friday evening which was attended by a large number of farmers of that community. A Tomato Growers' Association was formed and the following officers were elected: President, M. G. Mordoff; vice president, Upshur Anderson; secretary, M. O. Baltz; treasurer, Page Toadvine. A meeting of the association will be held on Wednesday, March 12th, at 7:30 p. m., in the hall. All members of the association and farmers of the community are urged to be present at this meeting.

A meeting of tomato growers was held at Pocomoke City Saturday evening, the 1st instant, in the High School. A large number of tomato growers in that immediate vicinity were present. County Agents Oswald and Keller, of Worcester and Somerset counties, spoke on organization and co-operation among farmers. Mr. George Kemp spoke on the work of the Tomato Growers' Association. Mr. John Eppie, banker of Pocomoke, gave a splendid talk in which he advised better business methods be used by farmers, and that they figure on the cost of producing crops on the farm. He also strongly urged the farmers to co-operate and form an organization for their own interests. The tomato growers present formed an association and elected officers.

Mrs. Hester Pollitt Dead

Mrs. Hester Pollitt died at the home of her son, Mr. Calvin H. Pollitt, near Loretto Station, at an early hour last Thursday morning, aged 81 years.

Funeral services were held at her late home last Friday afternoon, conducted by the Rev. Henry E. Spears, rector of Somerset Parish, and the interment was in All Saints' Church cemetery at Montic. She is survived by two sons (Messrs. Calvin H. Pollitt, of Loretto, and Jefferson Pollitt, of Wilmington, Del.) and several grandchildren.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS

Wilson Sharply Rebutted A Group Of Senators Last Tuesday

Congress adjourned at noon last Tuesday in the midst of a Republican filibuster in the Senate that killed a long list of important measures. Among the bills that failed was one appropriating $750,000,000 for the railroad administration, without which, some administration leaders say, the railroads must be returned to their owners before the middle of April.

There was no turning back of clocks. Democratic leaders realized the situation was hopeless, and the gavils ending the long, great war session and the Sixty-fifth Congress actually tapped at noon.

Just before adjournment, President Wilson, in his Capitol office, authorized final notice to the Republicans that their efforts to force an immediate extra session had failed; that he was unshaken in his determination not to call Congress until his work at the Peace Conference was done. The President's statement follows:

"A group of men in the Senate have deliberately chosen to embarrass the administration of the government, to imperil the financial interests of the railway systems of the country, and to make arbitrary use of powers intended to be employed in the interest of the people."

"It is plainly my present duty to attend the Peace Conference in Paris. It is also my duty to be in close contact with the public business during a session of the Congress. I must make my choice between these two duties and I confidently hope that the people of the country will think that I am making the right choice."

"It is not in the interest of the right conduct of public affairs that I should call the Congress in special session while it is impossible for me to be in Washington because of a more pressing duty elsewhere, to co-operate with the houses."

"I take it for granted that the men who have obstructed and prevented the passage of necessary legislation have taken all of this into consideration and are willing to assume the responsibility of the impaired efficiency of the government and the embarrassed finances of the country during the time of my enforced absence."

Failure of the Army appropriation bill and other military measures to pass before Congress adjourned leaves the War Department in a "difficult, but not a serious situation," said Secretary Baker. No immediate shortage of funds to care for the troops is in prospect.

Mr. Baker said his greatest regret was that failure of the Army reorganization bill meant that a number of men of the war-time Army must remain in the service for a longer time than would have been necessary otherwise.

Victory Postage Stamps On Sale Soon

Victory postage stamps, a new three-cent issue, to commemorate the successful conclusion of the war, will be on sale shortly throughout the country. In announcing the issue the Postoffice Department said the supply would not be sufficiently large to replace the regular three-cent stamp and postmasters would sell victory stamps only on request.

The new stamp bears the figure of Liberty Victorious, helmeted and with a sword in one hand and scales in the other. The whole design appears upon a shaded panel, with American, British, French, Belgian and Italian flags draped for the background. In size it compares with other special stamps and is wider and shorter than the ordinary stamp. It probably will require several weeks to supply requisitions from all postoffices.

Washington B. S. Invited To Tome

Arrangements are now well under way for the annual Interscholastic Track Meet to be held at Tome on May 17th. Provisions are being made to accommodate the largest crowd and greatest number of contestants ever gathered there on a similar occasion. It is the purpose of the committee in charge to so arrange the many events that schools of all classes may have equal opportunities.

Washington High School has been invited to attend the meet this year. Until the time of the meet, all schools will be regularly furnished with the necessary information for contestants, the prospects of the meet, and the development of the plans.

U. S. Lends $178,000,000 More

The Treasury last Friday established new credits of $18,000,000 for the Czech-Slovaks, $40,000,000 for Belgium, $100,000,000 for France and $20,000,000 for Italy, making a total of $38,441,657,000 credits for all the Allies to date.

The Czech-Slovaks' aggregate credits now amount to $35,000,000, while Belgium has obtained from the United States $388,145,000, France $2,517,477,000 and Italy $1,405,000,000.

Liberty Bonds brought victory. Victory Bonds and War Savings Stamps bring the boys home.

STATE SUMMER TRAINING SCHOOL

Fifth Annual Session Will Convene At Ocean City June 23rd

The fifth annual session of the State Summer School for the training of public school teachers will convene at Ocean City on Monday, June 23rd, and an unusually large attendance of students is anticipated. Following the precedent established last summer, the session will continue only five weeks instead of six, closing on July 26th, with regular school sessions on Saturdays. This arrangement affords the same number of school days as the regular six-weeks session, and at the same time saves the students attending the school considerable expense. As there is no tuition charge to Maryland teachers, the entire cost of attending the session should not exceed $50 and might be made even less.

The Ocean City Summer School is one of the State Summer School centers conducted under the direction of the State Board of Education, for the purpose of providing the necessary professional training for the public school teachers of the State, and enabling them at a minimum of expense to fulfill the requirements of the new educational law in respect to the securing and renewing of teachers' certificates. Other summer school centers are established at Towson and Frostburg. It is apparently the idea and policy of the State Board to have each of these Summer School centers so organized in respect to courses and methods of instruction that it will fit the distinct needs of a particular class of student-teachers, the special function of the Ocean City school being the training of beginning teachers who have had no previous professional training, and also teachers in service who have been employed in emergencies to fill vacancies during the past two years, and whose academic and professional preparation are below the minimum requirements of the law for regular teachers' certificates. At the session in 1918, methods and plans were perfected and put into operation which were designed to produce the most practical results in getting ready for efficient service the particular classes of teachers named above, and from all accounts an unusual degree of success was achieved by the instructors in charge. A checking up of results during the present school year shows that with only one or two exceptions the 1918 students of the Ocean City school are making a splendid success of their work in the various rural schools of the state to which they were assigned in September last. The Director, El. Clarke Fontaine, and his associates, all of whom have been re-appointed for 1919, are already making extensive plans for the coming session, which it is expected will even improve upon and exceed the results of last year.

The school last summer had 60 students, which was about double the number of the previous year, and exceeded by 50% any previous enrollment in the school's history. The enrollment for 1919 is expected to reach 100 students.

France And Her New Problems

"America has social and industrial problems, but they cannot be compared with those which France is facing today," says Miss Emma Chapin, an industrial secretary for the Y. W. C. A. in France.

"Before the war women sewed in their homes instead of in a big shop. Much of the silk worn in France was not made in great mills, as in the United States, but in homes where the looms have been handed down from generation to generation."

"Mme. Herriot, wife of the Mayor of Lyon, and Mme. Jussier have done a marvelous work in giving employment to many women still in their homes, but the situation still looms large."

"French women are out in the industrial world and must be recognized, and the problem will never be solved by shutting one's eye to the truth and saying that they ought to go back home. Men in one industry are urging equal wages for women, thereby expecting to get their jobs as they feel that employers would rather hire men than women. Women over here have learned independence and they will stand together for equal treatment in the industrial world."

Daylight Plan March 30th

The summer daylight schedule will be again inaugurated at midnight, Sunday, March 30th. Congress adjourned last Tuesday without any attempt to repeal the act which makes compulsory the setting forward of clocks one hour at midnight on the last Sunday in March.

Opposition to the measure was said to have originated with the farmers, who contended they could not adjust themselves to the new order of things, but trade bodies, industrial enterprises and the general commercial interests having found the daylight saving plan of inestimable value arose from a state of lethargy and petition confronted the national law-makers in opposition to a repeal of the act.

WILSON HURRIES BACK TO FRANCE

President Confident People Will Back Nation's League

President Wilson sailed last Wednesday on his second voyage to France, determined, as he said in his Metropolitan Opera House speech in New York Tuesday night, not to "come back till its over over there." The transport George Washington, bearing the Presidential party, left the Hoboken, N. J., pier at 8.15 a. m.

The Chief Executive's departure was marked by a simplicity which contrasted with the noisy demonstration given him when the George Washington carried Mr. Wilson from American waters on his first journey to Paris last December.

Wednesday there was only a small crowd of persons assembled at the army transport pier. To these the President, hat in hand, and Mrs. Wilson waved farewell greetings as the George Washington swung out into the lower Hudson River, while the band on the transport Great Northern, berthed near by, played "The Star-Spangled Banner." Standing on the bridge, the President and his wife saw the American flag raised on the staff at the stern and heard the booming of the Presidential salute of 21 guns. As the transport turned her nose toward the Statue of Liberty, an escort of destroyers got under way. The harbor was nearly deserted, because of the strike of marine workers.

The President and Mrs. Wilson had driven directly from the Metropolitan Opera House to the pier after the President had delivered his speech on the League of Nations Tuesday night. Former President Taft appeared on the same platform. Both received enthusiastic receptions.

"Every statement that I made in my New York speech and every word I said before leaving Washington will be understood by the people, if not by certain politicians," said the President before the vessel sailed.

The preliminary peace treaty will be the first business taken up by the Peace Conference when the President reaches Paris, he let it be known. The Germans and the other Powers associated with Germany will then be in a position to participate in the final negotiations.

The President seemed tired, but was cheerful, and smiled as he spoke. He said he was well pleased with the general situation, and was supremely confident the people of the United States will continue to back up his endeavors at the Conference.

"The responsibility of those who blocked necessary legislation in Washington during the closing days of Congress is certainly known to the people, and that responsibility does not have to be shared," he continued.

The President expressed the belief that the work of the Peace Conference will be concluded sooner than he thought possible immediately after his departure from Paris. The program of the Conference has been advanced much more rapidly than he had previously thought possible.

About 3000 tons of cargo, consisting of supplies for the army in France and Germany, is being carried on the George Washington.

$300 a Pound For Wool

Wool at $300 a pound is a good price even in these days of inflated costs. But that is the price that the White House clip brought according to the last returns, which have just been made through the Red Cross.

When the White House flock was clipped several months ago, the wool was wrapped in small sacks and auctioned in various parts of the country for the benefit of the Red Cross. There was ninety-six pounds, and it brought a total of $30,000, final returns show.

The twin lambs born to Mrs. Wilson's favorite ewe on February 22, have been named Martha and George Washington and are being brought up on the bottle by the White House shepherd-in-chief, "Bill" Reeves.

Next Speaker Of The House

The Republican caucus nominated Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts for Speaker of the House of Representatives. This insures his election, the Republicans having a majority in the new Congress. "I have reached," said Mr. Gillett, "the goal of my ambition, a happiness which I suppose comes to few men."

He has represented the Springfield, Mass., district in Congress since 1892. No Republican member of the House has served longer continuously, though "Uncle Joe" Cannon has served more terms. Mr. Gillett's record of service, however, is equalled by that of Henry A. Cooper, the radical Republican member from Wisconsin, and exceeded by that of William A. Jones, a Democrat from the eastern shore of Virginia.

Money spent is money gone. Money invested in War Savings Stamps is working for you day and night.

Senator France's Filibuster Killed State Appropriations

In his filibustering activities during the last days of the session of Congress, Senator France talked to death over $3,500,000 of appropriations for Federal public works and the maintenance of Governmental institutions in Maryland. Practically $2,000,000 of this sum was to have been expended in the construction of permanent buildings at Baltimore, Annapolis, Hagerstown, Cumberland, Easton, Elkton, Ellicott City and Laurel, so that every section of the State is made to suffer and the Congressmen from every district had their efforts brought to naught by Mr. France.

Through the defeat of the Naval Appropriation bill, which was on the Senate calendar and assured of passage, if the flow of oratory of Senators France, Sherman and Knox had not blocked all legislation, salaries of civilian professors, chemists and other experts, as well as the wages of hundreds of superintendents, foremen and others, skilled as well as unskilled laborers, at Annapolis are now tied up in the limbo of things to be considered at some future date.

Baltimore city's $1,000,000 appropriation for repairs and additions to its long since outgrown and now cramped and crowded Postoffice Building was among the items that died during the filibuster. Another bit of dead legislation wherein the city comes off a loser was that carrying $176,000 to be expended by the Government in buying from the city the old quarantine station near Hawkins Point. This property is already being operated under direction of and supervision by the United States Public Health Service, but the city has yet to receive payment for it.

In the general view of wrecked hopes there stands out only one thing which the last Congress provided for Maryland. This is the legislation which Mudd, of the Fifth district, got through authorizing Secretary of the Treasury Glass to advance to the Washington, Brandywine and Point Lookout Railroad $50,000 and take the road as security.

In the line of public works and the construction of Government buildings within Maryland, Indian Head was listed for a share of the $200,000 appropriation for the Bureau of Ordnance which was included in the Naval Appropriations bill. Permanent improvements at the Naval Academy, which were knocked in the head by the choking off of the Naval bill and the Deficiency Appropriation measure, totaled $496,000. Of this sum $200,000 was for a new power plant, now seriously needed to supplement the heating and power equipment of the institution, which is entirely inadequate. Another item, providing for permanent construction at Annapolis, was $271,000 for the completion of the additions to Bancroft Hall. Twenty-five thousand dollars for road building on the Government reservation was also killed.

All of these appropriations would have become available, had they been passed, on July 1st. Whether or not, even should an extra session be called in June, the bill could be got through in time to prevent serious embarrassment to the administration of the institution is a question.

Tie Vote In Maryland Senate

Peter J. Campbell, President of the State Senate, last Thursday received the resignation of William N. Andrews as State Senator from Dorchester county. Mr. Andrews was elected to Congress from the First district last November, and his term began on March 4. His letter of resignation from the State Senate bore that date. Mr. Campbell replied, accepting the resignation, and notified Governor Harrington.

As a result of Mr. Andrews' resignation the State Senate would be evenly divided between Democrats and Republicans if a special session of the Legislature were called. In the last session there were 14 Democrats and 13 Republicans. Two of the Democrats, J. Dawson Williams, of Montgomery county, and Richard A. Johnson, of Howard county, died recently, reducing the Democratic membership to 12. Mr. Andrews' resignation reduces the Republican membership to the same number.

Soldiers Want Tobacco

A special cablegram from General Pershing's headquarters last Wednesday asked that 150,000 pounds of chewing tobacco be sent to the troops in the Army of Occupation in Germany. The shipment will go forward by the shortest route to Rotterdam, and then up the Rhine to Coblenz. A million cigars sent recently to overseas forces and additional cigar contracts to the amount of $750,000 have been made.

The Plugger

By VINCENT G. PERRY

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Malcolm McDougall was officially known as the city editor of the "News," but any title from office boy to managing editor could have been applied to him—not that the "News" was a small one-horse paper, but Malcolm was a 50-horse power plugger in the true sense of the word. Work! Why, 8 o'clock in the morning to midnight were easy hours for him! Nothing was done right unless he had a hand in it. No matter how well a story was written Malcolm could always find a place that needed attention. No wonder reporters didn't stay long on the "News." Although Malcolm was a nice fellow personally, he absolutely wouldn't allow another man to bring forth his individuality or originality.

Of course, with a man like Malcolm at the head of affairs the "News" got along very well with a full staff of cub and one senior man. Larry Montrose was that senior—a senior on a junior's salary, it must be confessed. Just why he put up with Malcolm and refused the offers of other papers was hard to explain, but Larry smiled at the world good-naturedly and wrote columns for Malcolm to retouch every day, even though sometimes the retouched stories were not as good as the original ones.

There was one department that Malcolm had not broken into—the woman's page. It had long been the province of the "News" that that would be the next domain he would besiege, but no one had really believed such a thing possible. Sure enough, when Miss Lorene, the editor of the page, was taken ill Malcolm threw aside the editorial he was writing for the editor and commenced to whip her page into shape. When Larry came upon him he was in the midst of a pile of "Lonely Wives" and "Longing Sweethearts" letters.

"Ye fishes, man," Larry exclaimed, "what next will you be doing? Why, can't Miss Lewis do that?"

"Why, Miss Lewis has not had quite a year's experience," came contemptuously from Malcolm. "This page is too popular a feature of the paper to have spoiled by a bungler. You'll have to write your own heads and shoot that copy right down to the composing room. I should go over it, but perhaps it will do."

Larry smiled. It was the first time he had been permitted to have his original story set up. As he watched Malcolm writing replies to silly letters he smiled again. This time his smile lasted.

Just an hour before the paper was to go to press, two days later, Malcolm remembered the woman's page. There was a whole stack of letters waiting to be replied to and made ready for publication. Again he had to o. k. sheets of Larry's copy without even reading it. With his usual do-or-die attitude he tackled the letters. About the third one from the top interested him, and he read it again, only to read and re-read it. Every time he read it stronger became his conviction that he knew the writer. As the feeling and pathos in her appeal got under his skin he blushed to the roots of his hair. His wife was the writer of that letter, and he was the neglectful husband she was writing about. It was just as she said, he had neglected her almost from the time of their marriage, shamefully. Night after night he had gone back to work, leaving her to the companionship of her young sister Betty. How was he to know that she would be lonely just with Betty! Why, of course he should have known. But the last paragraph of the letter was the startling one.

"There is an old friend, a gentleman, who realizing how neglected I am by the man I accepted in preference to him, has tried persistently to make my life happier by his companionship and presents, but I have refused them all through my sense of loyalty to my husband. But as the months go by and he still neglects me, I feel I can no longer endure it, and must turn to this other friend for the companionship my husband denies me. Dear Luzette, what do you advise?"

For a long time after Malcolm had made sure of the contents of the letter he sat back in his chair and thought it over. There lay the explanation to a lot of mysteries he had been trying to solve in a half-hearted sort of way for a long time. So that was the writing Marian had been doing in secret—letters to Wendell Hughes, and a letter to "Luzette," the name under which Miss Lorene conducted her column. Wendell Hughes had wormed his way into her affections after all, he told himself angrily. What was there to do about it? Before he had been working out the problem for five minutes he had decided on half a dozen courses of action—most of them violent ones. Then conscience got in its work. He was to blame for it all, he admitted, finally. It was all his fault for neglecting Marian, the sweetest little wife in the world, as he had done. Of course he had been doing all his hard work for her—her happiness had never been out of his mind for an instant, but he had mistaken what would be happiness to her. His companionship and devoted love meant more to her than all the wealth and prosperity in the world. He could see that from the letter, and somehow the thought thrilled him.

"Take charge, I'm going home," Malcolm called out to Larry as he jumped up from his desk. "There is not much to do, but it's time you were taking some of the responsibility off my shoulders anyway. I've plugged here too long." He stopped at the door long enough to look back and see Larry, with coat off and sleeves rolled up, flinging into work with more vim than he had ever seen him exert before.

That was the first act of a little drama that reached its happy climax two months later. The winding up scene was in the now delightful home of Mr. and Mrs. McDougall. Malcolm had just started in to confess about the great change that Marian could not help seeing. They were sitting in the twilight before the very brightest kind of grate fire, and Malcolm's arm had found a resting place around Marian's slender waist. His other hand was snugly holding her little warm fingers, and as he talked he squeezed them very gently now and then.

"It was all for you, dear," he whispered just so she could hear. All the hard work was for you, and for the happiness I thought it would bring you. I thought I'd understand, dear, but now I am glad you didn't."

"But I did understand, dear boy," she answered, in just as low a tone, "and I knew it was all for me—that was why I was content in my loneliness. I knew some day that we would earn the glorious times we are enjoying now. It was not so lonely, though, for I had my big surprise to think of. Look!" She took a magazine from the rack by their side and opened it near the front. "Look," she said again, as she held it to his eyes.

There before him was her surprise. A short story by Marian Lethbridge—his wife! In one of the leading magazines, too!

"But your letter to Luzette, dear heart," he asked in wonder when he could gain his breath. "You said you were lonely and didn't have anything to do."

"It's our turn to confess," Larry and Betty advanced from out of the shadows. "I wrote that letter," Betty confessed meekly. "And I told her to and helped her," came glibly from Larry. "But why?" Malcolm looked from one to another.

"We wanted you to give Larry a chance at the office—a chance to do some of the work that would show them he could be of more value down there and get a raise in salary, and he wanted Marian to have happiness, too, because she wasn't really happy. It has got everything we wanted."

"And we wanted to get married," joined in Larry with bated breath.

"What does it all mean?" Poor Marian could not make head nor tail of it.

"It means that I have been a blind idiot," Malcolm gasped; "but I am the happiest man in the world, anyway."

"Don't be too sure of that," Larry's voice came from out of the shadow and was followed closely by a smothered little cry from Betty that no one mistook for a cry of fright. There was not a word of protest from any one—all lips were very much engaged otherwise.

Love of Trees.

That one should feel affection for the great trees is natural. In the Minnesota forests I met a lumberman who told me he would weep bitter tears when he got orders to cut down a fine hemlock, Julius Chambers writes in the Brooklyn Eagle. Every stroke of the ax seemed to him to be felt by the sturdy monarch whose life he was taking.

When I have revisited the "woods" in which, as a boy, I gathered nuts, I have fancied the trees I used to climb recognized me. They looked the same. They hadn't aged. The shell-bark hickory trees seemed a trifle more dangerous to climb than of yore, and the lengthened arm had barely kept pace with the expanding bark. "I could still encircle their trunks and could have climbed them if necessary, but the rewards of a winter's store of nuts no longer appeal to me. The walnuts and hickory nuts one buys do not taste like those gathered with one's own hands."

No Hog. "You have plenty of money, but you haven't any more than your share of happiness." "I'll try to work along," said the magnate. "I don't want to hog everything." Louisville Courier-Journal.

Monster Christmas Puddings.

Perhaps some conscientious people may have thought their Christmas puddings extravagantly large; let such persons find consolation in the following, printed in an English newspaper of the year 1770: "On Monday last was brought from Hawick to Berwick, to be shipped to London for Sir Henry Grey, a Christmas pudding the contents of which consisted of two bushels of flour, 20 pounds of butter, four geese, two turkeys, two rabbits, four wild ducks, two woodcock, six snipe, four partridges, two tongues, two curlews and six pigeons. This pudding was nine feet in circumference, weighed 12 stone, and had to be wheeled by two strong men." Another monster pudding which "took 14 days to boil," was made in the Red Lion Inn at Southwark, in 1718. "It weighed 1,000 pounds and was taken to the Swan cavern on a cart drawn by six donkeys."

Origin of Names of Fishes.

The herring is said to be named from its gregariousness (here, a host), but the derivation is fanciful. The crayfish is the same in origin as the crab. The oyster is so called from its bony shell—in Greek ostone, a bone. The whelk or wick is named from its convoluted shell (helix, a twist or spiral). The lobster is named from the locust, which it is supposed to resemble. The mussel is sometimes mysteriously connected with the mouse—slow moving. The halibut is the holy "butt" (i. e., place), being good eating for holidays. Eel is probably an imitation word caught from the slimy appearance and sinuous movement of the fish. The origin of haddock, pilchard, parr and cuttle has not been ascertained, or even ventured for.

Lumbermen Use Care.

Everywhere we see this old proverb about an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure put into effect. The latest people to use it in their business are the lumbermen. They have discovered that if they spray off all their logs before they run them under the saw they save countless serious accidents. Coming to the mill little particles of stone and gravel often adhere to the logs, and if one of these bits of material strikes the edge of the huge circular saw just right—bling! off will go the saw into a thousand pieces like shrapnel. If a spray of great force is played over the logs, there is, of course, no danger of this happening, so all up-to-date sawmills are beginning to put this method into practice.

"Your Nose Knows"

All smoking tobaccos use some flavoring. The Encyclopaedia Britannica says about the manufacture of smoking tobacco, "... on the Continent and in America certain 'sauces' are employed... the use of the 'sauces' is to improve the flavour and burning qualities of the leaves."

Tuxedo uses chocolate—the purest, most wholesome and delicious of all flavorings! Everybody likes chocolate—we all know that chocolate added to anything as a flavoring always makes that thing still more enjoyable. That is why a dash of chocolate, added to the most carefully selected and properly aged burley tobacco, makes Tuxedo more enjoyable—

No Farm Too Large or Too Small for a Cleveland

CAPABLE of doing a great volume of work; yet so designed and so easily operated that it gets into the corners.

The owner of a small farm can use the Cleveland just as profitably as the owner of a big one. And another advantage is that it works on all kinds of soils. It lays its own track as it goes along and does not pack the soil.

The Cleveland tractor has proven itself able to plow from 8 to 10 acres per day in medium soil, with a two-bottom Oliver plow.

Use it with an Oliver Plow for best results!

Oliver plows were designed especially for tractor service. The rolling coulter and jointer bury all trash and weeds at the bottom of the furrow. The stop device maintains an even depth of furrow. A trip rope enables the operator to control the plow from his seat on the tractor. The plow points enter and leave the ground first, affording good clean furrows clear to the ends of the field.

Come to our salesroom any time and I will show you many other good features of the Cleveland tractor and Oliver plows.

GOOD ENOUGH.

Collection money was to little Tommy one of the essentials of church-going. Every Sunday morning he saw that his penny was ready.

One day, just as the ushers began to take the collection, Tommy noticed that a guest in the family pew was not duly provided. Sliding along the seat, he whispered:

"Where's your penny?"

"I didn't bring one," replied the lady.

Time was short and the matter was urgent. But Tommy was a quick-witted kiddy. Thrusting his penny into the lady's hand, he whispered:

"Here, take mine! I'll pay for you and I'll get under the seat!"

EVERYBODY IS NOW FIGURING INCOME TAX

In Order to Be Helpful to Public, Internal Revenue Bureau
Has Every Available
Officer in Field.

SEVERE PENALTIES IF YOU
DELAY BEYOND MARCH 15

With the due date for Income Taxes only a few weeks away, the collection of this far-reaching tax on 1918 incomes has started off with a bang. Everybody is figuring income tax.

Payments and sworn statements of income must reach Internal Revenue offices on or before March 15, and there are severe penalties for delinquency.

Residents of Maryland and Delaware should make their returns and pay their taxes to Joshua W. Miles, Collector of Internal Revenue, Baltimore, Md., or to any of his deputy collectors who are now doing free advisory work on income tax.

"Pay your Income Tax by March 15," is the slogan of the Internal Revenue Bureau, which has sent every available officer into the field to help the public to understand the requirements and to prepare the returns.

Who Must Make Return.

It is estimated that many thousands of single and married persons in this section of the United States who have never before made annual returns are required to do so this year.

Income tax returns must be made between now and March 15 by persons who come under the following classifications:

Any unmarried person whose 1918 net income was $1,000 or over. Widows and widowers, divorcees and married persons who are living apart from their husbands or wives, are for the purposes of the Income Tax classed as unmarried.

Any married person living with wife or husband whose 1918 net income was $2,000 or over. The income of both husband and wife must be considered, together with the earnings of minor children, if any.

Revenue Bureau Offers Aid.

Each person in the United States who is in either of these classifications must get busy at once if penalties are to be avoided. He should secure a blank Form 1040 A for reporting net income up to $5,000, or Form 1040 if his net income exceeded that amount. Forms are being distributed by Collectors and their Deputies, also by banks. By following the instructions on the forms a correct return can be prepared at home. If a person needs advice or aid, the Deputy Collectors in the field will furnish this without charge.

The new Revenue law places the Income Tax duty on citizens and residents. The Internal Revenue Bureau is sending its men to work right with the public to get the tax and the returns in. With active co-operation every tax due March 15 will be paid and every return required by law will be in the Revenue offices on time.

Exemptions Are Allowed.

A single person is allowed a personal exemption of $1,000. If he is supporting in his household relatives who are dependent upon him he may claim the status of the head of a family who has the same exemption as if married.

A married person who lives with wife or husband is allowed a personal exemption of $2,000. The head of a family is entitled to claim a similar personal exemption.

An additional exemption of $200 is allowed for each person under eighteen or incapable of self support who was dependent upon and received his chief support from the taxpayer.

A husband and wife living together are entitled to but one personal exemption of $2,000. If they make separate returns the exemption may be claimed by either or divided.

Accuracy Required.

Absolute accuracy is necessary in making up income figures. Any person who is working for wages should find out exactly how much he received during the whole year 1918. Fees, bank interest, bond interest, dividends, rents received and all other items must be reported correctly. Mere guesses are not accepted, for they are unjust alike to the taxpayer and the Government and defeat the proper administration of the law.

Diet for the Sedentary.

Most of the disorders of the sedentary and the brain workers arise from dietetic indiscretions and errors. If a physically inactive man attempts to eat as heartily as a farm laborer he is sure to develop digestive troubles, rheumatism, gout or obesity. For this reason the sedentary should avoid large quantities of starchy food. Brain work demands easily assimilated pro-teid material and only a moderate amount of carbohydrates. Many brain workers cannot indulge in rich or full meals without injury and even a plain vegetarian diet is too bulky for most sedentary people.

The Thrill of the Open.

The same truth is true of all men who go out into the green, blue eyed wilderness whether they go there in pursuit of game or butterflies. They find something stranger and better than what they went out to seek, and if they come home disappointed in the day's bag or catch, there is yet something in their eyes and across their brows, a light of peace, an enchanted calm, which tells those who understand that they at all events have seen the great Pan and heard the music he can make out of the pipy hemlocks or the lonely pines.—Richard Le Gallenne.

Lived Long and Well.

Many years ago in Venice "there lived a man whose name was Cornaro, and he was what we call today a "bon vivant." So well did he live that when he was only thirty-seven years old he fell sick and, becoming worried over his condition, went to see his physician. This good man examined him very carefully and told him that he had only a few more months here in this world, but that he might prolong this time if he would give up all his bad habits and live a healthy, normal
took the hint and died at the ripe old

Beauty of Independence.

No self-respecting person can feel that he is quite a man while he is dependent. When he has become absolutely independent, he is conscious of a sense of added power, which nothing else can give. For, responsibility develops ability. Many a boy discovers himself for the first time when he is thrown upon his own resources and forced to shift for himself.
So if you long for success, never do anything through another which it is possible for you to do for yourself.
Life from without is often weakening in its effect, but help from within invariably stimulates.

Too Familiar.

"There goes Mr. Grabcohn with his future son-in-law." "He doesn't seem to find much enjoyment in the young man's society." "Neither would you, if you were worth $30,000,000 and your future son-in-law addressed you as

Definition of "Gentleman."

Said the vicar: "No, it is certainly not a matter of birth; yet to be quite honest, when we use the word it does imply a certain degree of education and polish. Moreover, this alone does not make a gentleman; for that there must be sound wood underneath the polish. The polish is not a guarantee of the soundness; there may be nothing but veneer. A gentleman is always conscious of the feelings, the desires, the needs of other people, and considers them instinctively first and himself last, sensitive to all that others suffer in his service. This may be the heritage of birth. I believe that the Christian religion makes gentlemen out of all kinds of materials."

Ancient Elevators.

The earliest mention of a device in any way resembling the modern elevator or lift may be read in Vitruvius, who describes a hoisting machine which was invented by Archimedes.
This elevator of the second century
B. C. worked by ropes which were colled upon a winding drum by a capstan and levers. The same writer refers to another similar machine which was made to rotate by a man who walked inside the capstan. Such a primitive elevator is still in use to lift passengers and luggage from the first to the second story of a convent on Mt. Sinai.

Races That Have Disappeared.

There is a great religious order which recently came upon the remains of a mission which some of their members established once in China, but the time was so far back in the past that the order in question had lost all record, memory or tradition of it.
Yet, the Chinese in that place were found still saying Christian prayers that had been taught to their forefathers by the missionaries. It is not alone in China, however, that the mysteries of the past are met with. In nearly every land under the sun we come upon footprints that were made by races of which all trace and knowledge has been lost.

Was Not to Be Caught.

A young man summoned for examination by a military tribunal claimed exemption on account of his eyes. He had been told of various methods employed by the doctors to detect men who were evading service and was determined not to be caught by them.
"Read the letters on that wall," com-

All Communications Should be Addressed to the
TUESDAY MORNING, MAR. 11, 1919

The militant suffragists are making the most patient and heroic efforts to prove that they don't know enough to vote.

Some people won't advertise in the Marylander and Herald because if they did they might have to hire another clerk to help sell the goods.

It is not what you have today but what you save that counts in the long run. Buy War Savings Stamps and you will not fear the future.

It is claimed the soldiers don't want to keep their uniforms, but they should remember what a tremendous help they are in getting dance partners.

With their minds fixed on July first, many city people have suddenly remembered that they have dear friends in the country who have apple orchards.

After spending a good deal of money for hot house grown vegetables, some people will have completely lost their appetite for them by the time they become abundant and cheap.

Some people say spring began March 1st, others say that it begins when the sun crosses the line March 21st and still wiser people know it is whenever the boys play marbles on the sidewalks.

The people who growl about their income taxes were probably safe at home with their families last year, while their neighbors had boys in the trenches, their lives dependent on a great army equipment.

What is going to become of all the German helmets being brought to this country? Well, they seem to be wanted as souvenirs by many people who during the war wouldn't even go out evenings to roll bandages.

The reason that the farmers oppose daylight saving seems to be that the farm help have an ineradicable tendency to get up in the morning by sun time and quit work by daylight saving time. However, it is predicted that if they are given every afternoon off and a full holiday every Saturday, there may be a fair supply of farm help.

Much has been said and written about the model husband. A quarter of a century ago Ella Wheeler Wilcox penned her ideas of a model husband and we doubt if they could be improved upon. "Ella" said if she were asked to define the meaning of a successful man, she would say a man who has made a happy home for his wife and children. No matter what he has done in the way of achieving wealth or honors, if he has done that he is a grand success. If he has not done that, and it is his own fault, though he be the highest in the land, he is a most pitiable failure.

KEEPING FARM HELP

The farmers have now struggled along for two seasons largely with green help. They are in need of a class of experienced helpers, preferably married men, who have struck a steady gait and do not find it absolutely necessary to attend a dance twice a week. It is a big problem how to get, develop, and hold such men.

Many farmers believe it pays to offer some extra inducements to secure them. This may take the form of higher pay. Some take extra pains to fix up a comfortable house or other quarters for a helper's family. Others go so far as a bonus or profit sharing scheme.

Probably most farmers wouldn't share profits unless the help would agree to share losses. But some of them have found a middle course, in encouraging faithful men to carry on little enterprises of their own, the work is done outside of farm hours of labor and tend to make them contented and settle down permanently.

The old time "farm hand" was willing to work as many hours as the farmer. If the latter was in the field at 5 a. m., the "hand" would have felt he showed no sporting blood not to be there too. The modern farmer may come in after a couple of hours work before breakfast and find his help just up and smoking on the porch.

The farm hand who demands the eight hour day does not commonly want to spend it in sporting life. Probably what he wants is time to develop something of his own. It may pay to honor him. It pays to make some concessions if one can get the old time kind of helper who felt some personal attachment to his home soil.

THE SEED CATALOGS

Brilliantly illustrated seed catalogs may now be seen upon many a living room table in Princess Anne. They cover up those handsome poetry and travel books which you got for wedding presents, but which you never read. The seed books soon show signs of being well thumbed. Many people who never come out with many bushels of vegetables, study these pictures of potatoes and corn and beans for many pleasant hours.

It is with a joyful sense of opportunity that you ponder your choice between the Kentucky Wonders and Burpee's stringless and all the other standbys that look so grand in the cuts.

The seed man can be forgiven a little camouflage if his redundant illustration entices people from their lethargy into the health giving garden game. But don't send away off to some distant grower when the stores of Princess Anne have specialized on seeds so many years.

SERVICE AT THE HOME STORE

This service is not confined merely to bringing the products of the world to your front door. It includes a civic service as well.

Home merchants are keenly interested in town progress. Even if they are no more public spirited than other people, it is to their interest to work for town improvement. The better and bigger their town gets the more business for them. So progressive enterprises get a splendid degree of support from them.

Thus the home stores of Princess Anne are centers of energy and influence for movements calculated to improve home conditions. When you spend your money in some distant city, you give your support to people who have not the slightest interest in your home town. When you spend money with the home store you add to the power and the influence of men who are working every day for the good of Princess Anne.

BOLSHEVIST PROPAGANDA

From all over the country come reports of a systematic Bolshevik propaganda. The "exploited" wage earners are exported to be "slaves" no longer. They are told to seize by physical force the factories, farms, railroads, etc., and operate them for their own benefit. What would happen if they did this some fine morning?

Well, Russia, where prices have risen from 10 to 100 times since these wise heads took control, gives some idea of what the workingman would gain or lose.

It takes long business training, and peculiar and unusual gifts to manage successfully any business of considerable size. Also it calls for a great deal of planning, concentrated mental effort and anxiety. No man will undertake this heavy task unless some large incentive is offered to his ambition.

Bolshevism offers no inducement to anyone to perfect himself in the science of business management. It presupposes that the manager can expect no exceptional rewards. Or if he is given extra inducements, his appointment could be expected to be governed by political and personal favor or other influences than that of efficiency.

There is no system in it for maintaining industrial discipline, without which no business can run economically. It would be human nature for everyone to loaf and blame other people for poor results. If an industry produced one third what it does under present systematic business efficiency and management, it would be doing pretty well.

The consequence would be a decreased production of all commodities. All necessities of life would become terribly scarce and high, as they have in Russia. Thus Bolshevism is a proposition greatly to increase the cost of living. It would bring everybody down to a destitution never before known in civilized countries.

Cardinal Gibbons Endorses Savings

Through the National War Savings Organization an appeal for continued support of government's war savings campaign has been issued by Cardinal Gibbons.

"We should welcome the opportunity afforded by our government," said the cardinal, "to continue the saving habit. To buy war savings is the clear duty of every American citizen, young and old. I urge all our clergy to promote this campaign by every means in their power. I urge our good people to give their heartiest support, and from the splendid evidences of their patriotism shown in the last two years I am confident that it will meet with great success."

Why Colds are Dangerous

You are often told to "beware of a cold," but why? We will tell you: Every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for the more serious diseases. People who contract pneumonia first take cold. The longer a cold hangs on, the greater the danger, especially from germ diseases, as a cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs of consumption, diphtheria, scarlet fever and whooping cough. The quicker you get rid of your cold, the less the danger of contracting one of these diseases. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a great reputation as a cure for colds and can be depended upon. It is pleasant to take.

Appeal For The Victory Liberty Loan

At the conference of governors and mayors held in Washington, D. C., last Wednesday to discuss post-war problems, the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, we, the governors and mayors of many of the states and principal cities of the United States in conference assembled at the White House, Washington, do believe that our nation is on the eve of phenomenal business and industrial expansion; and
"Whereas, we are convinced that an immediate common purpose to which we should lend our efforts is the overwhelming success of the Victory Loan.
"Therefore, be it resolved, That we earnestly urge all citizens of this country to look upon the success of the Victory Liberty Loan as the most patriotic and essential concern of the moment; that they begin at once to prepare for making subscriptions as large as their finances and their credit will permit, and that each one do his part to insure an oversubscription such as will command the admiration of the world for the people of the United States."

A Timely Suggestion

The next time you have a cough or cold try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is pleasant to take and you are sure to be pleased with the relief it affords. This remedy has a wide reputation for its cures of coughs and colds.

Began to Lose His Grip, Tonnall Came To His Rescue

"I was losing my grip," says Charles W. Downes, of 303 Wayne Ave., York, Pa. "My position is one which is very hard on the nerves and I found I was getting quite nervous and when things did not go as I thought they should, I would become irritable and excited. I was also losing weight, and I noticed my appetite was failing me. I realized it was time I should take something to give me renewed strength. A friend of mine told me of the great benefits he had derived from taking Tonnall, and as his case was similar to mine, I at once started taking Tonnall, and I frankly admit Tonnall is all it is claimed to be. The results I have obtained in every respect have been most gratifying. I can recommend Tonnall to my friends as a wonderful Tonic and System Builder.
Tonnall is sold by T. J. Smith & Co., Druggists, Princess Anne, Md. [Adv.]

The Rev. J. H. Crawford, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, Delaware, lectured in the Manokin Presbyterian Chapel last Friday night on the "New Era Movement."

The social that was to have been held at the home of Mrs. W. O. Lankford for the benefit of little French refugees Monday evening, March 10th, has been postponed until Monday evening, March 17th.

Mrs. K. L. Heyser, advance agent of the Chautauqua, was in Princess Anne last week making arrangements for the Chautauqua entertainers who will arrive here today. She stopped at the Washington Hotel while in town.

Judge Robert F. Duer went to Baltimore the first of last week to see his sister, Mrs. Robert Dean McCormick, who is suffering from an attack of influenza. He received a letter last Saturday stating that her condition had somewhat improved.

The Lenten season began last Wednesday in St. Andrew's Church with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 7.30 o'clock; morning prayer at 10.30 o'clock, and evening prayer at 4.30 o'clock. During Lent the week-day services will be at 4.30 p. m. each day except Saturday.

We have received a copy of the Maryland Almanac, published by Frank R. Kent and John W. Owens, of the Baltimore Sun. The Maryland Almanac is a worthy successor to "The Sun Almanac" and contains a vast amount of information and it should be in every Maryland home.

Boys and girls, what is it you can never catch, tho' you chase after it on the wings of the wind? You can never catch the word that has once left your lips. Once spoken, it is out of your reach; do your best you can never recall it. Therefore, take care what you say. Never speak an unkind word, an impure word or a profane word.

Wilmington Methodist Episcopal Conference will meet at Chestertown on the 26th of this month. Bishop McDowell, of Washington, will preside. It is thought there will not be so many ministers changed as usual. Probably the most important matter before Conference will be the consideration of the Centenary Movement by which the Methodist Church of America is endeavoring to raise the immense sum of eighty million dollars.

The season is fast approaching when the chicken fancier closes his eyes and dreams of great profits in spring chickens and setting eggs; when the gardener closes his eyes and anticipates great profits from the crops he is going to grow; when the fishermen sit around the stores and at home and catch enormous quantities of high-priced fish, and when the small children get out their marbles and begin to draw rings on the ground and play "knucks down." When these things begin to happen it's a sure sign that spring is close at hand.—Cambridge Record.

Our town has—a few people who dislike to eat between meals; some young ladies who have more point to their shoes than to their conversation; a few young men sowing wild oats who hope something will happen to destroy the crop; a couple of youths paddling their own canoe, but their dads furnish the canoe and paddles; some youngsters who want to see life but imagine that none of it is worth seeing by daylight; a few boys to whom it never occurs that some day they will know as little as their fathers; occasionally one who holds that speculation is more refined than gambling, but they lose in it just the same.

ATTENTION!

Every subscriber to the Marylander and Herald whose pink address slip is marked "18" is requested to pay a year's subscription. If the slip reads January, 1918, or February, March, or any other month in the year 1918, it means your subscription has expired and you should send us $1.00 for renewal at once. All address labels marked January, 1919, or February, 1919, are also due and we would thank all subscribers for prompt renewals. The Marylander and Herald is $1.00 a year in advance and the pink label on your paper gives you the information as to when you owe us one dollar.

Soldier Dead To Be Brought Home

It has been officially announced that "All of America's soldier and sailor dead will be returned from the battlefield and hospital cemeteries of France at the expense of the Federal Government in 1920, and an appropriation by Congress will be asked for at the proper time."

Arlington National Cemetery, which looks out over the city of Washington, will be the place of burial of thousands of Americans who gave their lives in the great war.

Moore For Good Roads

Chairman Zouck, of the Maryland Roads Commission, says that with the new national legislation there will be $2,000,000 available from the Federal Treasury for road making in this State. It is one of the conditions of this liberal appropriation that the State must add an equal sum. And this, Mr. Zouck says, the State is prepared to do. Nearly every dollar of this $4,000,000, along with the large fund Maryland provides for the up-keep of the roads already made, will go for labor, either in wages to the road makers or for labor in getting out material.

Horsely Strawberry Plants

I found this plant in the spring of 1915, while it was in fruit. It looked better to me than anything I had ever seen in the way of early berries, and I had some of the plants set out and have fruited them every year since. They bear full every season and seem to be frost proof. The plant is a vigorous grower, has plenty of foliage, stays green through the winter. It blossoms well under the foliage which protects them from frost, and so far there has not been a sign of rust. Last spring (1918), which was an unfavorable season on all varieties of berries, is the first year I had any to ship, and they picked more than 140 crates per acre on the average. They ripen a few days earlier than the Klondike and Missionary. The berry is a large bright red, and runs large through the season. It has a fine flavor and is a hard, good carrying berry. While I do not claim them to be fall bearers, I had lots of berries on old patches last fall, but none on the new patches. They sold well under the block; some loads sold as high as $7.05 per crate. I had them sell as high as 35c per quart in New York. The brokers all like them, and some have spoken for as high as 25,000 plants already. All I shipped on the market I shipped to W. O. & H. W. Davis, New York, the following is what they have to say about them: "At the time the Horsely berry is ripened, we consider it a very fine seller. It is a good carrier and sells well on account of its size. At the time this berry is ripened large berries are scarce on the market. They should bring 8c to 10c more than any other berry. It is a valuable berry and a berry that fancy trade looks for. If I were planting berries, I would plant heavy of this variety." I have them for sale this season, one to four thousand, $5.00 per thousand. Five thousand and above, $4.50. First come first served, and the cash orders filled first. I am now booking orders. I also have Klondike, Missionary and Gandy for $2.50 per thousand. J. C. HORSEY, Marion, Md. Adv.

GROWING CLOVER TO ENRICH SOIL

Purpose is to Provide Greatest Amount of Nitrogen and Vegetable Growth.

CUT THE FALL CROP FOR HAY

Second Year Crop Should Be Clipped
From 8 to 12 Inches High and Allowed to Remain on Ground
—Tractor Is Effective.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sweet clover is grown on many corn-belt farms for the express purpose of soil improvement, for which purpose it is unequaled by any other legume.

In cases where sweet clover is grown for this purpose the end in view is to provide the greatest possible amount of nitrogen in the soil and vegetable growth to be plowed under. It is clear that the second year crop which would otherwise be devoted to seed production will give the greatest growth in soil improvement but there are difficulties in plowing under this crop unless certain methods of handling it are followed.

Cut Fall Crop for Hay.
The fall crop of the first year should be cut for hay, which will not lessen seriously the amount of material finally returned to the soil. About the middle of May the second year crop should be clipped from 8 to 12 inches high and allowed to remain on the ground. In order to prevent too heavy a growth it may be necessary to clip the crop again early in July, this time from 12 to 18 inches high, if possible. This clipping also remains on the field. After the second clipping considerable growth and some seed will be produced, all of which, together with the two clippings, may be plowed under later in the fall without special difficulty.

Tractor Is Effective.
This is the method that should be followed if horses are to be used for plowing; but when a tractor is available clipping is unnecessary, for with this source of power a very heavy crop of second-year growth can be plowed under satisfactorily. On several occasions large acreages of sweet clover which have failed to produce seed have been plowed under by the use of a tractor and gang plows equipped with special jointers, which are very effective in turning under and completely covering large amounts of vegetable matter of this kind.

FERTILIZERS NOW ON HAND

Farmers, for First Time in Several Years, Will Be Able to Obtain Ample Supply.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For the first time in several years American farmers will probably be able to secure adequate supplies of fertilizers for use this spring. The supply of nitrogenous materials is regarded as ample because large stocks of nitrate of soda which were brought into the country for munition purposes are now available for agriculture and, in addition, the producing capacity of ammonium sulphate plants has been increased since 1913 from about 200,000 tons to approximately 400,000 tons. The department of agriculture also has purchased out of a $10,000,000 revolving fund a supply of nitrate of soda which will be distributed to farmers at cost for cash, the price being $91 a ton, plus freight.

There is in the country a large surplus of sulphuric acid-producing capacity, and native supplies of phosphate rock are available practically to any extent demanded. Some shortage of potash may continue, as it is not thought that supplies can be obtained in time for use this spring either from Alsace or from Germany.

HANDLE TUBERS CAREFULLY

Potatoes Should Not Be Treated as Though They Were Cobblestones —Are Living Things.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Potatoes should be handled carefully and not as though they were cobblestones. The potato is a living thing, with a protective skin, which it is able to keep intact if it has a fair chance.

For $1—This Week Only To Women Who Failed to Get It

We have supplied our famous Cookers to more than a million homes. But we want every home using Quaker Oats or Mother's Oats to have one. So we repeat for one week only this attractive Dollar Offer.

Now a Very Costly Offer

This to us, at present aluminum prices, is a very costly offer. Yet we have those Cookers made to our order in enormous lots.

Such an Aluminum Cooker, extra large and heavy, would probably cost at retail more than you care to pay. But you need it to cook cereals rightly. So we want you to have it—for your sake and our sake—if you are cooking our cereals without it.

If you have this Cooker, our offer is not open. We cannot supply more than one to a family. But, if you failed to get one, get it now. This offer is made for one week only. It cannot be repeated unless Aluminum comes down.

Keep the Rich Flavor Intact

Quaker Oats and Mother's Oats are made from queen grains only—just the rich, plump, flavory oats. We get but ten pounds from a bushel.

This is done to secure a superlative flavor. Little grains, puny and insipid, lessen oat-food delights.

Now we ask you to cook these luscious oat flakes so that flavor keeps intact. Cook them so they easily digest. This Cooker will help you to do that, as it does a million others.

It is yours for $1 if you send this week. And if you send the sales slip asked for, to show that you are using this delicious grade of oats. You will save enough to buy a great deal of cereal by accepting this dollar offer.

Your Last Chance to Get It

Buy from your grocer five packages of either Quaker Oats or Mother's Oats. Or buy four packages of the oats, and one of either Quaker Best Corn Meal or Quaker Hominy. Send us the grocer's sales slip with $1 and we will mail the Aluminum Cooker by parcel post. Sales slips must be mailed within one week.

DON'T GUESS

THE telephone number of a big department store in a large city is 7000. A subscriber whose number was 6000 asked to have his designation changed; he complained that he was called several times a day by people who wanted the department store and who failed to look up the correct number.

THEY guessed, and guessed wrong. They asked the operator for 6000 and she, of course, gave them the number asked for.

IT is an easy thing to guess wrong, and it annoys a third person—the one called in error. Incidentally, the operator usually gets the blame. Always consult the directory.

Census Will Be Taken in 1920

With hostilities at an end, the Government is now laying the basis for one of the greater of its peace time tasks—the decennial inventory of the United States, its people, lands, industry and livestock that is called the census. Secretary of Commerce Redfield the other day signed the order that transferred one of the largest of the temporary war buildings put up in Washington, that formerly housing the army's department of aeronautics, to Director of the Census Rogers and his staff.

Actually, the Government began the job some months ago, assembling its plans and forces. By law, the beginning of the census period of 1920 is July 1st, 1919, though it will not be until a year from April that the enumerators will be set at work. It is then that every individual in America, or some one acting for the individual, will be asked the series of questions that must be answered.

There will be 29 of these questions in the 1920 census, according to the present design of Director Rogers' dummy cards, which now are being given the exhaustive study of statisticians. The more complex questionnaires that go to industrial establishments, schools, farms and every other permanent institution of the country are likewise in the development stage, undergoing critical examination in the light of experience the Government has gained in conducting 13 inventories of the kind.

FARM POULTRY

HOW TO OPERATE INCUBATOR

Machine Should Be Placed in Fairly Warm Room and Protected Against Outside Changes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One difficulty in setting eggs as early in the spring as is necessary for early hatching, if the natural system of incubation is followed, is in finding broody hens at the proper time. If natural incubation be depended upon exclusively the poultry raiser must wait until the hens are ready to set. This is not true, however, if an incubator is available, for if the eggs are fertile they can be started at any time the operator desires.

The incubator should be operated in a fairly warm room, preferably a cellar, as a protection against outside temperature changes. Sudden changes in temperature is the enemy of the incubator. The machine should be disinfected thoroughly before being used with a solution of reliable coal tar disinfectant.

Instead of using such a solution a small receptacle containing one-half ounce of permanganate of potash on which one-half ounce of formalin has been poured may be shut up in the incubator. The resulting gas will thoroughly disinfect the machine. After disinfecting the incubator should be run empty for several days to get it into good operating condition. After the eggs are in place the temperature should be held at 101½ to 102 degrees Fahrenheit the first week, 102 to 103 degrees the second week, and 103 the third week.

The eggs usually are turned for the first time at the end of the second day, and twice daily through the eighth or ninth day. The eggs are cooled outside the hatching chamber once daily after the seventh and up to the nineteenth day. Moisture should be furnished in artificial incubation

Removing Hatch From Incubator.

In the South, in high altitudes, and when the incubator room is dry. This may be done by sprinkling the eggs with warm water or by placing a wet sponge or pan of water under the egg tray.

During the hatching period carefully fill the lamp and trim the wick each day. It is best to trim the wick by scraping off the burnt portion rather than by cutting the wick. The lamp should not be filled entirely. After the lamp is filled it should be closely observed for a time to make sure that the flame does not get too high.

SPRING CONDITION OF HENS

Lack of Exercise and Too Much Feed of Dry Kind Often Cause of Constipation.

In the spring fowls often show up in constipated condition. It is usually caused by lack of exercise, green stuff, grit and too much feed of a dry kind. You notice it first on the soiled feathers, next the clogging of the vent. This immediately calls for a physic. One tablespoonful of castor oil or half-teaspoonful of epsom salts in each fowl, and the last may be continued in broken doses in food or water for several days after. Feed them boiled potatoes, all the cabbage and other green stuff at hand, and make them hunt for their grain. These constipated fowls are no good as breeders until you get them toned up.

POULTRY NOTES

Carelessness in purchasing hatchery eggs retards flock improvement.

After all, it is the little things that count for the most in poultry raising.

Experience teaches us that great care is needed to prevent poultry parasites and poultry diseases.

The fresher the eggs are when used for hatching, the better, and eggs over 10 days should be discarded.

It is worth your while to set any eggs at all. It surely is worth your while to set the eggs worth while.

When the parent birds lack vitality the chicks are naturally weak, not so much as in the case of the parent birds.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A majority of the ill-suffering people today can be traced back to kidney trouble. The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters, the purifiers, of your blood. Kidney disease is usually indicated by weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gall stones, gravel, rheumatism, sciatica, and lumbago. All these derangements are nature's signals to warn you that the kidneys need help. You should use GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules immediately. The soothing, healing oil stimulates the kidneys, relieves inflammation and destroys the germs which have caused it. Do not wait until tomorrow. Go to your drugist today and insist on GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. In twenty-four hours you should feel health and vigor returning and will bless the day you first heard of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil. After you feel that you have cured yourself, continue to take one or two capsules each day, so as to keep in first-class condition and ward off the danger of other attacks. Ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. Three elses. Money refunded if they do not help you.

SELECTING BREEDING SIRE.

Much of the success farmers have in breeding horses comes, of course, from selecting mares in good health to breed to the proper kind of sire. The use of inferior stallions is objected to by authorities on the same ground that poultry raisers object to "dunghill" stock—it is just as cheap to raise good stock as it is to bother with inferior grades. And the profit is better.

Breeding a heavy mare to a thoroughbred stallion should produce a colt partaking of some of its dam's weight and strength and its sire's stamina. After all, weight is of no value unless the horse has the heart for work, the heart to stand toil and hard work. Such heavy horses as the Percheron and Clydesdale, for instance, are not as good for heavy work, with all their weight as a cross of this strain with thoroughbred blood.

In the lighter stallions style, smooth lines and swift, well-balanced action are indispensable to improve light horse stock. As to all breeds that are good and clean, flat bone free from meatiness and well-defined heels are points to observe. In addition, good disposition, quality and animation are well worth looking for in the sire. A policy that is a poor one is the use of anything but a sound, pure bred stallion free from manifest faults of conformation. Also it must be borne in mind that a stallion that is not exercised and properly fed is not likely to produce a large proportion of strong and healthy colts.

Again, the warning should be heeded that too much care cannot be exercised in securing a suitable mate for the mares and the fundamental law that generally holds in all breeding operations must be remembered—like produces like or the likeness of an ancestor.

Absent-Minded.

ESKIMO DOGS NOT VICIOUS

Writer Who Has Traveled in the Far North Found Them Friendly and Affectionate.

Eskimo dogs are supposed to be the direct descendants of the northern gray, or white wolf, which they greatly resemble. They are of various colors—black, white, brown, brindle and gray—and they weigh from 60 to 100 pounds. In the far North a team consists of from 8 to 12, each attached to the sled by a 10-foot rawhide trace. The advantages of this arrangement are obvious. Seated on the sled with a 25-foot whip, one can reach out and touch the back of every dog, thereby keeping him in his place and exerting him to keep his trace right. The disadvantages are the indirect pull of the dogs, at the tips of the fan and the inevitable braiding of the traces into a rope as large as one's arm, the untangling of which at low temperature necessitates hours and hours of extreme discomfort.

"In my five years' work among these dogs I have failed to find the spectacle described by some writers as 'treacherous' or 'vicious' or 'ugly brute,'" writes Donald B. MacMillan, in his book, "Four Years in the White North." "On the contrary, the full-blooded Eskimo dog is one of the most affectionate in the world. A hundred or more were often about our door. My men passed in and out among them without the least fear. Two hundred and fifty were berthed on the deck of the Roosevelt. To walk forward it was often necessary to push them aside with the knees. No man, woman or child in the far North has ever been attacked, and not more than three or four of the whole tribe have ever been bitten."

ALPINE "SPORT" IN ENGLAND

Little Spot in Cumbrian Mountains Which Offers an Imitation of the Real Thing.

Few travelers, even those familiar with the by-ways, will think of England in connection with the sport of mountain climbing. Yet there is a bit of tumbled country in the west of England where a coterie of devotees of this perilous sport foregather annually at the Christmas season to get a taste of alpine work near home. The village of Wastdale Head, in the Cumbrian mountains, is the base of operations for these outdoorsmen who find their joy in scaling precipices with a forty foot rope about their waists and a hundred-yard drop below.

The village itself is one of the picturesque bits of old England which have not changed much in the last 500 years. Here you can attend services in what is probably the smallest church in the world—a tiny building with seats for twenty people. There is an inn, of course, with a battered signboard, which might have been modeled after a description from Dickens, except that it was flourishing some centuries before Dickens was born.

For eleven months in the year, neither the inn nor the church at Wastdale Head are crowded. But the landlord at the inn has booked his little rooms with their low ceilings eight months ahead for the cold days of December. This is the season when the climbers gather, and the chance tourist who arrives at this time will probably sleep on the floor under the billiard table.

Mouse at the Wedding.

A friend of mine, hysterically afraid of mice, had often declared that wherever she went one was sure to follow. She did not figure on one attending her wedding, however. She was married at home and during the ceremony a mouse scampered across the carpet at the feet of the bride. As she was about to say "Yes," she screamed "O," and, jerking her hand from the bridegroom's, she caught up her skirts and fell and mounted the nearest chair. Nothing could induce her to come down. There she remained until the ceremony was finished and the bridegroom lifted her from her perch. I witnessed the wedding, but, like the rest of the guests, I heard little of the marriage service on account of the laughter, which was general. The parson gave them a certificate, so I suppose they must be married.—Exchange.

Wood Ash As a Polish.

Someone has pointed out that the consumption of wood as fuel is attended with a by-product which has excellent polishing qualities. The writer recommends wood ash for polishing steel, pewter, brass, and copper in this way: That soft white, flaky ash is, as our careful grandmothers well knew, the best thing in the world as a cleaner and polisher. It will make the poor neglected fender shine like silver, put the wonted polish on the dulled luster of the brass candlesticks, fetch the soot off your enamel and aluminum kettles and pans, and clean them inside as well, without any of that unpleasant oily odor remaining behind which so many cleaning preparations leave in their wake. And—best of all—it costs nothing!—a recipe worth trying.—Scientific American.

Then the Band Played.

Two American negro soldiers were discussing musical instruments. "Yar," said one, "Ise gwine ter git me a eucalliptis." "A what?" queried the other. "A eucalliptis—dat's a musical instrument, fool." "Go on, nigger! You can't kid me—dat's one ob de books ob de Bible." Ideas.

GIVE ATTENTION TO VEGETABLE GARDEN

Nothing More Important Than Irish and Sweet Potatoes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the near approach of the planting season farmers should give immediate attention to the home garden. Among the substantial vegetables which should be grown on each farm none is more important than the Irish potato or the sweet potato. A small area of early Irish potatoes should be grown in each garden, but the main crop, of course, should be grown in a large area, on good soil, well fertilized and well prepared.

Irish Cobbler Potato.

The early crop of potatoes should be planted as soon as the ground can be prepared. The Irish Cobbler, the White Triumph, and Red Triumph are good early potatoes, but where only one variety is to be grown the Irish Cobbler is recommended.

To safeguard the potato crop against scab it is advisable to treat the tubers by putting one-half pint of formaldehyde in 15 gallons of water and soaking the potatoes in this solution about two hours.

DISEASES OF SWEET POTATO

Loss of Many Million Bushels Every Year Can Be Prevented—Suggestion Given.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Ten million to fifteen million bushels of sweet potatoes are lost every year through disease. Much of this loss can be prevented by proper selection of seed and treatment of seed beds. Black rot, foot rot, surface rot, and scurf or soil stain are the principal diseases causing loss. Much of this loss can be prevented by practicing the following suggestions:

Select seed free from spots or rots of any kind.

Treat seed with a solution of bichloride of mercury (one ounce in eight gallons of water) for ten minutes.

Replace old soil in seed bed with new soil, or preferably sand, from a high place in the woods or from where potatoes have not been grown.

Disinfect (after old soil is removed) bed and surrounding area with a solution of formaldehyde (one pint formalin to 30 gallons of water).

If bed is temporary, move it each year to where sweet potatoes have not been grown at least for eight or ten years.

Do not use manure in beds or fields from stock to which sweet potatoes have been fed unless the potatoes were previously cooked.

Rogue out and destroy by burning diseased plants in seed plots and fields.

Use a three or four-year rotation.

EXTRAVAGANT USE OF STRAW

Roughage Should Be First Offered to Animals in Hay Rack—Use Refuse for Bedding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The use of at least a limited amount of bedding for beef cattle is advisable, but the extravagant use of straw, coarse hay, etc., for this purpose should be discouraged. All such roughages that are to be used for bedding, either for fattening or breeding animals, should first be offered them in the hay rack and that which is refused, used for bedding. If stover is fed the stalks, while somewhat difficult to handle, make satisfactory bedding material and should be used for this purpose rather than burned or otherwise disposed of.

PLANS FOR FARM BUILDINGS

Bureau of Public Roads Has Prepared Working Drawings of Various Structures.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Working drawings for farmhouses and bunkhouses, designed to meet conditions in various sections of the country and assist in obtaining additional labor for farms, have been prepared by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. Working drawings have been prepared also for storage houses for small grains, corn, combined grain and corn, and other crops. Copies of these plans will be sent free on application to the division of rural engineering of the bureau.

WHAT PUZZLED PETE.
The clergyman of a small town had a fine orchard and one night it was robbed, the only clue left being the robber's finger-print on an overripe peach. The minister had an enormous photographic enlargement of the finger-print made and, with it under his arm, accosted the man he suspected.

"Pete," he said, "someone robbed my orchard last night."

Pete gulped nervously. "Is that so, sir?" he said.

"Yes, Pete, that's so," replied the minister; "but the thief left his mark behind him and I shall easily find him."

"Yes, sir," said Pete, huskily.

"Yes. Do you see this, Pete?" and the minister held up the huge enlargement of the finger-print.

Pete made a gesture of despair. "I see there ain't no use denying it, parson," he said. "I done it. But I sure would like to know where you got that impression of my corduroy pants."

Many Princess Anne People Have a Weak Part and Too Often It's The Back

Many people have a weak spot. Too often it's a bad back. Twinges follow every sudden twist. Dull aching keeps up, day and night. Backache is often from weak kidneys. In such case a kidney medicine is needed.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys. For backache and urinary ills. Princess Anne people recommend the remedy.

Mrs. H. B. Wherrett, Extension Antioch Ave., Princess Anne, says: "I had been troubled nearly all my life with kidney complaint and had severe backaches at times. If I did anything that caused me to stoop over, I suffered very much with severe pains through the small of my back, especially when I straightened up. At times I could see little, black specks and fiery flashes in front of me. During the last attack, I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I have had no further trouble. I cannot recommend this medicine too highly."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wherrett had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Who Benefits By High Prices?
You feel that retail meat prices are too high. Your retailer says he has to pay higher prices to the packers.

Swift & Company prove that out of every dollar the retailer pays to the packers for meat, 2 cents is for packers' profit, 13 cents is for operating expenses, and 85 cents goes to the stock raiser; and that the prices of live stock and meat move up and down together.

The live-stock raiser points to rising costs of raising live stock.

Labor reminds us that higher wages must go hand in hand with the new cost of living.

No one, apparently, is responsible. No one, apparently, is benefited by higher prices and higher income.

We are all living on a high-priced scale. One trouble is, that the number of dollars has multiplied faster than the quantity of goods, so that each dollar buys less than formerly.

Walter Siddons Accidentally Shot

Walter Siddons left his home in the vicinity of Cokesbury, Dublin district, Monday of last week carrying a 22-calibre rifle, saying that he was going to shoot sparrows. Late in the day his body was found in a dense portion of the woods near his home, with the rifle lying near the body. The weapon contained an empty shell, which had recently been fired. Examination of the body showed that a bullet had entered the head at the base of the forehead, just over the nose, and had taken an upward course, penetrating the brain and causing what is supposed instant death. A coroner's jury viewed the body and rendered a verdict of accidental death.

Mr. Siddons was 20 years old and it is supposed that his rifle became entangled in the thick underbrush by which his dead body was surrounded and that it was accidentally exploded in his attempt to extract it.

Funeral services were held at his late home last Thursday morning conducted by the Rev. C. C. Derrickson and the interment was in Emmanuel Church Cemetery. The pallbearers were: Messrs. William Holland, Albert Reynolds, Norman Dryden, Walter Payne, Okley Taylor and Elton Marriner.

Big Easter Dance At Salisbury

Captain Colons and his committee are busily preparing for the big Easter dance, to be held in the Armory at Salisbury, on Monday, April 21st. The Armory will be decorated with Easter lilies and other flowers and refreshments will be served at the Armory. Captain Colons promises all who attend a good time, as this will be the largest dance of the season. The committee of arrangements are: Capt. Colons, Miss Nellie Rider, Miss Louise Graham, Dr. John M. Toulson, Captain Clinton Brotemarkie, Mr. Edgar Phillips, Mr. C. C. Dorman and Mr. Eugene Todd.

Don't forget that the war bills must be paid. Keep your War Savings Stamps and buy more.

Meeting At Chestertown of Peninsula Methodists March 25th

The program of the Wilmington Methodist Episcopal Conference, which will begin its annual session in Chestertown, Md., on March 25th, has been announced. Bishop McDowell will administer the Lord's Supper on the morning of March 26th, and at night the anniversary of the Board of Education will be addressed by Rev. Drs. Henry G. Budd and Ezra S. Tipple.

The routine conference work will begin on Thursday morning, and continue every morning. In the afternoon Miss Mary J. Wheeler will preside at the meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, and Rev. Dr. J. R. Sumwalt will speak. At night Rev. W. G. Harris will preside at the anniversary of the Epworth League, and Rev. Dr. Brumley is to deliver the chief address.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will occupy Friday afternoon, Mrs. S. A. Hill presiding, and Mrs. McDowell, the Bishop's wife, delivering the address. The Centenary program will be given at the night session. Speakers at the joint anniversary of the Board of Temperance and Anti-Saloon League on Saturday afternoon, will be Rev. Dr. Clarence True Wilson and Wayne Wheeler; Rev. E. C. Prettyman will preside. Rev. Dr. R. K. Stephenson is to be the leader at the conference love feast on Sunday morning and Bishop McDowell will preach. In the afternoon a memorial service will be held, and deacons and elders ordained by the bishop with an evangelistic service at night.

The conference will end on Monday morning, March 31st, when the appointments will be announced. The Laymen's Association will meet on March 28th, and be in session the entire day.

Tomato And Strawberry Growers Meet

A Tomato and Strawberry Growers' Association was organized Saturday afternoon at Marion. The strawberry growers met to discuss the marketing of the strawberry crop, and to select an auctioneer and make arrangements for an auction block. A committee was appointed to look after the arrangements for the strawberry growers, as follows: Messrs. Aden Davis, Charles Holland and Paul Gunby.

The tomato situation was also discussed and the work of the Tomato Growers' Association was explained by Mr. George Kemp, secretary of the County Association. Mr. T. D. Nicholls and County Agent C. Z. Keller spoke on the value of co-operation and organization among farmers.

It was decided to form a Tomato Growers' Association as a unit to the County Association. Thirty-five of the leading farmers became charter members and elected the following officers: President, Aden Davis; vice-president, Charles Holland; secretary and treasurer, Paul Gunby. Next meeting will be held at Marion in the Hall, Saturday, March 22nd, at 3 o'clock.

Harry C. Dashiell Now Postmaster

Mr. H. Lawrence Brittingham has resigned the office of postmaster of Princess Anne and accepted a position with the Garroll Electric Company, of Washington, D. C. Last Saturday afternoon Mr. Harry C. Dashiell, of Princess Anne, was designated by the American Surety Company, surety on the bond of the retiring postmaster, to take charge of the office as acting postmaster until a regular appointment is made. Mr. Dashiell took charge of the office yesterday (Monday) morning. Mr. Brittingham has been postmaster of this town for the past six years, having been appointed by President Wilson in the fall of 1913. His first term expired in 1917, at which time he was reappointed and his appointment for a second term confirmed by the United States Senate.

Draft Boards Soon To Go

All of Maryland's draft boards—local, district and medical advisory bodies—will formerly pass out of existence the last day of this month, according to instructions received by Adj.-Gen. Henry M. Warfield, director of the draft machinery in Maryland.

As no men have been drafted for months, the boards practically ceased to function quite a while ago. But General Warfield said that there remains a mass of records and supplies to be collected, tabulated and prepared in proper shape to send to Washington. This will require much work before March 31, by which time the records must be sent there.

It is not what you make; it is not what you spend. It is what you save that counts in the end. Put your money in War Savings Stamps and make it work for you.

STATE FERRY IN OPERATION SOON

By April 15th Annapolis-Claiborne Steamer Should Be Working

Authority was given by the State Roads Commission last Wednesday to its chairman, Frank H. Zouch, to close the deal for the establishment of a State ferry between Annapolis and Claiborne as provided for by the Legislature of 1916. This was done by the passage of a resolution empowering Mr. Zouch to enter into a contract with Frank McNamee and Hampden D. Mephram, of New York, for the operation of a steamer between Claiborne and Annapolis for a period of three years, the steamer to make two trips a day in the winter and three trips a day in the summer.

The State Roads Commission is to pay the contractors $1,500 a month for operating the steamer. This amounts to $18,000 a year and is approximately $1,000 a mile, or the amount ordinarily spent per mile for State roads maintenance. The State is to provide wharfage facilities, but all other costs are to be borne by the contractors who will receive, in addition to the subsidy from the State, the amount of revenues received from passengers and freight. It is expected that the charge for carrying passengers will be 50 cents for one way, or 75 cents for the round trip, the round trip tickets being good for two days. The charge for automobiles will be $2 each way.

The contract is now being drawn and it is expected that it will be signed in a few days and the steamer brought to Baltimore. The vessel is the Patton and is now in New York. She is 206 feet long, 50 feet beam, and is said to have a speed of 16 miles an hour. She has a capacity, it is said, of about 50 automobiles and 1,000 passengers.

It is expected that the ferry will be in operation by May 1st, and that it will start off making three trips a day, the first being at 4.30 o'clock in the morning, from Annapolis. On this trip the steamer will carry the mails to the Eastern Shore, enabling the people of that section to get the Baltimore papers by breakfast time.

Victory Loan April 21st

The Victory Liberty Loan campaign will open Monday, April 21st, and close three weeks later—Saturday, May 10th.

Secretary Glass has announced the dates, together with the fact that short-term notes maturing in not over five years would be issued instead of longer term bonds. The amount of notes to be offered was not disclosed, but it has been generally understood that the loan would be for a minimum of $5,000,000, with the Treasury reserving the right to accept all oversubscriptions.

Mr. Glass said the interest rate on the notes and the amounts to be exempted from taxation would not be determined until a week or two before the campaign, as they would be based upon financial conditions at that time. It was intimated, however, that the notes might bear interest in excess of 4 1/2 per cent., the interest rate on the third and fourth loans.

Agricultural Year Book Now Ready

Congressman J. Charles Linthicum, who represents one of the Baltimore city districts in Congress, begs us to announce the fact that he has quite a supply of the very valuable Agricultural Year Books for distribution to the farmers of Maryland and that a request by letter or postal card giving the name and address of the farmer desiring same will insure the delivery of the book to the address given. As Mr. Linthicum represents a city district where the people are not interested in this publication he is desirous of sending as many of these books as possible to the Eastern Shore of Maryland. The book contains very valuable information and our farm readers would find it a valuable addition to their home. All that is necessary is to address a letter or postal card to Hon. J. Charles Linthicum, Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

Scrutinize Paper Money Over $5

A warning has been sent out to watch paper money in denominations over $5 because of large number of raised Federal Reserve banknotes which have been found in circulation. Many of these notes have been found and it is impossible to tell how long they have been in circulation.

A number of $5 notes have been raised to $10 notes. The counterfeiters have very skillfully marked "10" on all four corners of the note and in some way have worked it into the fabric so that it is very hard to tell. The only sure way is that there is a picture of Lincoln on the $5 note and one of Jackson on the real $10 notes. Some $2 notes have been raised to $10 and $20 notes.

ATHLETIC MEET ON APRIL 23

Will Be An Interesting Occasion—Public School Notes Of Interest

At a meeting of the Board of Education last Tuesday afternoon, Dr. William Burdick, Supervisor of Physical Education for the State of Maryland, addressed the Board upon the subject of an athletic meet for Somerset county, in order to carry out the school law and the State Board's directions in this respect. Somerset's date will be the first on the State schedule and the athletic meet will take place on April 23rd, and will be held on the school grounds of the Washington High School in Princess Anne. The Board of Education has so ordered and every effort will be made to make the occasion one of interest and profit. It is not likely that a parade of school pupils will take place, as such events are a strain upon pupils and their teachers. It is probable, however, that the High School and other pupils who are to participate in the meet may follow a band of music for a brief parade to the high school grounds. It was also ordered that the colored schools should have their athletic meet on Tuesday, April 22nd.

The Maryland Society of the Sons of the American Revolution informed the Board of Education that two framed copies of the American Creed will be presented to the two High Schools on Maryland Day, March 25th. The presentations are expected to be of an impressive character. The County Superintendent has requested Dr. G. T. Atkinson to make the presentation at Crisfield and Dr. C. W. Wainwright the one at Princess Anne. The principals of the schools will accept the gifts on the part of their schools with appropriate ceremony.

The Attendance Officer reported that she had visited since February 10th, 17 schools and 29 homes. She had sent out 46 notices to parents and interviewed 18 parents in the School Board Office. Forty-seven warrants had been issued for illegal absences of pupils up to the date of the Board meeting. Persons whose children have been kept at home upon illegal grounds will no doubt have to face a Justice of the Peace and pay the usual fine.

The Board of Education, in view of the fact that quite a number of teachers had absented themselves from their school duties, which the law requires to extend from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., or had been irregular in calling school as well as closing them, determined that teachers shall hereafter report each month not only the days upon which they had been absent, but also the hours that had been missed together with the reasons for such absences.

Thrift Habit Growing

Giving an interesting sidelight on the growth of the thrift habit in the United States, the Comptroller of the Currency reports that in the national banks alone the deposits last year increased more than $370,000,000, over the greatest total ever previously attained, reaching the record-breaking figure of $15,423,081,000. This gives an idea of the investing strength of the nation which will be expected to manifest itself when the Victory Liberty Bonds are issued later in the year.

In the five states constituting the Fifth Federal Reserve District the crop revenue last year amounted to $1,574,240,000—an increase over the figure of 1917 by more than $200,000,000. A great part of this money was immediately placed to savings accounts and is therefore available for investment in the government's war securities which the Treasury Department is offering—in the form of war savings stamps—and will issue—as Victory Liberty Bonds—to pay the expenses incurred in smashing the Hun.

Because of the profitable interest rate offered and by reason of the guarantee which stands behind every war stamp and government bond it is thought probable that the 1919 issue of War Savings Stamps will find tens of thousands of purchasers and that the Victory Liberty Loan will be speedily absorbed. This will be the last war loan of the government to be floated by popular appeal. It is needed to pay for victory, or the immediate demands of victory, and to return the khaki-clad boys from overseas and send them to their homes.

Ex-Mrs. Fairbanks Reweds

Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, who obtained her final divorce decree from the photoplay star March 4th, was married last Wednesday in the Church of the Ascension, in New York, to James Evans, Jr., a broker of Pittsburgh, Pa. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., young son of the bride, whose custody she won, was present. Her father, Daniel Sully, once heralded as the "Cotton King," her mother and a few intimate friends attended.

TOMATO GROWERS WANT $25 TON

Maryland and Delaware Farmers Set The Price Last Thursday

A meeting of the Peninsula Tomato Growers' Association was held at Seaford, Delaware, last Thursday, directors of the various county and local associations of Maryland and Delaware being present. The following Maryland counties were represented: Harford, Kent, Caroline, Dorchester, Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester. Sussex and Kent counties, Delaware, were represented by a large number of tomato growers from the various communities of those counties. The situation was discussed and the cost of growing tomatoes in the Maryland and Delaware territory was considered.

The growers feel that they are entitled this season to $30 a ton for tomatoes, the same figure that was allowed by the Government last year, as it is estimated that the cost of growing the crop this year will be as high, and probably higher, than last, with no assurance that the average yield can be increased. However, the tomato growers of the peninsula, in order to protect the canning tomato crop in the states which pack 60 per cent. of the canned tomatoes of the country, and realizing that the price paid last year was under war time conditions, and that the country is now in the reconstruction period, with a trend toward lower food prices, feel that they cannot afford to accept more than a 20 per cent. reduction in the contract price of tomatoes with the same cost of growing the crop as last year.

The association passed a resolution stating that $25 a ton is the minimum contract price which will allow the grower the smallest margin of profit, and that the tomato growers of its territory can't afford to contract below this figure at the present cost of production. It was also thought necessary by the association that the acreage in the three states of Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey should be reduced 40 to 50 per cent. for the best interests of both grower and canner, as the market conditions are such that an over production this season would give a large supply of canned tomatoes on the market with very small prospects for a normal acreage and pack next season.

The farmers of this county and in other sections of the peninsula, would probably find it more profitable to grow a reduced acreage of tomatoes this season and increase their acreage of corn and forage crops, and raise more livestock. Cover crops can also be used to advantage in the improvement of the soil in many communities.

Reports of the various associations throughout the territory of the three states of Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey indicate that the Tomato Growers' Association is being extended to all unorganized communities. The five southern counties of New Jersey have formed a Federation of Tomato Growers with 1200 members, who control a large proportion of the 25,000 acres usually devoted to tomato growing in these counties. Associations have been formed in a number of communities of Sussex and Kent counties, Delaware. Probably one of the largest Tomato Growers' Associations in that state has been formed at Bridgeville, with 175 members at the first meeting.

The present indications are that this organization of farmers will probably be one of the strongest in this section of the country, having a membership of over 3,000 farmers in the Tri-States. In many communities the majority of the tomato growers have become members of the associations and the leading men of the different localities are giving them their support, realizing that now is the time for farmers to organize and come together for the protection of their industry.

Reduced Postage Rates July 1st

Information from the Postoffice Department is to the effect that on and after July 1st of this year, the war time postage rates will be rescinded and the rates prevailing before the war will again rule. That is, first class letter postage will go back to two cents instead of the present rate of three cents and the old rate of one cent will be established for post cards and drop letters coming under that class. This will be welcome news to thousands of people who have business with the postoffice and who have had to contribute revenue to the Government during the war because of the advance made in the postal rates.

Wm. H. Logue, Jr., industrial commissioner of the Board of Trade of Baltimore, has a fresh, crisp check for $1,000, which he wants to deposit as a starter on a fund of $100,000 with which to finance an overseas aeroplane flight from Baltimore to Europe.

$40,000,000 VICTORY FUND

Big Effort Of Presbyterians In The U. S. Now Going On

The Local Committee having in charge the great drive of the Presbyterians of the United States to raise the big Victory Fund of $40,000,000, will be prepared to do their part of the work on Sunday, March 23rd, when the canvass for this fund begins. All active ground has been laid for this big event and it will take but a short time on the day appointed to finish up the job. Every Presbyterian is interested in this movement and is waiting for the solicitors to call on him to get his subscription.

This movement was launched in all the churches of that denomination the first Sunday in March, and will be continued in a thoroughly organized way until Sunday, March 23rd, when 130,000 duly appointed canvassers will visit every Presbyterian in the United States during the hours of two to five to secure his pledge for this fund.

To help put across this first Victory Fund campaign of the New Era Movement—as the Presbyterians call their "drive"—leading ministers all over the country have been released from their churches for sixty days, each man being in charge of about half a dozen Presbyteries or local group of Presbyterian churches. There are about three hundred presbyteries in which there are nearly 10,000 churches.

The entire amount to be raised has already been apportioned among the churches of the country, and a systematic campaign has been inaugurated by flying squadrons, consisting of men and women of prominence in each community, to secure advance pledges from larger groups.

WILSON LANDS AT BREST FRIDAY

The President Left At Once For Paris For Peace Work

President Wilson and the party which went with him from the United States left Brest for Paris at 11 o'clock last Friday night. The President and Mrs. Wilson disembarked from the George Washington at 9.45 o'clock.

President Wilson put in several hours on board ship Friday mapping out his plans for his Peace Conference work. During the day the President received a wireless dispatch outlining the situation with regard to the phase of the negotiations which are to come up soon after his arrival in Paris.

The voyage has been of great benefit to President Wilson, who throughout has obeyed the injunctions of Rear-Admiral Grayson, his personal physician, to rest. The President has recovered entirely from the cold from which he had been suffering and also the fatigue consequent on his hurried trip to Washington and is in rigorous condition and ready to take up the tasks awaiting him.

Discarded Garments To Be Collected

The most comprehensive collection of used clothing, shoes and bedding ever undertaken will be conducted by the American Red Cross during the week of March 24th-31st, when the American people will be asked to donate ten thousand tons of cast-off apparel to the helpless refugees in Allied countries. The need of clothing in many lands is one of the most serious reconstruction problems, but it is expected that a long step toward solving it will be taken when the thousands of Red Cross chapters begin their collection of discarded garments.

Every kind of garment for all ages and both sexes, except such as obviously could not help refugees, is to be accepted. Since the clothes will be subjected to the hardest kind of wear only garments of strong and durable material should be given. They need not, however, be in perfect condition for there are thousands of destitute women in the recovered territory eager to earn a small livelihood by repairing the clothing that will be sent to the needy. In addition to the second-hand garments there will be accepted piece goods, light, warm cotton flannel and other fabrics from which to make clothes for newborn babies, sheeting and blankets and even scrap leather which is needed for repairing shoes. Woolen goods of any kind, soft hats and caps for all ages and sweaters of any kind or size will be welcome, while men's shirts and pajamas that are not longer serviceable as such can be turned into children's garments.

The chapters collecting the clothing will forward it to a central collecting point whence it will be shipped to Europe in vessels of the European Relief Administration. It will be distributed under the direct supervision of American Red Cross Agents.

Be ready for the Victory Liberty Loan. Buy the bonds and keep them. Saving means thrift. Thrift means success.

RED CROSS GIFTS $400,000,000

War Council on Retirement Announces Cash and Supplies Contributed.

WORKERS WILL "CARRY ON."

Five Big Societies in World Wide Plan.
H. P. Davison Heads International American Red Cross Commission.
Dr. Livingston Farrand Permanent Leader of Peace Organization.

Washington.—(Special.)—Henry P. Davison as chairman issues the following statement on behalf of the War Council of the American Red Cross:

"To the American People:
The War Council of the American Red Cross appointed by President Wilson on May 10, 1917, to carry on the work of the American Red Cross during the war, at their request and by vote of the Central Committee, ceased at midnight, February 28.

"Immediately the armistice was signed the War Council instituted studies to determine when the strictly war work of the organization would have been sufficiently matured to enable the direction of affairs to be resumed by the permanent staff. Henry P. Davison, being in Paris when the armistice was signed, summoned a conference there of the heads of all the Red Cross Commissions in Europe to canvass the situation. After considering all the factors it was concluded to make the transition on March 1. The very fortunate choice of Dr. Livingston Farrand as the new chairman of the Central Committee, and thereby the permanent chief executive of the Red Cross, makes possible the consummation of this plan under the most favorable conditions.

Accounts Audited by War Department.
Detailed reports to Congress and a complete audit of its accounts by the War Department will constitute the final record of Red Cross activity during the war. Although it has been the rule to make public all expenditures when authorized and to give detailed information relative to all work undertaken, the War Council in turning over its responsibilities to Dr. Farrand and his associates desire to give a brief resume of Red Cross war time activities to the American people, to whom the Red Cross belongs, and whose generous contributions have made possible all that has been accomplished.

"During the past nearly twenty-one months the American people have given in cash and supplies to the American Red Cross more than $400,000,000. No value can be placed upon the contributions of service which have been given without stint and oftentimes at great sacrifice by millions of our people.

"The effort of the American Red Cross in this war has constituted by far the largest voluntary gifts of money, of hand and heart, ever contributed purely for the relief of human suffering. Through the Red Cross the heart and spirit of the whole American people have been mobilized to take care of our own, to relieve the misery incident to the war, and also to reveal to the world the supreme ideals of our national life.

"Everyone who has had any part in this war effort of the Red Cross is entitled to congratulate himself. No thanks from anyone could be equal in value to the self satisfaction everyone should feel for the part taken. Fully 8,000,000 American women have exerted themselves in Red Cross service.

Has Over 17,000,000 Adult Members.
"When we entered the war the American Red Cross had about 500,000 members. Today, as the result of the recent Christmas membership Roll Call, there are upwards of 17,000,000 full paid members outside of the members of the Junior Red Cross, numbering perhaps 9,000,000 school children additional.

"The chief effort of the Red Cross during the war has been to care for our men in service and to aid our army and navy wherever the Red Cross may be called on to assist. As to this phase of the work Surgeon General Ireland of the U. S. Army recently said: 'The Red Cross has been an enterprise as vast as the war itself. From the beginning it has done those things which the Army Medical Corps wanted done, but could not do itself.'

"The Red Cross endeavor in France has naturally been upon an exceptionally large scale where service has been rendered to the American Army and to the French Army and the French people as well, the latter particularly during the trying period when the Allied World was waiting for the American Army to arise in force and power. Hospital emergency service for our army in France has greatly diminished, but the Red Cross is still being called upon for service upon a large scale in the great base hospitals, where thousands of American sick and wounded are still receiving attention. At these hospitals the Red Cross supplies huts and facilities for the amusement and recreation of the men as they become convalescent. Our Army of Occupation in Germany was followed with medical units prepared to render the same emergency aid and supply service which was the primary business of the Red Cross during hostilities. The Army Canteen service along the lines of travel has actually increased since the armistice. "As for work among the French people, now that hostilities have ceased, the French themselves naturally prefer as far as possible to provide for their own. It has accordingly been determined that the guiding principle of Red Cross policy in France henceforth shall be to have punctilious regard to its every responsibility, but to direct its efforts primarily to assisting French relief societies. The liberated and devastated regions of France have been divided by the government into small districts, each officially assigned to a designated French relief organization.

"The American Red Cross work in France was initiated by a commission of eighteen men who landed on French shores June 13, 1917. Since then some 9,000 persons have been upon the rolls in France, of whom 7,000 were actively engaged when the armistice was signed. An indication of the present scale of the work will be obtained from the fact that the services of 3,000 persons are still required.

"Our American Expeditionary Force having largely evacuated England, the activities of the Red Cross Commission there are naturally upon a diminishing scale period. Active operations are still in progress in Archangel and Siberia.

"The work in Italy has been almost entirely on behalf of the civilian population of that country. In the critical hours of Italy's struggle the American people, through their Red Cross, sent a practical message of sympathy and relief, for which the government and people of Italy have never ceased to express their gratitude.

Supplies and Personnel to Near East.

"The occasion for such concentration of effort in Italy, England, Belgium and even in France having naturally and normally diminished, it has been possible to divert supplies and personnel in large measure to the aid of those people in the Near East who have hitherto been inaccessible to outside assistance, but whose sufferings have been upon an appalling scale. The needs of these peoples are so vast that government alone can meet them, but the American Red Cross is making an effort to relieve immediately the more acute distress.

"An extensive group of American workers has been dispatched to carry vitally needed supplies, and to work this winter in the various Balkan countries. In order to co-ordinate their activities, a Balkan commission has been established, with headquarters at Rome, Italy, from which point alone all the Balkan centers can be reached promptly.

"A commission has just reached Poland with doctors and nurses, medical supplies, and food for sick children and invalids. An American Red Cross Commission has also been appointed to aid in relieving the suffering of Russian prisoners still confined in German prison camps.

"An important commission is still working in Palestine. Through the war special co-operation has been given to the Armenian and Syrian Relief Commission, which was the only agency able to carry relief in the interior of Turkish dominions.

Red Cross Will Continue.

"Red Cross effort is thus far flung. It will continue to be so. But the movement represented by this work has likewise assumed an intimate place in the daily life of our people at home. The army of workers which has been recruited and trained during the war must not be demobilized. All our experience in the war shows clearly that there is an unlimited field for service of the kind which can be performed with peculiar effectiveness by the Red Cross. What its future tasks may be it is yet impossible to forecast. We know that so long as there is an American army in the field the Red Cross will have a special function to perform.

"Nothing could be of greater importance to the American Red Cross than the plans just set in motion by the five great Red Cross societies of the world to develop a program of extended activities in the interest of humanity. The conception involves not alone efforts to relieve human suffering, but to prevent it; not alone a movement by the people of an individual nation, but an attempt to arouse all people to a sense of their responsibility for the welfare of their fellow beings throughout the world. It is a program both ideal and practical. Ideal in that its supreme aim is nothing less than veritable 'Peace on earth good will to men,' and practical in that it seeks to take means and measures which are actually available and make them effective in meeting without delay the crisis which is daily recurrent in the lives of all peoples.

"For accomplishing its mission in the years of peace which must lie ahead of us the Red Cross will require the ablest possible leadership, and must enjoy the continued support, sympathy, and participation in its work of the whole American people. It is particularly fortunate that such a man as Dr. Livingston Farrand should have been selected as the permanent head of the organization. The unstinted fashion in which all our people gave of themselves throughout the war is the best assurance that our Red Cross will continue to receive that co-operation which will make its work a source of pride and inspiration to every American.

Mr. Davison, as chairman of the International Commission of the American Red Cross, has undertaken to represent the American Red Cross in the preparation of the program for extended Red Cross activities, and will spend the next several months in Europe in consultation with other Red Cross societies for that purpose.

THE WAR COUNCIL OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS.

The Days of Chivalry.

Knighthood in its highest phase was an outgrowth of the sentiment that produced the Crusades and was at that period made up of youths belonging to aristocratic families, who after lessons in the skillful use of arms gave their services to a distinguished leader and followed him to the wars. They were young men of high ideals and when their deeds of valor rendered them worthy of the honor they were admitted to that knightly system of feudal days called chivalry. Even a king was honored by the stroke of the flat of the sword that made him a member of the charmed circle. The preparation for the investiture of knighthood was indeed a religious ceremony, for, robed in white, the young candidate fasted, watching over his arms, and took a solemn oath never to allow his lips to be soiled by falsehood, always to defend the right and to be the champion of defenseless women. And so he won his spurs of gold. A strange and beautiful flower was chivalry growing out of those dark days of bloodshed and wicked deeds.

Intellect Among Savages.

Again, we will be told that savages lack intellectual power. This is the most persistent as well as the egregious delusion of all. There are many men of intellectual power among the savages, men who rank as high mentally, perhaps, as Kant or Darwin. The fallacy upon which a contrary idea is based can readily be exploded. Take the African savage who cannot count beyond four. He will readily exchange four skins for four tin cans. Give him eight tin cans and take eight of his skins and he is bewildered. The transaction must proceed by fours, since he cannot count beyond that number. Here we have no lack of mental power. The savage has no multiplication table, no arithmetic at all. Arithmetic has been handed down from generation to generation among the civilized until we forget that it is not natural. We count mechanically. —Exchange.

No Farm Too Large or Too Small for a Cleveland

CAPABLE of doing a great volume of work; yet so designed and so easily operated that it gets into the corners.

The owner of a small farm can use the Cleveland just as profitably as the owner of a big one. And another advantage is that it works on all kinds of soils. It lays its own track as it goes along and does not pack the soil.

The Cleveland tractor has proven itself able to plow from 8 to 10 acres per day in medium soil, with a two-bottom Oliver plow.

Use it with an Oliver Plow for best results!

Oliver plows were designed especially for tractor service. The rolling coupler and jointer bury all trash and weeds at the bottom of the furrow. The stop device maintains an even depth of furrow. A trip rope enables the operator to control the plow from his seat on the tractor. The plow points enter and leave the ground first, affording good clean furrows clear to the ends of the field.

Come to our salesroom any time and I will show you many other good features of the Cleveland tractor and Oliver plows.

HER KINDLY DEED

By JESSIE ETHEL SHERWIN.

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

"Oh, girls—did you ever!" The tennis group dropped bat and ball and ran to the high garden hedge and peered through it. Coming down the road, leading a sleek, comfortable-looking cow, was Raymond Worth.

He had the manly stride and wholesome, healthy face of a young farmer. He was not such, but his father had been one and early rural training had left its impress.

He colored slightly as he noted the group beyond their leafy shelter. Their twittering hurt and embarrassed him. He hurried his steps and winced as the echo of suppressed laughter reached him, for he was oversensitive and he had made out Celia Willis beyond the hedge. She had not joined in the ridicule, but Raymond did not know that. He sighed heavily. He was neither uncouth nor ignorant, but he was conscious that he did not exactly line up to the standard of the average young man of the town as to the finer social entities.

Not that he was not invited to their various gatherings, but he was plain in manner and speech; he did not "shine," he was practical and did not enter into idle folly. His parents were dead and had left him quite an estate, but he wasted no time at the village billiard hall, visited the property he owned daily and did not disdain to wear his working suit and lend a helpful hand where hard work pressed.

Raymond led a rather lonely life. With the exception of Mary Dorr, an old-time family servant, he had no company. She made things neat and comfortable, but she was now on the shady side of life and he felt the lack of companionship of his own age. When he led the cow into the barn Mary came out and joined him.

"Oh, dear! what a handsome, fine-looking animal," she commented. It took her back to the old times and her dimmed eyes brightened. "But why in the world did you buy her?"

"I didn't," answered Raymond. "Mr. Lane, the farmer, is closing out. He owed me a bill and I had to take the cow in payment."

"What are you going to do with her?"

"Sell her to some other farmer." "Yes, I guess that is best, although she'd make it seem more homelike and natural to have her around," said Mary, longingly. "She's a beauty, good for six quarts morning and night. But what would one do with the extra milk? I'm getting too old to attend to all that. We'll have some rare sweet cream over tomorrow, though."

Raymond loaded some boards into a light wagon next morning. Amongst his holdings was a large tenement house in a poor quarter of the town. A porch needed some repairs, and he planned to attend to this, get home at noon and take the cow across country to a farmer to whom he knew he could sell it. He had just completed his work on the porch when he noticed an acquaintance, a young doctor, leaving the house.

"Somebody sick, Doctor Allen?" he inquired.

"More than one, Worth," came the reply, gravely spoken. "It's the babies. There's nine little ones cooped up in those close, crowded rooms. You do your duty in the way of keeping up good sanitary conditions, and the ventilation isn't bad, but it's the diet. Those children are just wasting away for the need of fresh, wholesome milk. It's pretty near chalk and water, the second-rate stuff these people buy. But they have to, with milk doubled in price. The nine will be five before the summer is over if the babies don't get better nourishment."

Raymond stood for some moments absorbed in deep thought. Then he went to one of the lower flats. Here lived Mrs. Wood, a widow, who supported herself by sewing. She had a son, Hardy, who was lame in one limb and who helped the family income by attending to a newspaper stand mornings.

"Mrs. Wood," spake Raymond, "you can help me out with a certain problem, and Hardy can earn a couple of dollars a week extra. I wish to present a milk cow to the tenement for the benefit of the babies, you to take charge of milk distribution and Hardy to take care of the animal and milk her, an art I can soon teach him."

Mother and son were enraptured with the idea. "You are bestowing a rare blessing," said Mrs. Woods. "Miss Willis and her sewing circle do a great deal in providing clothing for the little ones, but you are bringing them life, health and happiness."

The milk undertaking brought great interest and satisfaction to Raymond. The little ones thrived and the most pleasurable duty of Raymond was in providing feed and comfort for Molly.

One day Raymond, visiting Molly's quarters, caught the echo of voices. He thrilled. Mrs. Woods was telling the story of his benefaction to Miss Willis. The latter stood cowering the placid, pleasant animal, and, noticing Raymond, extended her hand. She did not speak. Her limpid eyes met his own with a grateful glance and then she burst into tears for sheer joy and hid her face upon Molly's sleek, velvety neck.

And later she did not disdain riding home in Raymond's truly democratic wagon, and every time her glance met his own he knew that each approving glow of those lovely eyes was drawing them closer and closer to the portals of mutual love.

ROOSEVELT AUTHOR AT NINE

Even at That Early Age, What Future President Had to Say Was Entertaining.

Theodore Roosevelt's first book, like many of his fifty-odd later ones, dealt with natural history, but, unlike his later works, it was written entirely in pencil in an old notebook, an exchange states. Theodore was nine years old at the time. The title of the book is on the first page: "Natural History on Insects." By Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. Under it comes the "preface": "All these insects are native of North America. Most of the insects are not in other books. I will write about ants first." He did, and what he had to say about them is decidedly entertaining:

"Ants are divided into three sorts for every species. These kinds are officer, soldier and worker. There are about one officer to ten soldiers and one soldier to two workers." He tells about the common black ant and the brown path ant and various other kinds of ants; he tells about spiders and lady-bugs and fireflies and horned "beetles" and dragon flies and "misquito" hawks. "All the insects that I write about in this book," he adds, "inhabit North America. Now and then a friend has told me something about them, but mostly I have gained their habits from observation."

The author of "natural history on insects" added to his volume a note or a crayfish. "I need not describe the form of a crayfish to you," he writes. "Look at a lobster and you will have its form."

SLOW GROWTH OF GRAMMAR

Interesting to Note Its Progress Since the Days of Chaucer and Shakespeare.

In the days of Chaucer there were undoubtedly differences among writers which made their grammar and spelling seem singular to us; yet crude though they were, the art of literary composition was well advanced.

That, however, was not the greatest age; it came in the Elizabethan period; and while the literary peculiarities of Shakespeare's style were strongly defined, it could not be said in any sense that they revealed lack of knowledge in either grammar or spelling, the standards of that day being suited to the culture of the time.

And a great advance had been made over the days of Chaucer. In the days of Addison, Johnson, Swift, Congreve and Goldsmith we find a great advance with more unity in both grammar and spelling.

The authorized version of the Bible in the line of literary workmanship noted the greatest advance of all and reached a point which has not been surpassed if, indeed, equalled.

There was a certain latitude in spelling. It is true, to which we today look back with interested curiosity; but even that was not the result of ignorance, but rather of custom, which allowed the latitude, and it was in no sense a literary disfigurement.—Christian Herald.

Salvation Army.

The Salvation Army is an organization formed upon a quasi-military pattern, for the revival of religion among the masses. It was founded in England by the Methodist evangelist William Booth, about 1865, under the name of the Christian Mission, the present name and organization being adopted about 1878. It has extended to the continent of Europe, to India, Australia and other British possessions, to the United States, South America and elsewhere. Its work is carried on by means of processions, street singing and preaching, and the like, under the direction of officers entitled generals, majors and captains. Both sexes participate in the services and direction of the body on equal terms. Besides its religious work, it engages in various reformatory and philanthropic enterprises. It has no formulated creed, but its doctrines bear a general resemblance to those common to all Protestant evangelical churches, and especially to those of Methodism.

Just Passing the Time.

It was during a season of hard times at Cripple Creek, the streets were crowded with idle miners, and the city authorities, taking advantage of the fact, had a good amount of work done putting in sewers and paving streets. Mulligan, who toiled in the mines at other times, was not above earning a little extra money whenever possible, and had taken over a job at digging ditches. One morning his friend chanced to pass him as he was laboriously shoveling earth. "Hello, Mulligan! What are you doing there?" the workman leaned on his spade and made a long pause before answering: "Oh, Ol' fount Ol' world work just while Ol' was idle, boy."

Rain Parasols.

Parasols are of ancient lineage, but before umbrellas became common an article resembling a parasol was used by the ladies to keep off the rain. These were called "quitsasols," a name derived from the Spanish; they were of stiff muslin, were of various colors and were imported from India by way of England. After these came umbrellas, which were also made of stiff linen, but the linen was coarse and the umbrellas large and bulky. In 1771 a noted doctor and a famous painter tried to introduce the fashion of using umbrellas to keep off the sun, but they were rejected in the public opinion as a ridiculous affectation.

GOOD CARE FOR SETTING HEN

Attention Given Fowl Plays Important Part on Number and Condition of Chicks.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The kind of care and attention given a setting hen during the process of hatching eggs plays an important part on the number and condition of the chicks when hatched. See that the hens are made comfortable on the nest, allow them to come off only once a day to receive feed and water.

If there are any that do not desire to come off themselves, they should be taken off. Hens usually return to their nests before there is any danger of the eggs chilling, but if they do not go back in half an hour in ordinary weather, they should be put on the nest. Where a large number of sitters are kept in one room it is advisable to let them off in groups of from four to six at a time. The eggs and nests should be examined and cleaned, removing all broken eggs and washing those that are soiled; in the latter case the soiled nesting material should be removed and clean straw added. Nests containing broken eggs that the hen is allowed to sit on soon become infested with mites and lice, which cause the hens to become uneasy and leave the nest, often causing the loss of valuable sittings of eggs. In mite-infested nests, the hen, if fastened in, will often be found standing over rather than sitting on the eggs. Many eggs that are laid in the late winter and early spring are infertile. For this reason it is advisable to set several hens at the same time. After the eggs have been under the hens from five to seven days, the time depending somewhat on the color and thickness of the shells—white-shelled eggs being easier to test than those having brown shells—they should be tested, the infertile eggs and dead germs removed, and the fertile eggs put back under the hen. In this way it is often possible to put all the eggs that several hens originally started to sit on under fewer hens and reset the others. For example, 30 eggs are set under three hens at the same time, ten under each. At the end of seven days we find on testing the eggs from all the hens that ten are infertile, which leaves us 20 eggs to reset, which we do by putting them under two hens, and have the remaining hen sit over again after she has set only seven days. In this way considerable time can be saved in one's hatching operations.

POULTRY NOTES

The pullets and the year-old hens are the best egg producers.

Market all cockerels not wanted as breeders at as early a date as possible.

A "chicken" is a young fowl, usually under six months of age. It becomes a "fowl" after that period.

One pound of feathers can be secured from five ordinary fowls, or from ten ducks, or from four geese.

Whole corn is the proper food for sitting hens. They should have green food, grit, and pure drinking water.

Eggs for hatching should be carefully selected, well-formed, with good shells, and kept in a temperature of 50 degrees to 60 degrees F.

The chick worth having is the chick that releases itself from the shell with vigor, life and vitality; that comes jumping, as it were, into life.

A time-saving plan is to set hens in pairs, and giving the chicks hatched from both to one hen, allowing the other hen to go back to laying.

In salting the mash dissolve sufficient salt in the water with which the mash is to be moistened. In this way the salt will be more evenly distributed. An ounce of salt is about right for 100 fowls.

Utensils of Culture.
Foreign visitors at our shores observe with surprise how few of the average American bedrooms are supplied with writing tables or desks of any description. Lack of finer culture may be directly traced to the fact that many American housewives are so addicted to the habit of keeping everything neat that the litter usually found on tables and desks is quite unbearable in their sight. If one has to go to the garret or the top shelf to find a book or a bit of paper, a sheet of classical old music or any of the appurtenances of learning it is not apt to be indulged in as frequently as if the means were directly at hand.

Antiquity of Shorthand.
Some form of shorthand was known to the ancient Greeks and Romans. There appears to be little doubt that the orations of Cicero were reported with a skill and rapidity equal perhaps to those of many modern stenographers. It is, however, difficult to state just how old is the system of abbreviated writing. The Greeks called it tachygraphy. Xenophon is believed to have employed this system of taking notes of the lectures of Socrates, which would take it back to the fifth century B. C. This is disputed by some authorities, but there seems to be no doubt about its use in the first century.

Latin a Living Language.
For anything like a parallel to the romance of Hebrew, after having been so long numbered with the dead tongues, becoming today a living, spoken language, we must turn to Latin, though the analogy is not perfect. Through all the dreadful days of barbarism in Europe the Roman Catholic church helped to preserve that language from oblivion. When Greek had all but perished from the knowledge of mankind at large, when even Homer was forgotten, the language of the Caesars rendered international communication possible.

SMOKING TOBACCO FACTS FROM THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA

The Use of Flavorings Determines Difference in Brands

The Encyclopaedia Britannica says about the manufacture of smoking tobacco: "On the Continent and in America, certain 'sauces' are employed—the use of the 'sauces' is to improve the flavor and burning qualities of the leaves." Which indicates that a smoker's enjoyment depends as much upon the flavoring used as upon the tobacco. Your nose is a sure guide in the matter of flavorings. Try this simple test with several tobacco brands: pour some tobacco into your palm, rub briskly, and smell. You will notice a distinct difference in the fragrance of every brand. The tobacco that smells best to you will smoke best in your pipe, you can rest assured. Carefully aged, old Burley tobacco, plus a dash of pure chocolate, gives TUXEDO Tobacco a pure fragrance your nose can quickly distinguish from any other tobacco. Try it and see.

LOCATIONS FOR HOG RAISING

Well-Drained Farm Possessing Rich Soil That Will Produce Forage is Desirable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An ideal location is on a well-drained farm possessing a rich soil that will produce grasses and other forage as well as the grains needed for fattening the hogs. This does not mean, however, that only those farmers holding rich, level lands should raise hogs, for as a matter of fact hogs are most easily handled on farms that are somewhat rolling. For the production of forage crops the rolling farm is often as good as the level one, and it often has the added advantage of shade and a better water supply. The hill farmer does not have the best situation in all things, but in many instances he has certain advantages which he does not appreciate.

It is an advantage to locate in a hog-raising community. There are many small problems in management which may be learned through actual experience in one's own community. In such cases the older breeders have for a long time been in contact with local conditions, and a new man may profit by their experiences without spending several years acquiring one of his own. Then, too, if a whole community will raise a certain grade or breed of hog, it can obtain a reputation for its product as a community such as an individual never could hope to win. When the buyers learn that a type or breed of hog which they desire is to be obtained in unlimited numbers in a certain locality, they will naturally turn there first to buy the animals. All of which tends to decrease the difficulties of growing and marketing for the small breeder.

The question of a market must always be considered, especially the facilities for reaching it and the type of hog it demands. Most communities have been successfully connected with the large central markets by the railroads, but these will be of little avail if the roads to the stations are poor. Good roads are of inestimable importance, for, among other things, they enable the farmer to market his products at any and all times, thus taking advantage of any favorable fluctuation in the market prices. As to the type of hog the market demands, that must be determined by local inquiry, but in order to bring the highest market price hogs must be well finished and fat. The greatest demand is for 200 to 300 pounds hogs, and farmers generally obtain the most profit by marketing their hogs at weights ranging from 250 to 300 pounds.

It is amazing how hard many politicians will work to bury themselves.

The United States is 700,000 dwellings short, but so far as reported no one in Princess Anne has had to sleep out of doors.

Again daylight saving, and for another season Old Sol will look ashamed every morning as he gets up and sees by the clock how late he is.

Many of the people that are now kicking on prohibition were too busy to attend the caucuses primaries that nominated the legislators that ratified prohibition.

Some merchants won't advertise because they say that they never read advertisements themselves. If so, it costs them a lot more for their living than is necessary.

Congress has decided to stick by the seniority rule in naming committee chairmen, but the younger members will occasionally be permitted to move to adjourn if they are very respectful.

Some of the people who paid $50 per seat to hear President Wilson in New York, were perhaps the same ones who passed up 25 cent lecture tickets to hear him when he was a college professor.

Now if the people will estimate their income tax payment on the same basis that they estimate their wealth while trying to get admission to swell society, the government will get a good revenue.

A newspaper correspondent claims the postal service is improving as the soldiers in France are now getting letters written only last October. If these reckless and imprudent postal clerks are not mighty careful, they are liable to work themselves out of a job.

With cheap automobiles to be built now for $250, many thrifty people will conclude they can't afford not to borrow the money and have one. And with all the automobiles to be on the road as the prices come down, it will take a periscope to see over the heads of the crowd on Sunday afternoons.

Some people's idea of cleaning up their homes and places of business is to sweep a lot of dirt out on the walk in front. Some folks here in Princess Anne highly approve the idea of waste paper cans along the street as they can fill them with rubbish that people always formerly disposed of themselves.

THE LEOPARD AND HIS SPOTS

"Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard his spots?" asked the prophet Jeremiah.

Some people seem to think the German leopard has an entirely new and spotless skin. He has, for the time being at least, kicked out his kaisers and his crown princes. He has put on the clothes of democracy. But people do not change their nature when they change their policies.

All parties in Germany united to give their approval to the course of the Kaiser's government. The socialists in the main gave their hearty approval to the tearing up of the treaties guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium.

It will be remembered that the German government persuaded the Russians to disarm and go home by promising them a peace "without annexations or indemnities." Then when they were helpless, it went in and proceeded to annex a large share of Russia and demanded and collected vast indemnities. The great majority of the Germans approved of this vile and infamous treachery.

The German troops participated quite generally in outrageous barbarities. The deportation of French and Belgium girls to work as slaves in Germany was one of the most terrible and infamous crimes in history. The German government gave its approval to the bloody massacre of 1,000,000 Armenians by the Turks. Little protest was ever made against it by the German people.

Since the revolution few Germans have shown any consciousness of wrong or repentance for these and other atrocious deeds. They threw down their authority because it was not an efficient instrument for the achievement of their national aims, not because it violated the laws of God and man.

No the people who put their trust in German professions and German democracy should cultivate a more sophisticated knowledge of the world and its

THE CIVIC CLUB IDEA

Every period of our history shows the working out of some new idea. This is true not merely in political, national and State development, but in the life of each local community, and it has a particular application here in Princess Anne.

The distinctive idea of the second decade of the present century might be described as "Civic Progress." It is not wholly new. The Village Improvement Societies that were formed all over the country many years ago had the same motive to some extent, but their purpose was more to improve the physical appearance of a town.

All over the country organizations are now being formed with differing names, but one purpose. The title "Civic Club" is very commonly given, but anyone of many other names would be equally descriptive. Their purpose includes that of the old improvement societies, but it is much broader. It is to unite all the forces of the community in one big movement to accomplish things that need to be done. That not only includes improvement in exterior appearance of the community, but many other things also.

These are times of combination and co-operation. Our towns have had too little of this spirit. Industrial operations have vastly increased their efficiency by systematic organization and the spirit of co-operation. But in most towns the people are working principally on their own selfish ends. As a result the community is very slow to accomplish the things it ought to do and might do. There is no co-operation.

Every individual person in a town like Princess Anne has something he can personally do to help on the cause of town progress. It may not be anything costing him time or money. It may be simply giving his support to all good public causes. However, people who wish to see the community advance should be willing to give some time and some money to help it.

The advantage of an organization of the type of the new civic clubs is that they help unite all elements in favor of some definite plans for community advance. The first thing to be done is to get together and talk over the needs of the community, to see what needs to be done. In many places they do this, but it all ends and fizzles out in mere talk. What is needed is some active working organization of the civic club type which after a reasonable amount of discussion, will organize some kind of a program of community betterment and then will work on it until that programme is achieved.

The things that are being accomplished in many places by the working out of this program are simply astounding. It is becoming realized that we have resources in any community that are only half utilized. There are plenty of people who will work for public causes if you will give them a definite program to work for. And there are plenty of people who will give to public causes and will stand taxation for progressive improvements, if you will convince them of the benefits to be gained.

Among the ends being gained in this way are improved school buildings, development of playgrounds, campaigns for better streets, roads and sidewalks, a general drive for cleaning up and beautifying the town, etc. The field is a very large one and there are no end of things that can be done by united effort.

The civic club movement brings people together, it draws them out from the cliques and sets that tend to divide a town up and destroy its energy, it establishes the basis for a systematic organized effort for town advance. Although great good has been done in Princess Anne by this excellent organization that has labored in the past for community progress, we need something along this civic club line that shall unite all forces in a combined push for public improvement.

If you would be successful learn to save. Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps will give you a start.

Order Nisi

L. Paul Ewell, Attorney, Ex-parte. Trust created under mortgage from Felix Lake to Sadie E. Adams.

In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, Maryland. No. 270 Chancery.

Ordered that the sales made and reported by L. Paul Ewell, attorney, for the sale of real estate in the above cause described, be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 15th day of April, provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper printed in Somerset County once in each of three successive weeks before the 15th day of April, in the year nineteen hundred and nineteen.

This report states the amount of sale to be $800.

BEATING PRICES DOWN

A speaker from Seattle, State of Washington, suggested at the recent conference of governors and mayors at Washington, D. C., that the mayors of cities make an effort to reduce the prices of necessities of life. He suggested that they call in their home merchants and ask them to take steps to get prices reduced all around.

This is something along the line of a movement started recently by the Flint, Mich., Board of Commerce. They called together 550 retailers of that city and got them to agree to reduced prices. As a result some of them must have done business at a loss. But they report an increased trade, which they feel will help develop a broader business for the future.

It is a question whether retail merchants should be asked to take such a step before producers and wholesalers reduce prices. Retail trade is being conducted on a narrow margin of profit, closer than ever before.

But at least the retail trade should stand together in a determined effort to persuade producers and jobbers to come off their high perch. Merchants may well give salesmen to understand that the present high prices produce suffering and tend to upset business. Producers and wholesalers would much better be content with small profits, rather than bring on a business depression.

The wholesale trade frequently gets the idea that it practically owns a certain set of retail dealers and that these men will buy certain lines regardless of whether prices asked are right or not. It would pay the retail trade to show independence and inform the travelling salesmen that their people must make every effort to bring prices down if they wish to keep trade. A determined show of resistance by the retail merchants to the present level of prices ought to have some effect toward breaking it.

Why Colds Are Dangerous

You are often told to "beware of a cold," but why? We will tell you: Every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for the more serious diseases. People who contract pneumonia first take cold. The longer a cold hangs on, the greater the danger, especially from the germ diseases, as a cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs of consumption, diphtheria, scarlet fever and whooping cough. The quicker you get rid of your cold, the less the danger of contracting one of these diseases. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a great reputation as a cure for colds and can be depended upon. It is pleasant to take.

THE PREVENTION OF WAR

It should be apparent by this time that the great majority of the Americans demand some kind of an international organization to prevent war. The world will simply ruin itself if it allows these terrible conflicts to break out periodically. Another war would be far more costly in lives and money.

The constitution as already proposed may need a good deal of overhauling. But the people will be profoundly dissatisfied unless some effective form of organization is devised to give the world protection it needs against quarrelsome and aggressive nations.

The situation should be met by all elements in a spirit of mutual concession and compromise. Those who have framed the constitution should invite criticism and be willing to hear all objections and meet them so far as is reasonably possible. And those to whom this form of constitution seems very faulty, must devote themselves to the effort to frame and substitute some workable plan that will meet the situation more effectively.

A Timely Suggestion

The next time you have a cough or cold try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is pleasant to take and you are sure to be pleased with the relief it affords. This remedy has a wide reputation for its cures of coughs and colds.

STOMACH TROUBLE QUICKLY VANISHES

Tonall Helped Him At Once—Now Feels Elegant

"I was in a horrible condition," says Horace E. Kidd, 5 East Gay avenue, York, Pa. "I could not retain food of any kind in my stomach. Doctors claimed I had chronic catarrhal gastritis. I had no appetite and no desire to eat the most tempting food. I would get pain around my heart caused by gas forming in my stomach. My friends began to notice the change in my disposition.

"A personal friend of mine was telling me about Tonall and how it improved his condition so I thought I would give Tonall a trial and I tell you the results have been more than I expected. I am now eating regularly and have not had any vomiting spells for over a week and feel so much stronger. There is no use talking, Tonall has done wonders for me.

Tonall is sold by T. J. Smith & Co., Druggists, Princess Anne, Md. [Adv.]

Mr. R. Mark White, County Treasurer for Somerset county, visited the automobile show in Philadelphia last week.

Mr. Glenn W. Price, of the United States Naval Hospital Corps, at Portsmouth, Va., spent a 48-hour furlough with his mother, Mrs. F. D. Price, at "Pine Knob."

Mr. L. James Wilson, who has been spending some months at the home of his son, Dr. James E. Wilson, at Clarkburg, West Virginia, returned to Princess Anne last week.

The March term of the Circuit Court for Wicomico County convened Monday morning of last week with Judges Duer and Bailey on the bench. From the large number of cases on the docket it is likely the court will be in session two weeks.

The Princess Anne Chautauqua began in the Auditorium last Tuesday afternoon and continued Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and nights. The audience was large at all the entertainments. It is gratifying to know that arrangements have been made for a return of the Chautauqua next fall. There is no doubt that it will be welcomed as a relief from many entertainments that carry with them little real benefit.

The knitting department of the Princess Anne Chapter of the Red Cross has received a request from the Government for a large number of knitted garments for the refugee women and children of the devastated portion of France and Belgium. Thousands of these garments are requested of the women of the United States, and Princess Anne Chapter and the local organizations throughout Somerset county will begin at once to fill the quota requested of them. This work is very urgent and every woman and girl who can do knitting is requested to enroll themselves at once for this work.

Mrs. D. O. Draper, of Kansas City, Mo., is visiting Mrs. B. P. Marquis at "Pine Knob."

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Elliott, who have been spending six weeks in Baltimore and Newark, N. J., have returned to their home in Revell's Neck.

Former Postmaster H. L. Brittingham spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. H. L. Brittingham, and returned to Washington last Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Robert F. Maddox returned to Princess Anne last Saturday. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. S. A. Hoblitzell, of Belair, who she had been visiting for some weeks.

Mrs. Emma Hoffman, of Pocomoke City, spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. J. S. Learey, who is visiting at the home of her son, Mr. E. S. Learey, on Beechwood street.

Mr. E. C. Cannon attended the annual banquet of Maryland State National Electrical Dealers and Contractors Association, which was held in Baltimore at the Emerson Hotel, Tuesday, March 11th.

The regular monthly meeting of the Princess Anne auxiliary of the National Red Cross will meet at the home of Mrs. Wm. H. Dashiell, its recently elected president, tomorrow (Wednesday) afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

Col. and Mrs. Henry J. Waters motored to Baltimore last Thursday. They returned last Saturday afternoon accompanied by their sons, Harry and Wilson, students at Donaldson School, who will spend ten days' vacation with their parents.

The Shoreland Club was entertained last Friday afternoon by Mrs. W. H. Dashiell at her home on Prince William street. Those present were: Mrs. J. D. Wallop, Mrs. H. L. Brittingham, Mrs. J. T. Taylor, Jr., Mrs. H. Fillmore Lankford, Mrs. T. J. Smith, Mrs. George Maslin, Mrs. Ralph P. Thompson, Mrs. Charles Fitzgerald, Mrs. William Thompson, Mrs. Joseph G. Scott, Mrs. Earle B. Polk, Misses Ellen D. McMaster and Amanda Lankford. Mrs. Rush Marshall, of Philadelphia, was a guest of the club. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. J. D. Wallop on Thursday afternoon, March 27th.

Tomato Growers' Meetings
Meetings of the tomato growers will be held at the following places this week: Tuesday, March 18th, Costen Station; Thursday, March 20th, Jamestown; Friday, March 21st, Westover; Saturday, March 22nd, Marion. All meetings will be held at 7.30 p. m. except the meeting at Marion, which will be held at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. A meeting is also scheduled for Monday evening, March 24th, at Grace Guild Hall, Mt. Vernon.

NOTICE
THE ANNUAL MEETING of the members of Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Somerset and Worcester Counties will be held at their office in Princess Anne, Maryland, on WEDNESDAY, the 26th Day of March, 1919 at 11 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of electing twelve directors to serve for the ensuing year.

HENRY J. WATERS, Secretary.

COUNTY SURVEYOR'S NOTICE

The undersigned, Special Deputy Surveyor for Somerset County, Maryland, hereby gives notice that he has received a special warrant dated March 14th, 1919, granted out of the Land Office of Maryland, to R. Jerome Landon, for the following described property, lying, being and situate in Fairmount Election District, of Somerset County aforesaid, bounded on the northwest by a parcel of land called "Layfield Select," on the north and northeast by a parcel of land called "Mamokin Beach," on the southeast by a parcel of land belonging to the heirs of Thomas W. Landon, deceased, and on the southwest by a private road leading from the county road down to "Fishing Hole" at the mouth of Teague's Creek, and on or after April 25th, 1919, he shall proceed to lay out and survey the aforesaid property for and in the name of him, the said R. ATTENTION!
Every subscriber to the Maryland and Herald whose pink address slip is marked "18" is requested to pay a year's subscription. If the slip reads January, 1918, or February, March, any other month in the year 1918, it means your subscription has expired and you should send us $1.00 for renewal at once. All address labels marked January, 1919, or February, 1919, are also due and we would thank all subscribers for prompt renewals. The Maryland and Herald is $1.00 a year in advance and the pink label on your paper gives you the information as to when you owe us one dollar.

Marriage Licenses
The following is a list of the marriage licenses issued by the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset County:

White—Emory Nelson, 21, Marian Tyler, 20, both of Crisfield. Nolan Lee Blades, 26, Worcester county, Roxie Brittingham, 18, Somerset county. Clayton Townsend, 21, Mollie Phillips, 17, both of Pocomoke City.

Colored—Roger Woolford, 21, Ven-ton, Nellie James, 18, Princess Anne. Robert Edgar Whittington, 38, Hester Whittington, 42, both of Crisfield. Joseph L. Evans, 21, Minnie Taylor, 19, both of New Church, Va.

A Queer Dependence.
"I think it is odd a ship must depend so upon her anchor."
"Why so?"
"Because even if she parts with it she still keeps her hold."

One Exception.
"I notice your husband has his hammer out on all occasions."
"Oh, no. Not when it is time to put down the carpets."

Out of Count.
Wife—All that you are you owe to me.
Hubby—True; but I cannot convince my divorce lawyer of it.

The Reason.
"How pompous some of these department chiefs are!"
"Yes, but it's usual for official bureaus to have big noses."

Horse Strawberry Plants
I found this plant in the spring of 1915, while it was in fruit. It looked better to me than anything I had ever seen in the way of early berries, and I had some of the plants set out and have fruited them every year since. They bear full every season and seem to be frost proof. The plant is a vigorous grower, has plenty of foliage, stays green through the winter. It blossoms well under the foliage which protects them from frost, and so far there has not been a sign of rust. Last spring (1918), which was an unfavorable season on all varieties of berries, is the first year I had any to ship, and they picked more than 140 crates per acre on the average. They ripen a few days earlier than the Klondike and Missionary. The berry is a large bright red, and runs large through the season. It has a fine flavor and is a hard, good carrying berry. While I do not claim them to be fall bearers, I had lots of berries on the patches last fall, but more on the new patches. They sold well under the block; some loads sold as high as $7.05 per crate. I had them sell as high as 35c per quart in New York. The brokers all like them, and some have spoken for as high as 25,000 plants already. All I shipped on the market I shipped to W. O. & H. W. Davis, New York, the following is what they have to say about them: "At the time the Horse berry is ripened, we consider it a very fine seller. It is a good carrier and sells well on account of its size. At the time this berry is ripened large berries are scarce on the market. They should bring 8c to 10c more than any other berry. It is a valuable berry and a berry that fancy trade looks for. If I were planting berries, I would plant heavy of this variety." I have them for sale this season, one to four thousand, $5.00 per thousand. Five thousand and above, $4.50. First come first served, and the cash orders filled first. I am now booking orders. I also have Klondike, Missionary and Gandy for $2.50 per thousand. J. C. HORSEY, Marion, Md. Adv.

SEED TREATMENT OF IMPORTANCE

Productive Power of Corn Plant Influenced by Attention Given to Kernel.

MUTILATION MOST HARMFUL

Chipping, Cracking and Breaking That Take Place in Shellers and Planters Reduce Productiveness of Plants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Conclusive evidence has been obtained from several lines of work conducted by the United States department of Agriculture to prove that the productive power of a corn plant is influenced by the treatment received by the kernel from which the plant grew from the time it ripened until it was planted. It has been common knowledge that injury to seed corn would reduce its germinability. These investigations have extended beyond germinability and determined the effects of seed treatment upon productivity independent of germinability.

Obtain Good Stand.

A good stand may be obtained by the thick planting of poor seed, but with an optimum stand of plants from injured seed such plants are less productive than the same number from uninjured seed. These results follow when the seed is injured by normal weather conditions as well as when injured by subjection to moisture, freezing and thawing. Mechanical mutilations of kernels similar to the chipping, cracking, and breaking that to some extent take place in shellers and planters reduce the productivity of the plants that grow from such kernels.

Reduce Power of Seed.

The point of value that has been established is that, independent of heredity and independent of germinability, any injury to dormant seed corn reduces the power of such seed to produce a good crop. Seed corn of 100 per cent germination, laboriously secured from injured seed by individual ear-germination tests, is less productive than seed that matured well and was so cared for as to make individual ear testing unnecessary.

Tests under the same environmental conditions of widely dissimilar varieties have brought out the value in long-season districts of making plantings at different periods and using at least two varieties of different seasonal requirements in order better to meet the exigencies of the season and to insure a crop.

FEED BOXES AND HAY RACKS

Faulty Construction Cause of Animals Not Getting Feed Intended for Them.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In many instances animals do not get the feed actually intended for them, due to improper and faulty construction of boxes and hay racks. Many feed boxes are so shallow and small that much feed is wasted as the animals eat from them. In order to prevent this waste the feed boxes should be repaired. They should be at least 18 inches wide and 24 inches long and 12 to 14 inches deep. It is often advisable to feed the concentrates with silage to prevent waste.

Hay racks should be constructed to prevent animals from tossing or pulling hay under their feet. All hay racks should have a tight bottom to prevent the loss of leaves and finer particles of hay. The leaves of hay, especially of the legumes, contain most of the protein and are, therefore, that part of the roughage which the animals need. A few hours work in repairing boxes and hay racks, and at a very small cost, will result in saving sufficient feed to maintain the animals in a satisfactory condition.

AT SERVICE OF ALL FARMERS

United States Department of Agriculture Gives Assistance Costing Nothing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The United States department of agriculture is at the service of every farmer. Not every farmer, however, takes advantage of that service. The department's advice costs the farmer nothing, but the assistance given may save him a great deal—both in time and money.

FARM STOCK

SHEPHERD'S DON'T'S

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

1. Don't keep sheep on wet land.
2. Don't feed moldy or spoiled hay, roots, silage or grain.
3. Don't forget to keep salt and fresh water before the sheep.
4. Don't neglect the sheep in winter. Keep them in good condition.
5. Don't forget to tag the ewes before breeding and lambing time.
6. Don't forget exercising the bred ewe.
7. Don't let the lamb go too long without sucking.
8. Don't neglect to feed the lamb as soon as it starts eating.
9. Don't let parasites kill your lamb for lack of some fresh green pasture.

10. Don't shear your ewes until warm weather comes.
11. Don't tie your fleeces with anything but wool or paper twine.
12. Don't hesitate to ask any questions of the county agent, or write to the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C.

FINISH ANIMALS FOR MARKET

Horses, Cattle and Some Classes of Sheep Can Be Fed Quantities of Roughage.

Animals being fattened for market and animals during the first year of their growth should not be expected to consume large quantities of cheap roughage, but horses, cattle and some classes of sheep that are being carried through the winter can be fed rations carrying appreciable quantities of cheaper roughage, provided they are properly supplemented with nutritious feeds of the right sort, such as leguminous hays or linseed or cottonseed meal.

PROPER WAY TO FEED SHEEP

During Stormy Weather Feed Them in Shed in Long Manger Constructed for That Purpose.

Never feed straw and hay to the sheep by throwing it down in heaps on the ground, but have a long rack for the purpose; and when it is stormy do not allow them to stay out, but feed them inside the shed in a long manger made for the purpose.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

A tablespoonful of blood meal mixed with a little milk is very good for a calf that has diarrhea or other digestive disturbance. It is highly nutritious for a weak calf, too.

The keeping in repair of wire fences is necessary on the stock farm and so the wire stretcher is a handy tool, both in repairing and building new fences.

When oats cost no more than half as much as corn the swine division of the University of Illinois recommends they can be fed profitably to hogs.

Hogs are very sensitive to wind and cold at night and will suffer just as much as a cow or horse in cold open houses.

The best results from feeding skim milk to pigs are obtained when about three pounds of it are fed for each pound of grain.

Silage-fed cattle shed their coats better in the spring and gain quicker and faster than those fed dry roughage.

Clover is an ideal forage for pigs, particularly the young growth coming on after the wheat is harvested.

Ensilage is good stuff to have, but it is not an all-around feed. Some hay and a bit of grain should go with it.

Calves will nibble at hay when they are not more than a week old.

Cleanliness is quite essential for the calf indoors.

PRINCE ALBERT

The National Joy Smoker

SAY, you'll have a streak of smokeluck that'll put pep-in-your-smokemotor, all right, if you'll ring-in with a jimmy pipe or cigarette papers and nail some Prince Albert for packing!

Just between ourselves, you never will wise-up to high-spot-smoke-joy until you can call a pipe by its first name, then, to hit the peak-of-pleasure you land square on that two-fisted-man-tobacco, Prince Albert!

Well, sir, you'll be so all-fired happy you'll want to get a photograph of yourself breezing up the pike with your smokethrottle wide open! Talk about smoke-sport! Quality makes Prince Albert so appealing all along the smoke line. Men who never before could smoke a pipe and men who've smoked pipes for years all testify to the delight it hands out! P. A. can't bite or parch! Both are cut out by our exclusive patented process!

Right now while the going's good you get out your old jimmy pipe or the papers and land on some P. A. for what ails your particular smokeappetite!

You buy Prince Albert everywhere tobacco is sold. Tippy red bags, tidy red tins, handsome pound and half pound tin humidors—and that classy, practical, pocket-sized glass humidors with sponge moistener top that keeps the tobacco in such perfect condition.

Credit Mobilizer.

The unusual name of the Credit Mobilizer, and the size of the scandal that stirred the country in the early '70's in connection with it, have kept it from sinking entirely into oblivion. Comparatively few of the present generation, however, know that it was the fiscal company organized in 1864 to build the Union Pacific railroad. Its stock rose in a few months from 5 cents on the dollar to $300 or $400, and then went out of the market. Dividends of more than 500 per cent were paid. Suspicion was aroused, the promoters quarreled and an investigation was begun, which unearthed the most tremendous legislative scandal in American history. Congressmen and leading government officials were found to have been sold the stock at par in return for their influence and votes in special legislation desired by the concern. Many innocent men were involved with the guilty.

Cozumel.

It is a short journey from the Yucatan coast to the island of Cozumel, or, in our language, the island of Swallows. Cozumel is a drowsy tropic island, blessed with gardens and groves that grow almost of themselves, and luxuriously shaded by a forest of ebony, rosewood, cedar and other trees of great price. Besides all this substantial treasure Cozumel claims that the medieval pirates who haunted the shores of the Caribbean entrusted a part of their booty to the island's soil, either through the desire to pay for Cozumel's hospitality or with the intent to return later and reclaim their hoard. It is fairly certain that the pirates made use of the island as a safe deposit vault, but it is a matter of speculation as to whether the island still holds the ill gotten treasure, for digging has so far been unproductive.

Greek Language Purified.

William Stearns Davis, in a review of European history in the Century magazine, relates that in 1871 the old Greek language had long become so corrupted with Italian, Slavic and Albanian words that it appeared a mere jargon, compared with the tongue of Plato. The very race, it was alleged, had intermarried so freely with all the other Levantine folk, and especially with the Slavs and Albanians, as to make any claim to classical ancestry absurd. But at the same time the French Revolution came to stir the souls and imaginations of all Europe there was an awakening of the old national Greek spirit. The language was purified and gradually brought back closer to ancient models.

Cheated Uncle Sam.

There were whisky rings long before the days of the Billingsleys. In 1872, 238 men were indicted in New York and Washington for conspiracy to avoid the payment of the liquor tax. The ring was made up of distillers, wholesale liquor dealers and employees of the internal revenue office. Many of them, including the chief clerk of the treasury department were sent to prison. It was shown that the combination had cheated the government out of millions of dollars.

Common Experience.

"Now they tell us insanity can be traced to the teeth." "That's nothing new. I know lots of people who have told me they were just crazy with the toothache."

A Mistake.

"Our friend is suffering, he tells me, from insomnia." "And he told my wife all that was the matter with him was he couldn't sleep."

Quite Naturally.

"A man offered to treat me the other day and then made me pay for it." "What a mean fellow!" "Not at all. He was my doctor."

Only Way Left.

Crabshaw—Why do women wear furs in this weather? Mrs. Crabshaw—Why, dear, is there anything more expensive?—Town Topics.

Just So.

Mary—Once I was engaged to a prize fighter. Nell—Why didn't you marry him? Mary—Because he wouldn't give up the ring.

INSOLVENCY.

"What do you make of this? Just as soon as they learned he had wed, this fellow's creditors who had been holding off swooped down upon him." "That's easy. Evidently they regarded his marriage as a failure."

Pen and Sword.

It is with food that wars are won. Though cannons great have roared. Remember this: The pig pen, son, is mightier than the sword.

Exactly.

Just It.

"The prima donna's life must be monotonous." "Why must it?" "Because it is such a sing-song affair."

Too Idealistic.

"Did your friend use crude oil on her furniture as I advised?" "No; objected to anything which was not refined."

Breaking Him In.

Edwin—Just one, dearest! You'll be the first girl I ever kissed. Angelina—Oh! Is that so? Turn your face this way. I'll show you how.

Mixed Up.

"Pretty state of affairs, isn't it?" "Yes, it is an ugly business, but somebody will have to pay handsomely for it."

WANTED HIS "MONEY'S PACK"

German Drummer Balked When He Started to Cross Old Bridge at Troy, New York.

Albany, N. Y., has a historical museum that contains, among other treasures, a bass drum dating back to the great influx of German immigrants which followed the revolution of 1848 in Germany, says Cartoons. This instrument was owned by the first of the wandering "hungry five" bands which appeared in this country after Marx and Engels, the industrious collaborators, wrote the communist manifesto.

The bass drummer was called "Thick Head" Schultz. According to a music teacher now living in Albany, who heard Schultz perform in the '80s, he could play in three different rhythms at once without making the band mad.

At Troy, ten miles up the Hudson river from Albany, was one of those long, old-fashioned inclosed wooden bridges, unlighted within, like a tunnel. Looking through it, as one approached, one saw a tiny spot of light at the far end, as if gazing through a telescope wrong end to.

One day the hungry brass band started across the bridge to play at a barn raising along the road westward. Schultz had paid the nickel toll when he happened to look through the long black space ahead. Then he balked.

"I want my money's pack," he insisted. "By tam, dere is no use my tryin' to dake dis drum trough dot little hole."

BRIGHT COLORS GIVE RELIEF

Simple Method by Which Desk Workers May Avoid Incalculable Injury to the Eyes.

The constant use of the eyes on white paper will in time weaken them and make it necessary to seek other employment, or resort to some remedy. Bookkeepers, proofreaders and those compelled to gaze for hours at a stretch of a white surface, should have a number of bright colors on their desk or near at hand upon which the gaze should be allowed to rest at short periods when the mind is busy with some mental struggle.

The bright colors will give a relief to the long, constant strain on the eye, and it will be astonishing to those who have never resorted to any such remedy to note the relief secured.

Green should predominate. Yellow and red with shades of pink should be used.

Bright-colored blotters and bright-tinted mottoes or picture cards with birds and flowers as well as scroll designs will produce the most relief to weary eyes.

Even a bouquet with green foliage combined with the flowers will give satisfactory results, but this is not as permanent as brightly colored prints that will not fade for a long time.

Advice With Exceptions.

"Take the first job that offers. Do it with all your might. Your worth will soon be recognized by your employer, who will reward you with a 'raise' and with his daughter's hand, and you'll live happily ever after." The returning soldier is already being fed upon this truistic advice which successful old age delights to hand out as it were the sole "secret of success," which it isn't by a jugful. The wise young man, accepting the good will of counsel, discounts in his planning three counter-possibilities: (1) that the first job offered may not be one for which the applicant is adapted; (2) that the employer may not be the all-wise, sagacious, broad-minded person which the success books invariably post him as being; (3) that there either (a) may be no daughter or (b) she may prefer somebody else. With these and other similar qualifications the spirit of the work-hard-and-you'll-prosper wheeze still stands as admirable.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

How to Braze Metals.

In brazing brass, copper, wrought iron and steel, clean the metal thoroughly at and near the joint to be brazed, by scraping or filing. Be sure to fit the edges closely together. If greater strength is required, lap the edges over each other about a quarter of an inch. A good plan is to rivet the edges together to hold them in place. Place brazing material along the joint. Take finely powdered borax, wet it with water and place a little along the seam. Put the article over a charcoal fire, joint down. Heat it slowly and evenly, holding it about an inch above the charcoal. When the brazing material is all melted, rap the part with a hammer, to induce the material to flow all through the joint. If the article is brass or copper, it should be plunged into cold water, and if steel or iron it should be allowed to cool slowly.

The New Wonder Bug.

Queer. Is it not, that germs that cannot be seen with the finest microscope, and cannot be measured with the finest measurement, are so disposed? They live in street cars and omnibuses, and not in steam cars or sidewalks. They thrive in barber-shops and not in dentists' offices. They inhabit churches and theaters alike, but not restaurants nor cafeterias. Queer, is it not, that these little bugs, so very little that they cannot be detected with the microscope, and that they can go through cement and even glazed dishes, are yet so large that they can be held back by the thin meshes of a handkerchief, or the thin stuff that goes into a mask?

KIDNEYS WEAKENING?

LOOK OUT!

Kidney troubles don't disappear of themselves. They grow slowly but steadily, undermining health with deadly certainty, until you fall a victim to incurable disease. Stop your troubles while there is time. Don't wait until little pains become big aches. Don't trifle with disease. To avoid future suffering begin treatment with GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules now. Take three or four every day until you are entirely free from pain.

This well-known preparation has been one of the national remedies of Holland for centuries. In 1896 the government of the Netherlands granted a special charter authorizing its preparation and sale.

The housewife of Holland would almost as soon be without food as without her "Real Dutch Drops," as she quaintly calls GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. They restore strength and are responsible in a great measure for the sturdy, robust health of the Hollanders.

Do not delay. Go to your druggist and insist on his supplying you with GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Take them as directed, and if you are not satisfied with results your druggist will gladly refund your money. Look for the name GOLD MEDAL on the box and accept no other. In sealed boxes, three sizes.

QUICK AND ECONOMICAL TRANSPORTATION

That Nash Trucks deliver their loads punctually when weather and road conditions are bad is said by owners to be largely attributable to the fact that the trucks are equipped with automatic locking differentials.

Proof of the dependability of Nash trucks is the fact that they are hauling the loads of such concerns as: Morris & Company; The Palmolive Company; The Boston Store, of Chicago; The American Steel Foundries; The Standard Oil Company, and others.

A Rousing Preacher.

Among the anecdotes told of the late Rev. Dr. Somerville of Anderson, Glasgow, is the following: When he was assistant to Doctor Bonar at Larbert he had over three miles to walk from his lodging at Larbert to Dunpace, where he generally preached. He used to set off early in the morning, giving thundering knocks on the cottage doors on his route to rouse the late-slumbering inmates, commanding them to come to church, and taking no refusal. One morning he met a quarryman whom, as usual, he urged to accompany him. "Hoo can I come in thae boots?" was the stolid reply. Doctor Somerville took off his own footgear and insisted on an exchange. "Now," he said, "mine are good enough for you to hear in and yours are good enough for me to preach in!"

Record Cold Spells.

Terribly cold spells have been experienced in Europe at various times. During the year 401 the Black sea was entirely frozen over; in 452 the Danube was blocked, and an army passed across it, while the Dardanelles was completely ice-bound during the Christmas of 642. The snow lay in drifts of nearly a hundred feet in height. The Adriatic sea suffered two centuries later, and remained frozen for some considerable time. In 1293 Italy's river courses were blocked with ice and during the same period the Rhine could not be navigated. Severe winters were the lot of those living in England during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, the Thames having been ice-bound on more than one occasion.

Martinique Is of the Past.

Martinique has not been "in the news" since the terrible volcanic eruption of Mount Pelee in 1902, which destroyed the town of St. Pierre at the foot of the mountain, the lives of 25,000 men, women and children, and even the ships at anchor in the harbor. Where once the busy natives piled up in warehouses and on the dock the huge hogheads of molasses, sugar and white rum for which the island is famous, slept through the noonday heat or merrily danced the bamboula in the streets at carnival time, now nothing is left save ruins covered with molten lava or overgrown with creeping vines, with here and there a brilliant lizard frightened from a crevice.

PAY AND FILE INCOME TAX BEFORE MAR. 15

U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau Gives Warning That Severe Penalties Will Be Enforced.

WOMEN WITHIN LAW'S SCOPE; HOW THEY REPORT INCOME

The Income Tax drive comes to a close on Saturday night, March 15.

All payments and returns due on that date under the provisions of the new Revenue Law must be in the hands of local Internal Revenue Collectors before their offices close that night.

The Income Tax is being collected to meet the war expenses. Every person who should and tooted his horn on Armistice Day is now called upon to contribute his share of the cost of winning the war.

The laggards and the dodgers will face severe fines and jail sentences. The Internal Revenue Bureau announces that its officers will check us all up to see that every person who comes within the scope of the Income Tax law did his share.

Where to Pay and File.

Residents of Maryland and Delaware should make their returns and pay their taxes to Joshua W. Miles, Collector of Internal Revenue, Baltimore, Md., or to any of his deputy collectors who are now doing free advisory work on Income Tax.

Payments sent by mail should be attached to the returns and should be in the form of check, money order or draft. Cash payments by mail are sent at the taxpayer's risk of loss.

If you are unable to make your return personally because of illness, absence or incapacity an agent or legal representative may make your return.

If there are any doubtful points as to your items of income or allowable deductions you should get in touch at once with a Revenue officer or a banker for advice.

Women Pay Tax.

Women are subject to all the requirements of the Income Tax. Whether single or married, a woman's income from all sources must be considered.

If unmarried or if living apart from her husband she must make her return for 1918 if her net income was $1,000 or over.

If married and living with her husband her income must be considered with the husband's in determining the liability for a return. Their joint income, less the credits allowed by law, is subject to normal tax. The wife's net income is considered separately in computing any surtax that may be due. Husband and wife file jointly, as a rule. If the husband does not include his wife's income in his return the wife must file a separate return.

Severe Penalties.

The new Revenue Law places severe penalties on a person who fails to make return on time, refuses to make return or renders a fraudulent return. For failure to make return and pay tax on time a fine of not more than $1,000 is named and 25 per cent of the tax due is added to the assessment. For refusing wilfully to make return or for making a false or fraudulent return there is a fine of not exceeding $10,000 and imprisonment of not exceeding one year, or both.

Farmers' Income Taxable.

Every farmer and ranchman who had a fair or a good year in 1918 must heed the Income Tax this year. He must consider all his income as taxable. He is entitled to deduct from his gross income all amounts expended in carrying on his farm. The cost of farm machinery, farm buildings and improvements cannot be deducted. The cost of live stock, either for resale or for breeding purposes, is also regarded as investment.

Overtime and Bonuses Taxed.

Salary and wage earners must consider as taxable every item received from employers and from other sources. Bonuses and overtime pay are to be reported as well as the regular payments.

Allowances for Losses.

Losses sustained in 1918 and not covered by insurance are deductible items if incurred in the taxpayer's business or trade, in any transaction undertaken for profit or arising from fire, storm, shipwreck or other casualty or from theft.

SQUARE DEAL FOR EVERY INCOME TAX PAYER.

Washington, D. C. — "The rights of all persons now filing Income Tax returns are amply protected by provisions for abatements, refunds and appeals," says Commissioner Daniel C. Roper. "Every person can be sure of a square deal. No person is expected to pay more than his share of tax. His share is determined solely by the amount and nature of his net income for 1918, as defined in the law. "Abatement petitions are dealt with open-mindedly. Refunds will be made in every case where too much tax is erroneously collected. "The Income Tax is 'on the level' all the way through."

THIS TELLS HOW TO FIGURE INCOME TAX

Squarely Up to Every Individual to Get Busy by March 15 or Suffer Penalty.

"Don't wait until the final due date, March 15th, for paying your Income Tax and making your return. Avoid the last minute rush. Any person can figure out his liability today as well as he can next week, and if there is any point on which he needs advice he can now get in touch with a Revenue man."

This word of advice is from Joshua W. Miles, Collector of Internal Revenue, Baltimore, who is collecting the Income Tax in Maryland and Delaware. Collector Miles is giving without charge every aid of his office and his enlarged field force to help the people get their payments and their returns in by March 15th.

But the Income Tax men will not pull your door-bell or your coat-tails, according to the Collector's announcement. It is squarely up to every individual to figure out his own case and to get busy if he comes within the scope of the new Revenue law.

Did You Earn This Much?

Every unmarried person who received income averaging $19.25 a week during 1918 and every married couple who jointly received income averaging $38.50 a week should secure at once from the nearest Deputy Collector or the nearest bank a blank Form 1040 A. That form contains the information he will need to enable him to figure his correct net income and any tax that he owes the Government.

The law requires that every unmarried person who had a net income of $1,000 or over and every married person whose net income was $2,000 or over (including the income of husband or wife and the earnings of minor children, if any) must make a return on or before March 15th. And this requirement does not hinge on whether the person owes a tax.

Taxable Income.

An individual must include under gross income all gains, profits and income derived from salaries, wages or compensation for personal service of whatever kind and in whatever form paid or from professions, vocations, business, sales or dealings in property of all kinds, interest, rent, dividends or profits derived from any source whatever. Very few items of income are exempt.

Deductions include ordinary and necessary business expenses, interest paid or accrued on indebtedness, taxes of all kinds except Federal income and excess profits taxes and assessments for local benefits, losses actually sustained, debts ascertained to be worthless and depreciation on buildings, machinery, fixtures, etc., used in business. A further deduction is allowed for contributions to corporations operated for religious, charitable, scientific or educational purposes or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals to an amount not exceeding 15 per cent of the taxpayer's net income as computed without the benefit of the contribution deduction.

The taxpayer is not allowed to deduct any personal, living or family expense, any amount spent for improving property or making good its exhaustion for which an allowance is claimed under depreciation.

Figuring the Tax.

Before figuring the normal tax the dividends are deducted as credits from net income, together with the personal exemption. As in previous years, dividends of domestic corporations are exempt from normal tax when received by the stockholder.

The normal tax rates for citizens and residents are as follows: On the first $4,000 of net income in excess of the credits the rate is 6 per cent; on any further taxable income the rate is 12 per cent.

The surtax rates apply to net income of each individual in excess of $5,000. The personal exemption and the dividends are not deductible before computing surtax. In the case of returns by husband and wife, the net income of each is considered separately in computing any surtax that may be due. Form 1040 should be used for making returns of net income exceeding $5,000, and the instructions on that form will show how to figure the surtax.

Business House Returns.

Employers and others who paid wages, salaries, rents, interest or similar determinable gains in an amount of $1,000 or over during 1918 to any person must file an information return with the Government. Blanks may be secured from the Collector.

Every partnership must file a return showing its income and deductions and the name and address of each partner, with his share of the profits or losses during the past year. Personal service corporations will file similar information for 1918.

INCOME TAX PAYS FOR PUBLIC BENEFITS.

"Viewed in its largest and truest sense, the payment of taxes is payment for benefits received or expected. Only from a narrow and essentially selfish and shortsighted viewpoint can the individual propose to himself the evasion of tax liability as a desirable course of action." —Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Attack On Constitutional Prohibition

First state action in New England toward defeat of nation-wide prohibition was taken last Wednesday afternoon when a resolution attacking the constitutionality of the federal amendment was introduced in the House of Representatives at Providence, R. I.

After pointing out that this state has twice refused to ratify the amendment, the resolution declares that the amendment invests Congress with police powers. It also charges that the amendment conflicts with the state's rights. The resolution directs the state's attorney to take general steps to secure a decision by the State Supreme Court as to the validity of the amendment.

FOUR HUNDRED MILES OF TREES

State Forester F. W. Beesley On "Memorial Planting On Arbor Day"

Arbor Day, by proclamation of the Governor, comes early in April. On this day, many memorial trees will be planted for those who made the supreme sacrifice in the great war and surely there could be no more fitting memorials. Not only will individual trees be planted around the home but there will be extensive planting along the roadsides.

What could be more fitting than planting memorial trees along the State Highway from Worcester to Garrett, passing through Baltimore and seven counties, covering about 400 miles of roadway, of which, eliminating the wooded portions and stretches where planting is impossible, would leave approximately 175 miles suitable for planting?

To make the plan State-wide and include all the counties, an extension from Baltimore to Prince Frederick and another from Rockville to Leonardtown would add 50 miles suitable for planting, and include the remaining counties of the State. This may seem like a large program and could not be carried out in one year. A start should be made this spring and the planting extended from year to year until completed. Different communities and organizations in each county would plant different portions of the roadway and in a few years it should be possible to link these up into a State system, each portion planted to preserve its identity by suitable markers or monuments. The plan offers unlimited opportunities for participation.

The State Roadside Tree Law, enacted in 1914, provides for the planting of trees along the highway and places the protection of roadside trees under the State Board of Forestry. The proper plan of procedure would be for those who wanted to plant to select a portion of the roadway and apply to the State Board of Forestry for an examination of the location to determine the suitability for planting the best species to use and estimated costs and thus work out a uniform system of planting.

The cost of the trees and their planting will vary from $1 to $3 each, depending upon local conditions. After the trees are planted, their care and protection would properly come under the State Board of Forestry. The planting would have to be done in accordance with regulations of the State Roads Commission, as affecting the roadway and the trees should not be less than fifty feet apart. For trees attaining very large size seventy-five feet would be the proper distance, thus requiring from 150 to 200 trees per mile, planting both sides of the roadway.

It would also be desirable for each county to select a particular kind of tree for general planting, thus giving to each county's roadway a distinctive feature. Native species should be used as far as possible. Fortunately, Maryland has so many different kinds of native trees suitable for roadside planting in each county and Baltimore city and not exhaust the list. Under the plan proposed, each community or organization could have its distinctive memorial; yet the combined results would serve as a fitting memorial for the entire State and be of such a character as to increase in beauty and service with the passing years.

A THOROUGH TEST

One To Convince The Most Skeptical Princess Anne Reader

The test of time is the test that counts.

Doan's Kidney Pills have made their reputation by effective action.

The following case is typical.

Princess Anne residents should be convinced.

The testimony is confirmed—the proof complete.

Testimony like this cannot be ignored.

Mrs. Carroll Hastings, stone road, Princess Anne, says: "For nearly seven years I had disordered kidneys and I was miserable and weak. I had a dragging down pain in my back and my heart palpitated. Then again, I had sick headaches and dreadful pains in the small of my back. I was getting worse every day and I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Jones' drug store. The first box cured me of backache and the other symptoms were greatly relieved."

(Statement given October 14, 1907.)

Keep Doan's on hand. On July 25, 1916, Mrs. Hastings said: "I always keep Doan's Kidney Pills on hand in case I should need them. I recommend them whenever I have an opportunity."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hastings had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

How To Get Rich

Do you want to be a capitalist? It's easy. This is the definition of how capital is originally acquired, as framed by Hartley Withers in his authoritative textbook "Poverty and Waste:"

"Capital is defined by economists as wealth set aside to be used in production. A certain amount of it is necessary before any industry can begin its work; because industry implies making or growing something, and during the process of making or growing, those who are at work have to be kept alive out of a store that has been set aside beforehand to that end. Prof. Walker's well known example is that of a member of a savage tribe, living precariously on fish caught from the rocks which jut into the sea, which lays up a store of dried fish, and keeping itself alive thereon, makes himself a canoe and thereafter can paddle in it out of the banks which lie two or three miles from shore, where in one day he can get as much fish as he could catch from off the rocks in a week.

"His store of dried fish was his capital, which he reserved from consumption and kept to live on while making his canoe. Having done so, he has put his capital into a canoe and can let it out to his neighbors, taking payment from them in the form of part of their catch, on which he can live, while he himself builds more canoes and sells them in exchange for labor of the rest of the tribe. The point at which he left off being a mere hand-to-mouth worker and consumer and became a capitalist, was when, instead of eating all the fish he caught, he saved some and dried them so that he might be kept alive while he carried out his canoe-building venture. At every step of its progress, says Walker again, capital follows on law. It arises solely out of saving."

Every man, woman and child can lay aside a part of the proceeds of his labor, beyond what is necessary for his present maintenance, and thus start on the road to capital. The safest and soundest way of putting aside your "dried fish" today lies in the purchase of War Savings Stamps. Even the smallest sums can be put into Thrift stamps which grow into War Savings Stamps. Capital arises from thrift and so thrift means future happiness.

Has Had Stomach Trouble For Seven Years

Theodore Sanford of Fenmore, Mich., has had stomach trouble for seven years and could not eat vegetables or fruit without pain in the stomach and restlessness. By taking Chamberlain's Tablets he is now able to eat vegetables or fruit without causing pain or sleeplessness. If troubled with indigestion or constipation give these tablets a trial. They are certain to prove beneficial.

Will Wilson Run Again?

Certain remarks made by President Wilson, at a luncheon given at the White House to members of the Democratic National Committee on February 28th, conveyed the impression to the guests that he will not run in 1920, but devote his time, after March 4th, 1921, to writing history.

It may well be that these remarks of the President are due to a firm determination on his part not to accept a re-nomination; however, unless such intimations are promptly followed by a definite declaration regarding the matter, many politicians will be inclined to consider the incident as merely a feeler thrown out to test the sentiment of the people.

The President has demonstrated, on numerous occasions, and notably in connection with his trip to Europe, that he is not inclined to let a mere matter of precedent interfere with the performance of what he believes to be his duty; consequently, if he does not run again, it will evidently not be simply because of any scruples against breaking the third term tradition.

It's not what you had, but what you have. Get the saving habit. War Savings Stamps are still being sold.

FARM FINANCE

Finance like surgery or law is a special field. Farming is a special field.

The officers of this bank specialize in finance. Farmers who come to us for advice get advice on finance only—we do not attempt to show them how to operate their farms without invitation.

The service this bank has to offer farmers has mainly to do with the financial end of his business—checking accounts, savings accounts, investments—funds for operating, production, expansion and marketing.

Farmers know what will "pay" in farming operations. Our long experience qualifies us to judge what will "pay" in financing the farm.

State Bank for White Haven

Through the influence of the White Haven Shipbuilding Company headed by Mr. H. W. Robertson, a banking concern has been organized to do business at White Haven. This institution will be known as the White Haven Bank and is incorporated under the banking laws of the State of Maryland with a capital stock of $20,000 divided into 200 shares with a par value of $100 each and will start business with a ten per cent. surplus fund. The stock will, therefore, be sold at $110 a share. The following are among the Directors named in the incorporation papers: J. W. Wingate, W. A. Anderson, H. B. Causey, Linwood Holliday, Jos. Thomas, W. H. Dolbey, J. F. Bloodworth and H. W. Robertson.

As yet, there have been no officers or will be done as soon as the incorporation is gotten through and the first meeting of stockholders called. A new brick bank building will be erected on the Main street of the town and it is hoped to have the institution in readiness to open its doors by June 1st in its own home.

Red Cross Drive For Old Clothing

The problem of clothing the almost naked refugees that are pouring back to devastated homes in the Allied countries is of such magnitude that only the United States can solve it. Accordingly, during the week of March 24th to 31st, the American Red Cross will undertake the task of collecting ten thousands of used clothing, shoes and blankets for these unfortunate peoples. It seems hard to imagine any sort of apparel that would not prove useful to refugees and almost any kind is a godsend, but there are some articles that won't do.

Members of the Princess Anne Chapter of the American Red Cross, Mrs. W. H. Dashiell, secretary, will call upon the citizens of this vicinity for donations to the worthy cause this week.

Ball dresses are the last thing needed by a heartick mother returning to her ruined hearth, but in campaigns for relief garments they have been donated generously. What is needed, is clothing for men, women and children, the plainer and more durable the better.

Petty Thieves In Town

The merchants of our town have been greatly annoyed for some time past by petty thieves who are operating here. Last Wednesday night they secured a ladder and effected an entrance through the second-story back windows of the stores of Messrs. E. O. Smith and Jones & Colborn. Many articles of wearing apparel were taken from the store of Mr. Smith, in addition to about 50 cents in change and about $1 in postage stamps. From the drug store of Jones & Colborn were stolen about $5 in small change, some perfume and a few other small articles.

"My Own United States"

Go and see Mr. Arnold Daly in the patriotic love romance, "My Own United States," at the Auditorium next Friday night, March 28th. This is not a War Picture, but a strong, red-blooded American drama, depicting various incidents and important events in the history of our country—facts that we all should know, most entertainingly presented. It is a thrilling lesson in patriotism, full of startling surprises. Every patriotic American should see this picture.

DEATH CLAIMS F. S. LOCKERMAN

Dies Suddenly At His Home On The Great Annapessex River

Mr. Francis S. Lockerman, one of Somerset's most respected citizens, died suddenly at his residence on the Great Annapessex river on Wednesday last, in the 75th year of his age. Mr. Lockerman had been in poor health for the past three months, which had confined him to his home.

He was born in Baltimore county in 1844 and his father and mother having died during his youth, he went to live with his grandfather, the late Dr. Francis Waters, who was president of Washington College at Chestertown, Maryland, where Mr. Lockerman was graduated. Before his marriage in 1866 to Miss Nannie D. Ballard, daughter of the late Dr. Robert Ballard, of Fairmount, he lived in Baltimore, and after his marriage he purchased the old Ballard residence on the Great Annapessex river, in this county, and continued to reside there until his death.

He is survived by one daughter, Miss Sallie W. Lockerman, and one son, Mr. Craig Lockerman.

Mr. Lockerman was a life-long Democrat and took a deep interest in public affairs. He frequently represented his party in county conventions, but never held public office. He was a man of strong attachments and a fine type of the old Southern gentleman.

His funeral took place on Friday afternoon from his late residence at 3 o'clock, the Rev. Henry E. Spears, of Princess Anne, officiating, and the interment was in the family cemetery on the Great Annapessex river. The pallbearers were, Col. Henry J. Waters, Messrs. William T. Sudler, Frank S. Robertson, Samuel H. Robertson, D. Bowers Maddox and Elijah T. Warwick.

Postmaster Examinations

At the request of the Postmaster General the United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination to be held at Pocomoke City, Md., on April 23, 1919, for the position of postmaster at Princess Anne. This office has an annual compensation of $2,300. Also at the request of the General the United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination to be held at Princess Anne, Md., on April 23, 1919, for the position of postmaster at Pocomoke City. This office has an annual compensation of $2,300.

To be eligible, for these examinations an applicant must be a citizen of the United States, must actually reside within the delivery of the office and have so resided at the time the present vacancy occurred. Applicants must have reached their twenty-first but not their sixty-fifth birthday on the date of the examination.

Application Form 304 and full information concerning the requirements of the examination may be secured from the postmaster at the places of vacancy or from the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C. Applications should be properly executed and filed with the Commission at Washington, D. C., in time to arrange for the examination of the applicant.

Woodmen Elect Officers

With the selecting of Huntington, West Virginia, as the place of the next convention in March, 1921, and the election of officers, the fourth biennial session of the Head Camp Convention of the Woodmen of the World of the jurisdiction comprising Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware and the District of Columbia, came to a close at Hagerstown, Md., last Wednesday night.

The following officers were elected: Head consul, W. W. Tiffitt, Washington, D. C.; adviser, Lieutenant A. L. Thomas, Huntington, W. Va.; banker, E. F. Redinger, Grafton, W. Va.; clerk, H. T. Jones, Fairmount, W. Va.; escort, Marx W. Miller, Hagerstown, Md.; watchman, J. S. Hall, Bluefield, W. Va.; sentry, E. G. Protzman, Morgantown, W. Va.

Death Of Mrs. Frances A. Pilchard

Mrs. Frances A. Pilchard, wife of Mr. Stephen A. Pilchard, died at her home in Parksley, Va., on Saturday, March 15th, after a lingering illness, aged 66 years. Funeral services were held at her late home Monday of last week and interment was in the family burying ground at Parksley, Va.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two daughters (Mrs. John Smullen, of White Haven, Md.; Mrs. William Jones, of Stockton, Md.) and four sons (Messrs. Kniles T. and Maurice L. of Newport News, Va.; Harry C., of Pocomoke City, and Oley W. Pilchard, of Princess Anne).

Money spent is money gone. Money put into War Savings Stamps is wisely invested.

BUY VICTORY LIBERTY BONDS

Pay Cash If You Can—If You Cannot, Then Borrow The Money

As a general rule people do not like to go in debt. We have been raised that way in this country. We don't like to be in debt. It makes us feel at a disadvantage. And yet there are debts and debts. There are some that are bad business; others are the best kind of business. Most of us realize this when we think it over.

Take for instance the money owed towards the payment of a Victory Liberty Bond. Would you for a moment consider it a reprehensible debt; one that you should be ashamed of? A debt for a Liberty Bond could not come under this ban. It is different, very different indeed. It is the sort of debt that increases your own self respect and adds to your neighbor's respect for you. It gives you a higher standing in your own estimation and it increases your standing in the community.

And another thing; that Victory Liberty Bond will come nearer being the right sort of indorsement for you at the bank than anything else you might mention. After you have paid it off and squared your account with the government and your own American conscience you will have reason to feel a little proud of yourself. Then get ready at once to do your part when the Victory Liberty Loan is offered.

A Liberty Bond is the government's solemn promise to pay at a given time the sum nominated on the face of the bond. It is good, yes, even better than a Gold Certificate. The latter is money in hand but it does not pay you interest automatically. A Liberty Bond does pay you interest and a very good rate of interest at that. No one could go in debt for a better investment because more than 100,000,000 Americans and the entire resources of the United States are behind that promise to pay, and as surely as tomorrow follows today every dollar of interest will be paid when it is due and the bond will be redeemed at its full face value when it reaches maturity.

Important Farmers' Meetings

County Agent C. Z. Keller has arranged to have Dr. T. B. Symons, State Director of Extension Service of Maryland State College of Agriculture, give a talk on the value of farmers organizations before the Jamestown Tomato Growers' Association and Farmers Club, in the Church Hall, Jamestown, Wednesday evening, March 26th. A supper will also be held by the church. All farmers and their wives are urged to attend this meeting.

Another important farmers meeting has been arranged by the County Agents of Worcester and Somerset counties for Thursday evening, March 27th, at Pocomoke City. Dr. T. B. Symons, Prof. F. B. Bomberger, Mr. John Ennis, of Pocomoke City, and Mr. George W. Kemp, secretary of the Somerset County Tomato Growers' Association, will be the speakers.

Meetings will be held this week as follows: Tuesday, March 25th, Hopewell, at Roach's school house; Wednesday, March 26th, Jamestown, at the Hall; Thursday, March 27th, Pocomoke, at the High School; Friday, March 28th, Westover, in the Hall; Saturday, March 29th, Salisbury, in the Court House. All meetings will be held in the evenings at 7:30 p. m., except the meeting at Salisbury which will be held in the afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Renew Your Dog Tax Before June 1st

Under the Dog Tax Law, passed at the last session of the Legislature, owners of dogs in the counties of the State must take out annual license for every dog owned on June 1st. The licenses taken out on dogs for 1918 will expire May 31st, 1919, and new licenses and tags must be secured on or before June 1st if the owner is not to be in default of the law. The Justices of the Peace for Somerset county will have their new supply of blanks and tags sometime in the early part of May, so as to give everybody ample opportunity to attend to this matter before June 1st. Under the law it is the duty of the State's Attorney to prosecute all cases of negligence on the part of owners of dogs who fail to comply with the law. As there is at least one Justice of the Peace in every district of the county, dog owners will not be put to the trouble or expense of coming to Princess Anne to take out these licenses, but can apply to the local Justices of the Peace and secure their blanks and dog tags.

TOMATO MARKET PUZZLES

Canners At Sea As To Needs For Summer Pack

That the tomato canners are up against a tough proposition in the matter of contracting for the contemplated summer pack was the statement made last Thursday by a leading canner of Baltimore. Not only is the canner up against it, but the farmer as well, according to this authority, since, if the packer cannot name in advance his prospective requirements, the farmer will be in doubt as to how much of his land to devote to tomatoes.

The trouble largely is the unsettled state of the market. Tomatoes have declined in price three times since the armistice was signed. Coupled with this is an apparent lack of demand for the packed goods, a state of affairs which seems to be nation wide. Retailers who stocked up when prices were high in the fall are loath to take their losses and are holding up the prices.

The public, on the other hand, is just as loath to pay the prices the retailers are asking. This has created an unnatural state in the market, and while there is no appreciable glut or surplus in the hands of the packers or jobbers for this time of the year all the packers admit that their goods are moving so slowly as to cause some fear that there may be a considerable left-over supply when the new season arrives.

Another feature which is giving some concern to the packers is the fact that the War Department has millions of cans of foodstuffs which it does not now know what to do with. While the war was in progress it was the effort of the Government to keep on the other side a supply of foodstuffs to last six months and on this side a whole year's supply. This was done in the matter of canned goods, it is said, and when the armistice was signed there were in the Baltimore zone warehouses, scattered over Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and the District of Columbia, approximately 120,000,000 cans of tomatoes alone, not to mention other canned goods such as peas and corn. There are still in these warehouses, according to Capt. L. G. McArthur, who is in charge of the canned goods department of the local quartermaster's zone, from 75,000,000 to 80,000,000 cans of tomatoes.

Troops Will Stop Over In Baltimore

Adjutant-General Henry M. Warfield received last Tuesday from the War Department a letter which, while explaining that it will be impossible for the Twenty-ninth and Seventy-ninth Divisions to be debarked at Baltimore, stated that the Maryland troops in those divisions may stop over on their way to Camp Meade for such home-coming celebrations as the city may desire to give.

General Warfield, who appreciates the force of the reasons given for not debarking the troops at Baltimore, feels that the action of the War Department in granting stop-over privileges makes possible the military parade of the troops from this State, upon which the people have set their heart, as well as other appropriate celebrations.

The department states that the big transports cannot be brought into the Baltimore harbor, and that to transfer to smaller boats would lessen the efficiency of the general transportation system. But in recognition of the long campaign made by General Warfield to have the Maryland troops brought to Baltimore, the department explained that upon arrival in New York the State's men would be segregated and sent to Camp Meade, with the right of stop-over here.

Jap Slayer Convicted

Dr. Norbu Ishida, the Japanese alienist, last Thursday was found guilty of first-degree murder for the killing of Dr. Geo. B. Wolff, an associate. Chief Justice Burke sentenced Dr. Ishida to life imprisonment at the Court of Towson, Maryland.

Santry of Dr. Ishida, who killed Dr. Wolff December 21st last at the Shepard Enoch Pratt Hospital, Baltimore, was the principal issue involved. Alienists called by the defense and prosecution differed widely.

Boys' Agricultural Clubs

There are now eight large boys' agricultural clubs in the schools of the county. Meetings were held last week at Oriole and Princess Anne High Schools. Meetings of clubs this week will be held at Lawsonia, Bedsworth, Marion, Fairmount Academy, Perry-hawkin and Pocomoke City. One hundred boys have now enrolled in the pig contests to be conducted in the county this year.

MARYLAND MUST ELEVATE YOUTH

State Board Of Education Takes Up Serious Problems

The physical elevation of the youth of Maryland last Thursday occupied a large part of the attention, followed by action of the State Board of Education at its headquarters in McCoy Hall, Baltimore. Figures were submitted by Dr. M. Bates Stephens, superintendent of education, showing an alarming condition among young men.

"It seems to me," said Dr. Stephens, in a report to the board, "that the time is at hand when this board should undertake a vigorous program to adjust our public schools and their work to the present social order by having a plan of education in keeping with present needs of society. It may be that the public school is the greatest social organization in American life, but the revelations which have been forced on our attention by recent events are quite convincing that this institution, of which we are the trustees for Maryland, has not reached its highest plane of usefulness and efficiency."

In the first draft call for Maryland there were 21,644 young men, ranging between 21 and 31 years of age, of whom 9,117 were rejected as physically unfit for military service. In other words, 23.6 per cent. of our best young men suffer from physical defects. It is true that the average for the nation (23.1 per cent.) was but a trifle better than the rate for Maryland, but there is a practical agreement that the percentage is entirely too high and that, by precautionary measures, it can be greatly reduced. Greater stress on school sanitation, proper school house architecture, mandatory medical school inspection instead of the present optional law and larger provision for physical education in the schools will be no small contribution toward better health conditions.

Dr. Stephens' suggestion was adopted and the board with redoubled energy will proceed to eradicate physical defects in the counties to which its jurisdiction is limited.

Dr. William Bundick, supervisor of physical education, stated that the response on the part of the County School Boards to hold athletic meets this year is the best ever. All the counties have arranged dates for white pupils and 17 of the counties will hold a field day for colored pupils.

In connection with this Americanization drive, it was suggested that the board make an inquiry and find out how completely our County Boards of Education are living up to the laws of 1918, making it a requirement that the American flag shall be displayed from every school house in the state. The flag typifies, in a wonderful way, the ideas on which our national life is built. The school will continue as the nursery of our citizenship, and deserves the dignity which the presence of our flag suggests.

Goals Of The Presbyterian Church

The New Era Movement of the Presbyterian Church in the United States is urging the Presbyterian Church to put through the following program:

First—A complete survey of the needs of the local, national and world fields, to determine the definite task of each church and the whole Church.

Second—The enlistment of 1,000,000 members for definite Christian service, of 5,000 young men and women as Christian lay workers, of 5,000 young men as Christian ministers and missionaries.

Third—The organization within the Church of a great company of believers to be known as the "Comrades of Intercession," who will pray for the purification of the Church, the ingathering of souls, the revival of family religion and the practical solution of new era reconstruction problems.

Fourth—A campaign of education in the principles and practices of Christian stewardship of both personality and possessions.

Fifth—The extension of the permanent every-member group plan of Church organization, with a leader for every group, and all groups trained to carry out the objectives—local and worldwide—set before the Church.

Sixth—A progressive five year expansion of work and income for every national board and agency of the Church, so that they may deal in an adequate fashion with the great problems which today challenge the Church.

Seventh—A better co-ordination of all our agencies and institutions dealing with religious education—the Sunday schools, the academies, the colleges, the theological seminaries.

Eighth—The pledging of the entire membership of the Presbyterian Church on March 23rd, 1919, for the securing of the $38,000,000 needed to realize the program for the year beginning April 1st, 1919.

Ninth—A campaign of personal evangelism in every community, resulting in an increase in membership which shall at least double the accessions to the Church on confession of faith during the previous year.

Make your money make more money—put it in War Savings Stamps where it is never idle.

LETTER FROM "OVER THERE"

29th Division Not Given Credit For Service Rendered

Private Van R. Muir, Company L, 115th Infantry, American Expeditionary Forces, writes about the good service rendered by the 29th Division in France. Private Muir is a son of Captain Edward Muir, of Monie, Somerset county. In a letter to a friend, written in France on January 27th, 1919, he said in part:

"We arrived in France seven months ago today, and they have been seven months which I will not forget very soon, for they have been full of adventure, excitement and hard work. We had been over here only about three weeks when we went into the trenches; but that wasn't so bad, for when we went there it was in a quiet sector of the line, but it soon got lively after the 29th Division arrived. Our division stayed in this sector for nearly three months, leaving about the last of September. We next went up north of Verdun on the Meuse, which position was lively enough, and as ours was a crack division we were given a hard place to take—a place where a few other divisions had failed, including the much talked of and too well praised 79th. It was a tough proposition, but our commander knew what the Maryland volunteers could do, so we hiked up and slept in No Man's Land the night of October 7th. The next morning we crossed the Meuse river and took a hill which the Boche had held since 1915. We did not stop until evening, when we had driven the Boche nearly five kilometers. We halted for a day, then we advanced again a few more kilometers through H—, for that is about as good a name as can be found for the woods we advanced through. We made three more advances, at the termination of which we established our line and held it until relieved on the 29th of October. We had it tough and lost quite a number of men. That is what hurts—losing the men we had been with so long and who we all loved as brothers. That is the hardest thing in war. We captured a great many prisoners, machine guns and cannons, and put out of the fight nine enemy divisions. I am proud to say we were all ready to move on Metz, having been out of the lines ten days and were on our way back when the armistice was signed. The volunteers of Maryland have not been treated right. The Maryland newspapers, especially the Baltimore Sun, gave the 79th Division credit for what the Maryland men of the 29th Division did. After going through all the hardships that the A. E. F. were called upon to endure, and then to see our home newspapers giving another division credit for what the 29th did, is nearly as hard a blow to us boys as 'going over the top.'"

After one summer's trial, the opposition to the "daylight saving" comes almost wholly from the farmers. They didn't like it. Their chief objection is that it cuts an hour off the afternoon work, for hired help insists on quitting by the clock, not by the sun.

Contrary to a common belief, the midday and afternoon hours are the best for farm work. Not much can be done with hay until the dew is off the grass. The best time to get in a load of hay is late in the afternoon, just before the dew begins to fall. It has then had the largest measure of sunshine and has become hot, dry and "crackly," giving out a rustling sound when handled.

That sound is the sure sign the hay is ready to put in the barn. To keep the hay out in the field another night will surely injure and perhaps wholly spoil it. But with the eight-hour day the "help" must quit at four o'clock—which is really only three o'clock. Best part of the day wasted.

It is much the same with other summer work on the farm, weeding and cultivating. The morning is not a good time for this work unless the land is very dry and the heat intense. Weeds pulled or hoed up will often take root again and grow if the ground is wet with dew. The hotter the sun the easier the job of the weeder and cultivator.

Again it is said the cows refuse to come home by this new-fangled timetable; and when they do come home the "help" tired of waiting, has gone away.

Tomato Growers Association Meetings

Meetings of the Tomato Growers Associations were held during the last week at Costen, Cokesbury, Jamestown and Marion. A new association was organized at Westover and they elected the following officers: President, T. Cox; vice-president, F. E. Richards; secretary and treasurer, G. H. Wilson.

Charley Zepp's Feet

By ARCHIE CAMERON NEW

His chair propped up comfortably against the door jamb, in the narrow hallway leading from the stage of the Olympia theater to the back alley, with a dim red light casting its feeble rays on his white hair, Baker, the doorman, kept watch snuggly, against the trespass of unhallowed feet. And then an unhallowed foot brought him upstanding, and an unhallowed hand on his stooped shoulder brought a frown, which quickly changed into a grizzled smile as a bill shot under his nose.

"I say," piped a voice, "my good man, will you give this card to Miss Dolly Hart?"

"H-m-m," came the answering grunt, as Baker scanned the card. "I'll see. I think her act's on now. Jes' wait."

Baker shambled off, but hadn't got a foot when a retaining arm shot out of the darkness and stopped him.

"Pss-t," hissed Charley Zepp, reaching for the card. "Who's Dolly's Johnny?" Then as he read the card he turned a surprised face on Andy Scobell, the property man. "Shades of Morgan, Andy, it's Piper!"

"Piper?" echoed Andy quizzically. "Where does he tend bar?"

"Can it, Andy," growled Charley Zepp. "He's no bartender. His daddy's name's on most o' yer weekly pay."

"Forrest's angel?" quizzed Andy, puzzled.

"Forrest's nothing," was the retort. "He ain't got nothin' t' do with th' manager o' this house. He's president p' th' Consolidated National bank—worth about fifty million—oh, boy, what a write-up for Dolly!"

"Can't y' Tell 'im by 'is Pigeon Feet?"

"Soft pedal," admonished Andy, in a hoarse whisper. "You press agents're reglar nuts. Dolly's partner Bill Hemsley'll give you all that's comin' t' you if you go to fram'in' up Dolly with a money-masher. Besides, this don't look real—a bank president Johnnying around stage—"

"It's his son, not him," and Zepp gave Andy a scornful look. "Besides, y' gotta be a fair property man before y' can get t' be a stage doorkeeper even, and that's ten jobs below press agent. So keep yer mind on yer own business. This is my meat. Oh, boy!"

Charley Zepp started for Dolly's dressing room and accepted the dainty little dancer just as she returned panting from the stage. Greeting him with a winsome smile, she invited him in. Cautiously he held his breath until the door was closed.

"Well, what's up, Charley?" she demanded, dabbing cold cream on her slightly tinted cheeks—Dolly didn't need much make-up—nature had saved her some expense on that score.

Dolly blushed prettily, and a soft glow suffused her face and neck.

"Who—Billy?" she asked, smilingly. "Good old kid—he's some boy."

"Billy be dinged!" shot Charley, scornfully. "A real one—a gilded gusher—a dough-dripper—he just oozes money—millions of it."

"That's not Billy, then," admitted Dolly, still smiling, "but he's a—"

"Course it ain't," snapped Charley. "This is Piper—son o' th' big Wall street—he's waitin' for yeh outside; here's his card."

"For me?" asked Dolly, with a puzzled frown, scanning the card Charley gave her.

"Sure," insisted Charley, impatiently. "Wants to date y' up for tonight. Baker's waitin' for an answer. Biggest write-up y' ever had, kid. Better wrap it up an' hug it t' yer bosom. Can't I tell 'im yes, an' when?"

"Wait, Charley," Dolly's smile turned to a deep frown. "This is my business. I don't want to see him. Tell him so."

"Why?" demanded the perspiring press agent. "Think of it, Dolly. Just go out with 'im once. Jes' once—and look at th' big headlines in th' papers. Leave it t' me. James Piper's Son Courtin' Dolly Hart, the Irrepressible Ingenue. Why, it means millions t' yeh, kid."

"But I can't marry him, I—" Dolly broke off abruptly.

"I don't have t'," assured Charley, eagerly, "though I don't see why not. He's a gold mine. But all y' gotta do is string him along for a couple dinners, an' I'll do th' rest. Look where it'll get yeh. I can see yer name now on th' lectric sign out front, 'Hemsley and Hart—Dances Divine.' Or even 'Dolly Hart—the Irrepressible Ingenue.' Y' can drop Bill Hemsley."

"Cut that!" said Dolly, sharply. "Whatever comes off, Bill's in on it, too. He's a good kid, an—"

"All right, all right," soothed Charley, then returned to the attack. "Come on, take it while th' takin's good. Shall I tell 'im yes?"

"Er—no," faltered Dolly, thinking of the big electric sign. "Er—tell him to call—tomorrow night—and I'll let him know."

"But—"

"Tell him just that," snapped Dolly decisively. "I'll think it over."

"Better had then," surrendered Charley, content with a partial victory. "Think of the big pay, th' big headlines—th—"

The door closed behind him with a slam, and he returned to the hopeful Johnny, bidding him graciously to return "tomorrow night," and then he went about scattering the glad tidings. The news reached Hemsley in due time, as it did also their fellow players on the bill. The latter took it as a triumph.

"Fine, Dolly," they congratulated her. "Invite us up on Fifth avenue when y' get settled, will ye?" An Dolly, jokingly, assured them that she would even send her limousine after them.

But Billy Hemsley took it as a shock. Dolly Hart—his Dolly, as he had recently come to think of her—angling for a millionaire? Impossible! But, then, Pearl Popp, of the Juggling Poppo, assured him it was so.

"Told him to come back tomorrow night," she told Billy. "Looks like a sure-fire hit. Old man Forrest says he's been hangin' aroun' the theater for th' last seven nights. Looks like weddin' bells, don't it?"

Hemsley grunted, and left the theater for his midnight lunch—alone. He didn't want to see Dolly—he wanted to figure this awful blow out alone. Dolly leaving him?—it was terrible. But, then, what chance had he against a man who could buy her a pet elephant, and after that, besides, a diamond necklace for the beast. It ruined his appetite, and afterward his sleep. And this, in turn followed by a spoiled breakfast, nearly caused him to spoil their act at the matinee. To only one did he express himself, and that was Andy Scobell.

"Better keep th' tin god out of my sight," growled Billy, "or th' Piper family'll be minus one."

"Y've stuck yer feet in it, Charley," Andy told Zepp a few minutes later. "Hemsley's sore as th' devil."

"Never y' mind about my stickin' my feet in anything," retorted Charley. "They'll get me out of it, too. Hemsley's a nut."

And then, later, ten minutes before their act, the news spread that Piper was back for his answer. Hemsley heard it as he stood in the wings, and then, across the stage, under a piece of suspended scenery that hung a foot from the floor, he recognized Dolly's feet. Those slippers—he could tell them anywhere. But that wasn't all!

And then, with a sickening feeling, he saw Baker shambling toward the back door. In a trice he was at his side.

"What did Dolly tell that—rat?" he demanded.

"I—I don't know, sir," faltered the aged doorman. "Here's th' note she gave me."

Billy seized it, read the single line, "Nothing doing," and then gripped his shoulders eagerly.

"Is that for—Piper?" he demanded, hoarsely. Baker nodded. "Then who?" demanded Billy, breathless with joy, "who is that guy talkin' to her?" And he pointed to the feet showing under the curtain.

"G'wan," growled Baker, "Can't y' tell 'im by 'is pigeon feet? They're big enough. That's Charley Zepp. He's been arguin' with her, but it's no go. It'll cost me a big tip, too. She's a stubborn young woman."

"Thank God she is," snapped Billy, as he hurried away in Dolly's direction.

Later, as Scobell saw Dolly, with her head resting happily against Hemsley's shoulders, having heard from the doorman, he mused contemptuously.

"He ain't got no business mixin' in love, Charley ain't," and he stole another glance at the enraptured couple. "An' now he'll be hangin' aroun', like th' rest of th' news-hounds, sayin' I tol' yeh so. But his feet did get Charley out of a mess, th' lucky stiff."

Early Paper Mills.

The first paper mill in New England was established by Daniel Henshman, born in Boston 230 years ago. It was not the first of its kind on the continent, however, the pioneer mill for the manufacture of paper having been built in 1690 by William Rittinghousen at a point within the city limits of Philadelphia. The first paper mills in England were erected at Darford in 1580. The French and Dutch, however, were the first Europeans to manufacture paper. Paper-making machinery was invented by Louis Robert, who sold his model to Didot, the great printer, who perfected the apparatus, with the assistance of Fourdrinier. The latter obtained an English patent in 1801, and gradually the paper industry was revolutionized.

No Farm Too Large or Too Small for a Cleveland

CAPABLE of doing a great volume of work; yet so designed and so easily operated that it gets into the corners.

The owner of a small farm can use the Cleveland just as profitably as the owner of a big one. And another advantage is that it works on all kinds of soils. It lays its own track as it goes along and does not pack the soil.

The Cleveland tractor has proven itself able to plow from 8 to 10 acres per day in medium soil, with a two-bottom Oliver plow.

Use it with an Oliver Plow for best results!

Oliver plows were designed especially for tractor service. The rolling coupler and jointer bury all trash and weeds at the bottom of the furrow. The stop device maintains an even depth of furrow. A trip rope enables the operator to control the plow from his seat on the tractor. The plow points enter and leave the ground first, affording good clean furrows clear to the ends of the field.

Come to our salesroom any time and I will show you many other good features of the Cleveland tractor and Oliver plows.

MAKE PREPARATIONS FOR FARM WOODLAND

War Has Brought Matter Directly to Attention of Farmer.

Poor Species of Trees Should Be Gradually Eliminated and Openings Filled—Consideration Will Bring Returns.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The various demands which the war made upon the farm woodlands in the way of wood fuel, walnut for gunstocks and airplane propellers, locust for tree-nails, oak and hickory for vehicle construction and other purposes, to say nothing of the numerous lesser demands, have brought woodlands more directly to the attention of farmers than ever before. During the next month or so farmers should decide definitely what land is to be kept in woods and what is to be cleared for farm purposes. On many farms there are small areas unprofitable for farm purposes which should be reforested as soon as the price of nursery stock and labor becomes normal. Now is the time to make the plans for the future, laying out with the assistance of the county agent a program of woodland improvement which shall have for its object the growing on the land available of the greatest possible amount of the most valuable or most rapid-growing trees. Then, as time and labor become available, the plans can be carried out. The poorer species of trees should be gradually eliminated and openings in the woodland filled in just as the farmer replants the failed place in his cornfield. A few days spent now in carefully considering these subjects will bring ample returns in the future.

USE MOST PRODUCTIVE LAND

Every Acre Planted Should Be Put Into Condition to Yield Well—Prices Are High.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The food and feed program for this year is much the same as in 1918. Then it was pointed out that on account of the scarcity and high price of labor, the high prices of everything that went into the making of a crop, and the necessity for a full harvest, the farmer's efforts should be concentrated on his most productive land. That policy brought the biggest returns under war conditions. The same plan should be pursued this year. Prices for everything that go into making the crop are still on a war basis, consequently every acre planted should be put into condition to yield well. It is no time to endeavor to improve the poorest fields. That should be deferred until the prices of labor and fertilizer again become normal. It will then be most practicable if done as a supplement to farming better land. This year every stroke of work should be made to count on the best land of each farm, so that good yields may offset the high expense of putting in the crops this spring.

SEED TREATMENT AIDS OATS

As Result of Efforts of Farmers and County Agents Million More Acres Seeded.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More than 50,000 farmers co-operated with the agricultural county agents last year in the 33 northern and western states in treating seed oats for smut. Their efforts resulted in more than 1,000,000 additional acres of oats being sown with treated seed. Based on reports made the previous year the results of this work increased the yield an average of about four bushels an acre, and this increase was brought about in most cases at a cost of less than ten cents an acre.

FARMING WITHOUT RECORDS

You wouldn't play a game of any kind without determining who was the winner when it was finished, would you? Farming without keeping records is the same thing, except that you are liable to wake up some morning and find that you have lost the game when you had thought you were winning.

LIVE STOCK

DISINFECTION IS NECESSARY

Invisible Organisms or Disease-Germs Spread Rapidly and Live for a Long Time.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In dealing with infectious diseases of live stock, the average stockman and farmer does not sufficiently realize the importance of thoroughly disinfecting his premises following an outbreak of contagious disease on his farm or in his locality. Unless the germs which cause the disease are destroyed, they have the power to maintain themselves on premises for indefinite periods. So long as they thus remain they are a constant menace and may at any time be the cause of an outbreak.

It is but natural to acknowledge the presence of only such objects as can be seen with the unaided eye. Science, however, by means of the high-power microscope, has clearly proved the existence of numerous minute animal and vegetable organisms—micro-organisms—and it is a matter of common knowledge that many of these organisms frequently find their way into the animal body and produce disease. It is also well known that these micro-organisms, or germs, vary in form and other characteristics and that for each disease of an infectious nature there is a specific germ.

If these germs could be confined to the animal body and die with it there would be no such thing as an infectious disease. Unfortunately, however, they are thrown off by the animal through the excretions and lie in the soil, in the litter of stables, upon the floor and walls, and in cracks and crevices. Here they may remain and maintain their virulence for an indefinite period, ready at any time to be gathered up by an animal in its feed or to be blown about in dust and drawn into the lungs.

For example, we have tuberculosis in cattle and glanders in the horse. In the former disease the causative agent is a rod-shaped germ which averages about one ten-thousandth of an inch in length. Cattle affected with tuberculosis pass myriads of these germs with the manure, and it is not difficult to understand how in the average stable they would have little difficulty in finding many lodging places.

In glanders the causative agent is another rod-shaped germ, about the same length as the tuberculosis germ, but somewhat thicker. A character-tic of this disease is the formation of ulcers in the nostrils and other portions of the body, from which there is more or less discharge laden with the glanders germ. And here, again, it is not difficult to understand how one diseased animal may contaminate extensive premises.

As has been stated, some of these minute forms are vegetable organisms. In fact, these vegetable parasites are the cause of some of the most destructive diseases, and some of them are very difficult to destroy, for the reason that they contain spores. A spore may be likened to the seed of a plant, for it bears about the same relation to the bacillus that a grain of wheat does to the plant proper. As the plant may be destroyed and the seed remain latent for an indefinite time, so destruction of the bacillus may be accomplished while the spores remain unharmed and retain life for weeks, months or years.

An example of this class of organisms is seen in the agent which causes anthrax. Ordinary methods for the destruction of the bacillus will not destroy the spore as well, and thus anthrax becomes a most difficult disease to eradicate. Upon farms where animals have died from anthrax and the carcasses have been buried instead of destroyed, repeated outbreaks of the disease may occur from time to time, possibly extending over a period of several years. This condition is due to the existence of the very resistant spores, which under favorable circumstances are carried to the surface of the earth, and become infecting organisms—much as the seed of a noxious weed, after remaining in the soil during the winter, finds the conditions favorable in the spring and develops into a plant—except that these minute forms of life multiply with the most wonderful rapidity.

Thus it is that our increased knowledge regarding micro-organisms—or bacteria as the cause of many animal diseases has emphasized the importance of disinfection.

Ventilation is very essential in a barn. Animals are much like human beings in that they need fresh air.

FOUND IT HARD TO ANSWER

Missionary Must Have Been Some- what Staggered by Keen Logic of Kafir Chief.

Among the former chieftains of the black tribes of the Transvaal Magato maintained absolute independence during his reign over the Magatese, and it was not until after his death that the Boers succeeded in collecting the hut tax from his people. An incident that illustrates his character is told in "Secret Service in South Africa."

About 1894 the Boer government sent General Joubert with a small escort to persuade the truculent old chief to acknowledge its overlordship, or at least to pay something on account of the arrears of the hut tax. "Are you Paul Kruger?" Magato demanded.

The general explained that he was a sort of chief induna to the president of the republic.

"Go back and tell your chief that I am as great a chief as he is, and that if he wishes to have a discussion he must come himself to see me. I do not talk to indunas."

That was all the general got, and he had to be content.

The Kafir starts life at the point most white men only attain with old age. Independence and a competency are his natural heritage; therefore, why should he toil?

Magato summed up the position to the missionary who was vainly endeavoring to inculcate the European theory of the necessity and dignity of labor.

"Why do you white men work so hard?" he inquired.

"To earn money."

"Why do you want money?"

"That we may have no need to work."

"That is a roundabout way of getting to the position that my young men already occupy. You say work is a good thing, and that all good white men enjoy work. Why is it that when you send bad men to prison you make them work as a punishment?"—Youth's Companion.

WORDS ONE SELDOM HEARS

Knowledge of These Definitions May Some Day Save You a Search Through Dictionary.

Amphiscians are the people who inhabit the tropics, whose shadows in one part of the year are cast to the north and in the other to the south, according as the sun is north or south of their zenith.

The Antiscians are the inhabitants of the earth living on different sides of the equator, whose shadows at noon are cast in contrary directions. Those living north of the equator are antiscians to those living south of that line, and vice versa. The shadows on one side are cast toward the north and upon the other toward the south.

The Ascians are the people who live in a land where, at a certain time of each year, they have no shadows at noon. All the inhabitants of the torrid zone are Ascians, they having a vertical sun twice a year.

The Periscians are the inhabitants of the polar circle, whose shadows during some portions of the summer must in the course of the day move entirely around and fall toward every point of the compass.

Must Have Smelled to Heaven.

Throughout Italy of the sixteenth century the passion for perfumes amounted to a mania, according to Pompeo Molmenti, the historian. From cap on the head to the shoes on the feet, gloves—to such an extent that at Milan the guild of gloves and perfumers was one and the same—socks, shirts, even money, all were scented. And as if that were not enough, patrician ladies carried on their persons pouncet-boxes filled with scented unguents, and held in their hands chaplets of amber and smelling bottles. One finds in the inventories hairpins of amber. They put musk in their baths and amber, and aloe, and myrrh, pepper, mint, jonquil, Indian plum, cinnamon, ammonium and other scents. The patrician ladies, whose luxury in dress was limited even by their servants, set the fashion for the wives of the wealthy citizens and their influence was nation-wide.

Largest Earth Embankment.

The Belle Esurche irrigation dam in South Dakota is the largest earth embankment in the world. Its construction was authorized by congress at a cost of $5,000,000. From an engineering standpoint this project is one of the most interesting which the government has yet undertaken. Its principal structure is the earthen dam. This dike, which closes the lowest depression in the rim of a natural basin, is 6,200 feet long, 20 feet wide on top and 15 feet high in the highest place. The inside face of this structure, which has a slope of one to two, is protected from wind and wave action by two feet of screened gravel, on which are placed concrete blocks each four by six feet. The cubical contents of this dike are 42,000,000 feet, or about half of the famous pyramids of Cheops in Egypt. The reservoir created by this dam covers about 9,000 acres and will be the largest lake in the state.

Make a Good Doughnut.

"Won't you please give me a dime mister," pleaded the professional mendicant. "I've got to eat something, you know."

"So you have, my poor fellow; but a dime is so small I am afraid it wouldn't satisfy your appetite. Here is a nice, large iron washer. You will find it much more filling."

TUESDAY MORNING, MAR. 25, 1919

The fact that 1920 is leap year, does not prove that the girls will have to change their methods any.

Why are the doughboys so called? Dunno, except that the people knead them back here in Princess Anne again.

The food manufacturers are perfectly willing to cut the price of bread in two, if they can cut the size of the loaf in three.

The merchants that can't afford to advertise might also economize by renting smaller quarters and turning off their help.

The most terrible punishment that could be imposed upon those people that want to overthrow the government would be to set them to work.

Chicago having passed the 3,000,000 population mark, looks with contempt on rustic little rural villages like St. Louis, Philadelphia and San Francisco.

The brisk demand for garden seeds during these nice spring days does not prove that there will be an equal demand for hoes during the heat of summer.

Some merchants depend on their store windows for advertising their goods, and a careful watch of their premises will frequently reveal a couple of kids looking in, each having several pennies.

Some of those young folks who occupy the hammock summer evenings have given absolutely no support to the Daylight Saving movement. Also the electric light and gas companies will no doubt feel that the Daylight Saving idea is a great injustice to the farmers.

ANSWERING THE CROAKERS

There are still a few croakers. They say they don't understand why the Victory Liberty Loan is necessary; they are afraid that the government has wasted money; they bewail the high cost of living and complain that they can't buy bonds. But the loan will be launched April 21st just the same and the nation is going to give another proof of its common sense and patriotism. For all intelligent people know that the war has not been paid for; all honorable people realize that the bills must be met; all whose hearts are warmed by the spirit of democracy understand that the victory which saved civilization is worth many times the price we paid.

If a few dollars were needlessly spent what of it? Even if millions might have been saved, we won the war. That was the big thing and we were prepared to pay ten times as much, if need be. After the fire is out and the factory has been saved it's easy to fret about the quantity of water used and the splashes on the office rug. But as a matter of record every dollar spent in this country weighed against the German morale. We made stupendous preparations. Two million men were sent to France. More were on the way. Germany, terrified, surrendered.

Had we not made such plans the war probably would have lasted six months or a year longer. The money spent here saved countless lives in France, and who can say that the policy was not a wise one? Now the bills must be paid; the men must be brought home; the sick and wounded given proper care.

Yet there are still a few croakers. They think we have already made so many sacrifices. But how do our casualties compare with those of England and France? Where are our devastated farms, our wrecked homes, our factories destroyed, our towns and cities in ruins? Has not civilization been saved? Is victory to be reckoned on a cash register? Those who went to France did not go as a business proposition; they did not go to clip coupons. They went to destroy militarism and to save the freedom of the world. They smashed the Hindenburg line and with it the Hun's hopes of world domination.

Now there is the bill to pay, but still there are a few croakers; perhaps there always will be. Not so the rank and file, the bone and blood and brawn of the nation. The people have never yet fallen down when they had a big task ahead. But when the Victory Liberty Loan has gone into history the man who only croaked when everybody else was whooping up the big campaign will have a lot of explaining to do, and, worst of all, it will be a matter of life-long humiliation, of bitter, galling shame, for him to know that he cannot prove an ally even to his own conscience.

THE ARMY AND POLITICS

After the Civil War the returning soldiers were a great political force for many years in both the North and South. They constituted the most powerful of any organized group in the country and few politicians dared defy them. A large part of the prominent statesmen were soldiers. It was hard to beat a man with a good war record at the polls. Four million soldiers are now returning to civil life. They will come back with soldier ideals, with a common experience and disposed to some extent to act as a unit in public affairs. Experienced politicians expect them to be a great force and are trying to forecast what their influence will be.

For one thing the soldiers are going to be strong on efficiency and discipline. They have learned what grand things can be accomplished by system and organization and scientific ability.

These qualities have not counted as high in home politics as they should. The best talker is usually the one who wins at the polls. He may have no business head or organizing ability. But if he can make an eloquent and plausible speech he is pretty sure to get by. Meanwhile the quiet man of achievement in business, of capacity for scientific organization and expert efficiency, does not usually fare well at the polls because he cannot express himself volubly enough.

The soldiers will feel keenly the lack of efficiency. In some cases they suffered from it very seriously and they will be very hostile to it in civil life. They are not going to be content with mere talkers get into power. It is a safe prediction that they will constitute a force for action and expert ability rather than for talk. Let the politicians think about this.

THE RIGHT OF WAY

An automobile publication says that more motor accidents occur from machines trying to cross in front of each other than from any other one cause. Collisions occur in two ways, in some cases a car tries to pass another going the same way and runs into a third car coming from an opposite direction. Sometimes the slower car that was being passed is pushed out into the gutter.

Or another frequent type of accident is when a car comes out from a side street and attempts to cross or turn into the street ahead of a car on that street. The question arises which had the right to go ahead.

In some states the law attempts to define rights of way under such circumstances. But it is never possible to state them exactly because so much depends on judgment and position of cars at a given moment. With the machines moving rapidly, it is difficult to fix the legal responsibility. A jury is apt to decide that both were to blame.

It would be well if a law could be enacted, uniform for all states, in which the question should be settled, whether the man driving on a main street has precedence over one coming from a side street. And if he has such a precedence, how much nearer the intersection he must be in order to claim the privilege. But even with such a law existing anywhere, the question would frequently arise as to which was the main road, and which the side street.

It would be well if every operator in Princess Anne would resolve to use more caution than ever before. No matter if you might possibly claim the right of way in a doubtful case, it is better to give it up than to take any chances of accident. If there is a doubt to who is entitled to go ahead, let the other fellow do it. That would be considered common courtesy in any other circumstances but automobile driving.

FLimsy HOUSE CONSTRUCTION

A man who has been looking around the neighborhood with the idea of buying a residence, says he does not want any new house. He has no confidence in dwellings recently built. He says he wants something put up 20 to 30 years ago, when they had higher standards of building construction.

While good houses are being built all the time, more poor material is used than formerly. Materials and labor cost so much that there is a tendency for builders to skimp on stock.

A man who does that on a house for himself must figure that his property will depreciate rapidly. He may save a few hundred dollars, but lose more than that in shrinkage if he wants to sell.

A poorly built house depreciates a little every year. If the owner rents it, he should add a depreciation charge to his expenses and the occupant will have to pay it. Better make the building a little smaller and have it good of its kind and size.

Why Colds Are Dangerous

You are often told to "beware of a cold," but why? We will tell you: Every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for the more serious diseases. People who contract pneumonia first take cold. The longer a cold hangs on, the greater the danger, especially from the germ diseases, as a cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs of consumption, diphtheria, scarlet fever and whooping cough. The quicker you get rid of your cold, the less the danger of contracting one of these diseases. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a great reputation as a cure for colds and can be depended upon. It is pleasant to take.

THE RURAL TEACHER

The young woman who begins teaching school usually "tries it out on the dog." In other words, she takes a country school. She looks at this experience as a stepping stone to a better position later in some city. Naturally she is attracted by fine buildings and higher salaries. The country school authorities hate to part with a good teacher. But they cheerfully give her the "recommend" she has earned. Her newly made friends part with regret, sometimes with tears.

This works very nicely for the teacher. She learns a lot in her country experience and gets thereby the certificate of practical ability. But it does not work so well for the country school, which needs a trained experience just as much as the city school. It is discouraging, that just as a teacher begins to get a thorough grip of her work, off she goes to some place paying higher salaries. A few may stay for personal reasons but the majority go where they are treated the most liberally.

Every town should be as generous in this respect as it possibly can. Here in Princess Anne we should go the limit to keep a good teacher. But we can't keep up with the big towns where there is so much wealth.

Sympathy and personal interest and attention go a long way. If the teacher is neglected, if few people visit her school, if she is rarely invited anywhere, she naturally gets lonely.

An attitude of friendly interest will help a lot. Also if the school authorities and neighbors take all possible pains to see that the school house is comfortable and its simple equipment well kept up, it makes the work of the rural teacher far more attractive. By attentions like these, some rural communities keep good teachers much longer than the salary rate that can be paid would justify.

Efforts To Obtain Men For The Navy

Commander Leahy, Navy Recruiting Officer for Maryland, has been urged by the Navy Department to make special efforts to obtain men for the Hospital Corps, Seamen, Machinists Mates, Firemen and Colored Mess Attendants.

During the past few weeks Maryland's quota for the Hospital Corps has not been filled, and this branch of the service offers an unusual opportunity to men with ordinary school education, who are active and desire quick advancement. All branches of the service are open for enlistments, and the opportunities for promotion were never better. Men who enlisted for the duration of the war are being rapidly disenrolled or discharged, and their places must be filled in order to man the ships which are needed to bring the soldiers back from France.

Young men can enlist between the ages of 17 and 35 and can work their way from ordinary seamen to the highest rank in the American Navy. For further information apply to the Navy Recruiting Station, Calvert and Lexington streets, Baltimore.

Some one wants to know what has become of the old-fashioned man who used to brag about the big amount of work he did. Well, he died some years ago and his successor has gone on strike for a 40-hour week.

Stomach Troubles Due To Indigestion Caused Sleepless Nights

No More Since She Began Taking Tonal

"I now have the third bottle of Tonal," says Mrs. Mary Horst, Green Bank, R. D. No. 1, Lancaster County, Pa. "and my stomach trouble about gone. I can sleep now, which I could not do before. I suffered all the pains of indigestion, or catarrh of the stomach."

"I am" only too glad to recommend Tonal, as the medicine with the roots, herbs and barks, which have the merits and produce such wonderful results."

Tonal is sold by T. J. Smith & Co. Druggists, Princess Anne, Md. [Adv.]

Political Announcement

To the Voters of Somerset County: I have decided to be a candidate for Sheriff on the Democratic ticket this coming election. I ask for your support both in the primaries and general election, and if elected I shall do all in my power to discharge the duties of that office. Thanking you in advance for your support, I am, yours truly, JOHN ROBERT GREENE, Manokin, Maryland.

Mrs. E. S. Learey and Miss Lottie M. Walker left last Sunday afternoon for Pennsylvania to attend the funeral of their aunt, Miss Harriet Hanna, who died Friday night at her home near Lancaster city.

Miss Dora A. Carter, daughter of Mrs. J. S. Bradley, of Westover, and Mr. George D. Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Taylor, of Tasley, Va., were married in Princess Anne on Saturday, March 15th, by the Rev. I. S. Hankins.

Fatty Arbuckle, a favorite with movie patrons of this town, will appear in "Camping Out," at the Auditorium next Saturday night. The 4th episode of "Hands Up," the thrilling Indian picture, and a Pathe News will be the two other attractions.

Mrs. Edna C. Roberts, daughter of the late G. W. Dryden, of Somerset county, and Mr. John T. Amos, a prominent farmer of Baltimore county, were quietly married at Hampton Methodist Episcopal parsonage, Baltimore, by the Rev. M. L. Beall. They will reside at White Hall, Md.

To Speed Return of Troops
President Wilson last Tuesday, in Paris, France, directed all American transport officials to make good their promises to speed up the return of American soldiers to the United States. Beginning next month they will be sent back at the rate of 300,000 monthly.

It is now practically certain that the President will be back in the United States not later than May 15th and that he will immediately tour the country in favor of the peace treaty which, including the covenant of the league of nations, will be laid down in the Senate at Washington in such diligent order that no one can find an "i" to dot nor a "c" to cross.

Salisbury Had Big Auto Show

The big doors of the First Regiment Armory, Salisbury, were opened last Wednesday night and ushered in a gala crowd to the "first automobile show" ever held on the peninsula. The show closed on Saturday night. Every inch of available space on the big drill floor had been taken up by exhibitors of cars and accessories and the trucks and tractors had taken the space in front of the big building in the open air. A Liberty Motor, the first ever on the peninsula, attracted great attention, having been sent for exhibition by the Government in charge of two army officers.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of my mother, Adeline Lydia Culver, who died six years ago, March 26th, 1913.

Six years have passed, my heart still sore, As time flies on I miss her more; She sleeps, I leave her in peace to rest. The parting was painful, but God knoweth best.

Friends may think I have forgotten her, And my aching heart has healed; But they little know the sorrow That's within my heart concealed.

I often sit and think of her When I am all alone; For memory is the only friend That grief can call its own.

I mourn for you, dear Mother, But not with outward show; For the heart that mourns sincerely, Mourns silently and low.

FOLLOW DEFINITE SYSTEM IN LOCATING TROUBLE WITH GAS ENGINE OF ANY KIND

Gas Engine Used to Pump Water—This is a Homemade Outfit, Mower, Wheels Being Used.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Everyone who operates a gas engine of any kind should learn first to stop and reason as to the probable cause of any trouble which develops.

In most cases where an engine stops, loses power, or indulges in some other irregularity, some indication of the cause will be apparent to anyone familiar with the outfit if he studies the problem intelligently. Such study will enable one to avoid tinkering with parts that are working properly. Even should the cause of trouble not be apparent after a little reasoning, no attempt should be made to locate it by a general change of adjustment or tinkering done in a haphazard way, as this method will add to the trouble.

Follow a Definite System.

Not only will this go far toward insuring success in locating the trouble, but it will, in nearly every case, save time, for unless the trouble is a very unusual one it will be located in one going over. Practically all experienced operators, in hunting for the source of trouble with gas engines, follow, whether conscious or not, a more or less uniform system of tests. Just what order these tests should take will depend upon the particular make and type of engine; the tests which can be made more quickly and easily should, of course, be made first. From the points mentioned in the following statement it is believed that any operator who does not already employ such a system can readily devise one which will be best suited to his particular engine.

Starting Troubles.

Always bear in mind that for a gas engine to run it is necessary to have a compressed mixture of vaporized fuel (generally gasoline or kerosene) and air in proper proportions, which is exploded by a hot spark while the mixture is under compression. The spark should occur slightly before full compression, except in starting, when it should occur just after full compression has passed.

When an engine refuses to start, the trouble will, with a very few exceptions, be due to some interruption of the supply of the proper mixture of gas and air, or to a failure of the electrical system which furnishes the spark to fire the compressed mixture. It seldom happens that both systems are at fault at the same time, so the first thing to do is to find out whether one of these systems has ceased to work properly.

The ignition system, on the whole, is more often the cause of trouble than is the fuel system, and it is usually advisable to test this first unless, on account of the construction of the particular engine in question, it is easier to make tests for troubles with the mixture supply.

GOOD SORGHUM SEED GREATLY IN DEMAND

Some Extra Money Can Be Realized by Farmers.

Important to Keep Varieties to Be Used for Sirup Production From Mixing With Others—Use Care in Storing Seed Heads.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Good, pure, viable seed of sorgho or sweet sorghum has been greatly in demand the last two years and a little extra money can be realized by farmers in the sorghum belt if they will save the seed from their fodder and sirup sorghum varieties, especially if they have pure strains of such standard varieties as black amber, red amber, orange, sumac, honey, and gooseneck.

In addition to the demand for seed of these varieties for fodder and sirup production there is a limited demand by sirup producers for the seed of such varieties as Colman, Red X, Collier, and McLean. The average farmer, however, who is growing the sorghos primarily for forage purposes had best confine himself to some one of the first-named varieties.

The importance of keeping the varieties to be used for sirup production from mixing with other varieties is strongly emphasized. The sweet varieties from which seed for future planting is to be gathered should not be grown near any other sirup or fodder variety. Even then the seed heads should be carefully selected with a view to truthness of type or variety.

With fodder varieties one can go into a field of shocked fodder and gather the seed in paying quantities by cutting with a knife the heads from the bundles or from the individual stalks, if the fodder has not been bound. The heads can be thrown in piles at the base of the shock, after the practice followed in husking corn from the shock, but this entails considerable waste and it is better to take a team and wagon into the field and throw the heads directly into the wagon box. If the field has been properly rogued and has ripened uniformly it is more economical for two men to work together and by means of a chopping block attached to the wagon box separate the heads from an entire bundle at one stroke.

The gathered heads should not be stacked in the field, but hauled into the farmyard and piled in long, narrow ricks in an open shed. Care must be used in storing the heads. Unless they are thoroughly dry when gathered large quantities thrown together in a crib or bin are likely to heat and thus seriously impair their germinating power. The piles of heads should be examined at least every two weeks, and if any signs of heat develop they should be turned with forks to forestall all damage. Where an open shed is not available for the protection of the ricked heads they may be piled in the open and covered with a tarpaulin or with bundles of fodder until they can be thrashed.

Allowing seed designed to be used for planting purposes to be wet by every rain and snow which comes is inexcusable even where wet periods are infrequent and the total amount of moisture likely to be small. Seed intended to be used for feeding purposes will not be injured to any considerable extent by a small amount of moisture, but wet seed, especially during a season when freezing temperatures prevail, will be rendered almost worthless for planting. Freezing temperatures do little injury to dry seed.

FARM BUREAU IDEA SPREADS

Canada and Australia Ask Information on Plan of Work—Is Increasing in Scope.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Inquiries have been received by the United States department of agriculture from Canada and Australia for full particulars regarding the organization and operation of farm bureaus in the United States, indicating that interest in the plan of work is no longer confined to our own country, but that other countries are eager to adopt a similar type of organization.

The farm bureau is not only an organization to aid the work of the county agent, but is becoming the official agency, or institution, educational in character, for co-operating with the state and nation in meeting agricultural needs, and in planning, administering and directing all phases of extension work in agriculture and home economics in the country.

LAW OF FOOD CONSERVATION

To Turn Inedible Feeds Into Edible Foods Is Great Aim—Dairy Cow Is Efficient.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One great law of food conservation is to turn inedible feeds into edible foods in the cheapest possible manner. The dairy cow will utilize coarse materials, inedible by humans, such as grass, corn-stalks, and hay, and will turn them into milk, which is suitable for human food. Other farm animals are converters of coarse roughage into edible foods, but are not so efficient as the dairy cow.

the national joy smoke

NEVER was such right-handed-two-fisted smokejoy as you puff out of a jimmy pipe packed with Prince Albert! That's because P. A. has the quality!

You can't fool your taste apparatus any more than you can get five aces out of a family deck! So, when you hit Prince Albert, coming and going, and get up half an hour earlier just to start stoking your pipe or rolling cigarettes, you know you've got the big prize on the end of your line!

Prince Albert's quality alone puts it in a class of its own, but when you figure that P. A. is made by our exclusive patented process that cuts out bite and parch—well—you feel like getting a flock of dictionaries to find enough words to express your happy days sentiments!

Toppy red bags, tidy red tins, handsome pound and half-pound tin humidor—and that classy, practical pound crystal glass humidor with sponge moisture top that keeps the tobacco in such perfect condition.

BREEDING WORK MARES YIELDS GOOD PROFIT

According to experts of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry of the United States Department of Agriculture, the least profit that a farmer can make from a mare comes from breeding mares that earn their feed by furnishing farm horse power. An additional source of revenue lies in breeding a mare to a good, thoroughbred stallion and selling the colts. A good mare, bred to a good sire, not only will do her farm work but will raise several hundred dollars' worth of colts.

To aid in the work of making farm mares produce more revenue for their owners, the Maryland Breeding Bureau, which is offering stallions free of all cost to farmers who will properly care for them, has suggested the following points as worth observing:

If a good, registered stallion is available, pure-bred mares of the same breed will give best results. It costs no more to raise a pure-bred colt than it does a grade—and they sell for better prices.

Try for uniformity in mares. The colts of mares of a type, bred to a good sire, can often be sold as pairs, in which form they nearly always sell at a premium.

Watch for indications of good breeding in your mares. Femininity of expression, style, good disposition, clean flat bone, concave open feet, strong constitutions, good proportions, deep roomy barrel, width across hips and well-developed vulva and teats are to be desired.

Beware breeding unsound mares, or sound mares to an unsound stallion. Take good care of your mares and they will take good care of your bank account.

Breeding the working mares places a double duty on them and they should be robust animals properly conformed and must be given good care and treatment. By saving the feed bills (good mares will work them out) and getting hundreds of dollars profits from colts, says an expert of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, farmers can well afford to pay more for such mares, feed them more heavily and give them that special attention which money-makers deserve.

The small farmer can get most excellent results from such a plan, because he usually works his own teams and in a position to watch them more closely and see that they are not ill-treated.

Maryland in recent years has not given the subject of horse breeding the attention it deserves. Today, with all the great possibilities before them Maryland farmers are beginning to realize what profit there is in breeding the kind of stock which has the heart, the stamina, the wind and the robust bodies needed.

Poultry raisers have found there is less profit in raising the dung hill grade of fowls than in raising the pure strains. Farmers have discovered there is no more expense but better profits in raising thoroughbred horses, or horses having a good blood strain.

WHAT DID SHE BUMP?

In these days of good education children learn things their fathers and mothers know very little about. Nora, aged nine, met her father the other day, with her little blue eyes full of tears. "Oh, daddy!" she wailed, "I've just fallen and bumped my patella." "Dear, dear! Poor little girl!" said father sympathetically, as with the best intentions in the world he bent to examine her elbow. Nora drew herself angrily away. "Humph!" she snorted, with a superior air. "I said my patella—that's not my elbow. My elbow's my great sesamoid!"

The Sort.

Politician—I want some one to clear my character for the coming campaign. Friend—Why not employ a scrub writer?

LOVE'S MIRACLE

By SADIE ESTELLE BALLOON.

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

The girl looked pale and thin and Erna Wolfe noticed that the lunch she had ordered was the lowest priced on the bill of fare—a bowl of soup and crackers. Then, too, she ate with almost ravenous haste. Erna felt a quick throb of pity. She could not tell why. She spoke, making a casual remark on the weather, and then—

"I am going to order some ice cream and cake for both of us, if you have time and will talk with me. I and new in the city, and oh, so lonesome."

And thus the ice was broken and the keen enjoyment of her new acquaintance of the little treat made Erna happy. She became confidential. She told her simple story, that of a country bred girl whose stepmother had turned her adrift after the death of her father.

"I found some steady work today," said Erna, "quite a batch of hand copying of old manuscripts for a museum. They cover the history of various curios, the object being preservation rather than publicity. Am I not fortunate?"

"You are, indeed," responded Gertrude Warren. "I have been out of work for a week and not a single prospect in view."

"Oh, you must not be discouraged!" said bright-spirited Erna. "I feared I was going to use up my little surplus store of money waiting for work, when this came along. And, by the by, perhaps you can help me in a dilemma. I have been staying at a hotel, and that is expensive. You are probably better acquainted with the city than myself. Can you advise me how to go about getting a room in some respectable place not too far from downtown and not too dear?"

Gertrude seemed to have the room desired immediately in view. She told Erna that she knew there was a furnished room for rent right next to her own in a house where a widow kept only lady lodgers. Erna was grateful and pleased. Gertrude accompanied her to the hotel, where Erna paid her bill and asked her newly made friend to carry one of her satchels. She treated to a refreshing soda on their way to her new home. Gertrude introduced her to her landlady, arrangements were made for an apartment that pleased Erna immensely, and she was glad to have Gertrude for a close neighbor and told her so.

Gertrude left Erna after helping her unpack her belongings and promised to show her a convenient restaurant later in the day. Erna was arranging the manuscript on a little writing table when she looked up and listened intently. Plainly she heard the landlady outside in the hall say:

"Don't think me unfriendly, Miss Warren, but I must have the back month's rent or I shall have to ask you to give up your room to a new tenant."

"You have been very considerate to me, Mrs. Dale," came the low-toned response, "and I would not impose on your generosity any further, even if you would let me. If I do not get work tomorrow I will find new quarters and pay you up when I regain a situation."

Erna waited until the girl had entered her own room, then she stole down the hall after the landlady. She took out her pocketbook and a whispered conference ensued. Half an hour later Mrs. Dale announced to Gertrude that she had changed her mind. If she would be willing to assist her an hour each morning ironing the napkins and tablecloths, she would ask her for neither the defaulted nor future room rent, as long as she was agreeable to the arrangement.

Gertrude suspected that her new friend was responsible for this great benefit. She grew to love Erna as a dear sister. Better fortune came her way in the shape of service for two hours afternoons in a doctor's office at a dollar a day. Evenings she would sit reading in Erna's room while its owner copied the old manuscripts. Erna was enthusiastic over this work and often kept at it half the night through. The strain broke her down. She was taken ill one morning and for nearly a month passed through a period of fever and delirium and it was then that Gertrude made the discovery that her friend had left behind her in her old home town a man she loved, Alden Thorpe.

Erna sat up at last. Her first expression was of regret over her neglected work, but in glad amazement she learned that Gertrude had completed the copying, the money for it had been paid and there was plenty of new work when Erna got well.

Then came a letter one day and as Erna read it her eyes lit up with a fervor that nearly overcame her. It was signed "Alden Thorpe."

"Dear Erna," it read, "your stepmother has refused to give me your address, but at last I have learned it and I am coming to you to tell you what I came too late to tell you two months ago when you had left home—that I love you and wish you to become my wife."

"Oh, my dearest, truest friend!" cried Erna, throwing her arms about Gertrude's neck, and nestling there, sobbing for joy. "Read of the sweet miracle of love that has come to bless my happy, happy life!"

OLD AGE STARTS WITH YOUR KIDNEYS

Science says that old age begins with weakened kidneys and digestive organs. This being true, it is easy to believe that by keeping the kidneys and digestive organs cleansed and in proper working order old age can be deferred and life prolonged far beyond that enjoyed by the average person.

For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been relieving the weaknesses and disability due to advancing years. It is a standard old-time home remedy and needs no introduction. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil is enclosed in odorless, tasteless capsules containing about 5 drops each. Take them as you would a pill, with a small swallow of water. The oil stimulates the kidney action and enables the organs to throw off the poisons which cause premature old age. New life and strength increase as you continue the treatment. When completely restored continue taking a capsule or two each day. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules will keep you in health and vigor and prevent a return of the disease.

Do not wait until old age or disease have settled down for good. Go to your druggist and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Money refunded if they do not help you. Three sizes. But remember to ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand, in sealed packages.

To Clean Wallpaper.

Cut into eight half-quarters a stale loaf. With one or two pieces, after having blown off all the dust from the paper by means of a pair of bellows (if handy), begin at the top of the room, holding the crust in the hand and wiping lightly downward with the crumb about half a yard at each stroke till the upper part is completely cleaned all around, then go around with the like sweeping stroke downward, always commencing each successive course a little higher than the upper stroke had extended till the bottom is finished. This operation, if carefully performed, will frequently make very old paper look almost equal to new. Great caution must be used not to rub paper hard nor to attempt cleaning it the cross or horizontal way. The dirty part of the bread, too, must each time be cut away and places renewed as soon as at all necessary.

Glamor of the Past.

Egypt is the most popular field for the explorations of the archeologists, but Guatemala and Mexico, on our own hemisphere, offer fields glamorous with the same mysteries. Even in southwestern America the ruins of cliff dwellings and other monuments of dead-and-gone peoples furnish intensely interesting and fascinating fields for investigation and theory. No man can stand in the presence of these things and fall to be thrown into strange thoughts. Indeed, for that matter, one looks with strange feelings upon even a deserted house in which the tenants were only of a generation past. But it is when no one remains alive who was part of a past that it becomes of first-order interest. This is why the old Franciscan missions of California now possess so great a fascination for the world.

USE CENTURIES-OLD METHODS

Ceylonese Reap and Grind Grain in Much the Same Way as in Biblical Times.

At Kandy, Ceylon, the entire method of planting, reaping and grinding grain is conducted as a religious ceremony. The work of carrying the sheaves is allotted to the women, and it is a picturesque sight to see them bearing away the huge bundles of sheaves on their heads. At eventide teams of buffalo as innocent of muzzles as though subject to Mosaic law, are brought to the threshing floor and driven over this paddy to the accompaniment of a community chorus. When well trodden by the herd, the buffaloes are driven away to their respective swamp wallows. The straw is now removed by the women from the paddy, and the latter fanned free of rubbish. The grain is next tossed and fanned on winnowing trays, entirely by hand. The method takes some days. When completed, and ready for the "granary" it is stored in large urns called "bissas," which are protected by a thick coating of mortar. The "bissa" looks like a small thatched cottage, but it is really a miniature silo. When needed for breads or curry, the grain is ground by the women on huge flat stones much like the "metate" of the Mexicans, another round stone resembling a rolling pin in shape, being used to crush the grain. It is then cooked in various ways.

EACH HAS INDIVIDUAL COLOR

Cities by No Means Alike in Hues Which Attract the Eye of the Traveler.

"Have you ever noticed how cities sometimes seem to have their own special colors?" asks Julian Street in "American Adventures," the book in which he and Wallace Morgan recorded, in words and pictures, what they think is the most picturesque part of our country—the South.

"Paris is white and green—even more so, I think, than Washington," Mr. Street continues.

"Chicago is gray; so is London usually, though I have seen it buff at the beginning of a heavy fog. New York used to be a brown sandstone city, but is now turning to one of cream-colored brick and tile; Naples is brilliant with pink and blue and green and white and yellow; while as for Baltimore, her old houses and her new are, as Baedeker puts it, of 'cheerful red brick'—not always, of course, but often enough to establish the color of red brick as the city's predominant hue. And with the red-brick house—particularly the older ones—go clean white marble steps, on the bottom one of which, at the side, may usually be found an old-fashioned iron 'scraper,' doubtless left over from the time (not very long ago) when the city pavements had not reached their present excellence."

Turn Between the Acts.

One night the father of Kitty Stephens, who afterwards became countess of Essex, went on the stage between the acts, and was standing close to the drop scene, with his back to it, when the stage manager gave the signal for the raising of the curtain. Slowly the cloth went up, and as it rose the coat-tails of Mr. Stephens became involved in the roller, and feeling himself caught, he began to struggle for freedom. His efforts were unavailing, however, and when the roller reached the top there was he in full view of the audience, suspended by his coat-tails, his head and feet downward, his figure resembling a half-open knife. Then the stage hands became alive to the situation, and the drop-scene was lowered again and amid the boisterous merriment of the audience, the sounds of hilarity increasing as the victim, almost black in the face, landed on his hands and knees on the stage and crept into the wing.

Use Preventives.

Loss of time, money and health often can be prevented by the use of some simple, inexpensive preventive measure. At all times, especially during these days of influenza you should never allow yourself to remain in a run-down physical condition. If attacked by disease, while your resistance is low you may pay for it with a long illness or possibly with life itself.

Most people think a doctor's only use is to be sent for in case of emergency, like a fireman, and be brought running with his pillbox in hand just in the nick of time to cheat the undertaker. Many a first-class funeral could have been prevented by a pill taken at the right time. Go to a doctor once in a while. Let him thump your chest bone, gaze on the scenic mysteries of your tongue, count your pulse and telephone your lungs. Neglect of health is a common form of thriftlessness.—Thrift Magazine.

Wonderful Chinese Altar.

There is no altar on earth which vies in marble majesty with the altar of heaven—Tien T'ian—in the south of the Chinese city of Peking, which Emperor Yung-le of the Ming dynasty reared in A. D. 1420, with its triple balustrades, stairs and platforms of pure white marble carved miraculously, its great circle covering a wide area in the midst of a vast inclosure. There the emperor knelt once a year and worshipped "the only being in the universe he could look up to"—Shang-ti—the emperor of the world above, whose court was in the sky and the spear tips of whose soldiers were the stars.

HOW TO SET A HEN PROPERLY

Nest Should Be In Some Quiet Place Where She Won't Be Disturbed—Handle Carefully.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The first sign of a hen being broody (wanting to set) is that she stays longer on the nest when laying, and on being approached will quite likely remain and make a clucking noise, ruffle her feathers and peck at the intruder. When it is noted that a hen sets on a nest from two to three plights in succession and that the feathers are disappearing from her breast which should feel hot to the hand, she is ready to be transferred for setting to a nest which has previously been prepared. The normal temperature of a hen is from 106 to 107 degrees F., which varies slightly during incubation.

The nest should be in some quiet, out-of-the-way place, where the sitting hen will not be disturbed. Move her from the regular laying nest at night and handle her carefully in doing so. Put a china egg or two in the nest where she is to sit and place a board over the opening so that she cannot get off.

Toward the evening of the second day quietly go in where she is sitting, leave some feed and water, remove the board from the front or top of the nest, and let the hen come off when she is ready. Should she return to the nest after feeding remove the china egg or eggs and put under those that are to be incubated. If the nests are slightly darkened the hens are less likely to become restless.

At hatching time they should be confined and not be disturbed until the hatch is completed, unless they become restless, when it may be best to remove the chicks that are hatched first. In cool weather it is best not to put more than ten eggs under a hen, while later in the spring one can put twelve to fifteen, according to the size of the hen.

Dust the hen thoroughly with insect powder, and applying the powder hold the hen by the feet, the head down, working the powder well into the feathers, giving special attention to regions around the vent and under the wings. The powder should also be sprinkled in the nest.

Guineas, like geese and pigeons, pair when the number of males and females is equal.

The turkey does not fully mature until two years old, and is at its best at three years.

Sometimes the old hens of the heavy breeds will not need fattening, as they have a tendency to take on fat with age.

The poultry house should have no draughts; it should be clean and kept clean and no damp floors should be tolerated.

A fowl consumes about three ounces of mash in the morning, two ounces of grain at noon, and four ounces of grain at the evening feed.

Proper equipment in the poultry-house often is the deciding factor in successful poultry keeping and should be given due consideration.

Hens lay best in damp weather, even during winter. It will be noticed that they are more prolific during showery spells than they are when it is dry. The theory is that moisture produces expansion and growth, whereas dry, cold or dry warmth contracts.

HOME MARKET FOR BERRIES

Farmers Urged To Set Out All The Strawberries They Can

The time for setting out strawberries is at hand. We strongly advise you to set out all you possibly can. Strawberries will bring you very attractive prices this year, and every indication is that they will bring you good prices for several years to come.

Quite a number of growers are going to reap very attractive returns this year because they took our advice of a year ago and set out at least a few strawberries instead of growing entirely one-year crops. Many other growers regret that they did not take our last year's advice. Do not repeat the mistake this year.

We have afforded you a home market in the past and propose to do so, year after year in the future. You all know we have bought a factory, located right in your midst, and intend to stay here, affording a good outlet for you permanently, and under these conditions we think we are entitled to first consideration.

When you are ready to sell your berries, you should give us the preference over the buyer who comes to you only when berries are short. We are prepared to pay you highest prices for your strawberries, capped or uncapped, either now or at packing time. Consult with our agent, Mr. C. M. Dashiell, at Princess Anne, Maryland. The social given by the teachers and pupils of Perryhawkin school Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Victor Boys, was well attended and an enjoyable evening was spent by all present. There was realized $31.20 from the sale of refreshments.

Governor Promotes Judge Adkins

Governor Harrington last Wednesday night announced the appointment of Associate Judge William H. Adkins, of Talbot county, who has been 12 years on the bench, to be chief judge of the Second Judicial Circuit and a member of the Court of Appeals, to succeed the late Chief Judge Albert Constable, of Cecil, and at the same time appointed Lewin W. Wickes, of Kent county, as the successor of Judge Adkins. Each judge will serve till the general election in November, when both places will be filled by the voters of the circuit for full terms of 16 years each.

A THOROUGH TEST

One To Convince The Most Skeptical Princess Anne Reader

The test of time is the test that counts.

Doan's Kidney Pills have made their reputation by effective action.

The testimony is confirmed—the proof complete.

Testimony like this cannot be ignored. Mrs. Carroll Hastings, stone road, Princess Anne, says: "For nearly seven years I had disordered kidneys and I was miserable and weak. I had a dragging down pain in my back and my heart palpitated. Then again, I had sick headaches and dreadful pains in the small of my back. I was getting worse every day and I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Jones' drug store. The first box cured me of backache and the other symptoms were greatly relieved." (Statement given October 14, 1907.) Keep Doan's on hand. On July 25, 1916, Mrs. Hastings said: "I always keep Doan's Kidney Pills on hand in case I should need them. I recommend them whenever I have an opportunity."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hastings had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Victory Medals For Loan Workers

Victory medals to be awarded to workers who participate actively in the Victory Liberty Loan campaign are now being made from melted German cannon. The big guns were captured from the Huns by the American troops in their history-making drive at Chateau Thierry. They have been melted, the metal rolled into sheets and the medals are being stamped. Every member of local Victory Liberty Loan committees throughout the United States who does conspicuous work, such as serving on volunteer soliciting organizations, will receive one of these trophies.

These medals, the first of the kind to be distributed in this country, will be about the size of a half-dollar. One side will be a reproduction of the United States Treasury Building, with the inscription, "Victory Liberty Loan." On the other side will appear the certification of participation in the bond campaign. A space will be left blank for the owner's name.

Treasury Department officials decided to offer the medals after a wide-spread demand for a permanent souvenir. The medal will be, in fact, more than a reminder of the loan campaign. It will represent victory which the American boys won against the best troops of the Prussian Guard and the glory of the sacrifice of those who by laying down their lives made that victory possible.

Has Had Stomach Trouble For Seven Years

Theodore Sanford of Fenmore, Mich., has had stomach trouble for seven years and could not eat vegetables or fruit without pain in the stomach and restless nights. By taking Chamberlain's Tablets he is now able to eat vegetables or fruit without causing pain or sleeplessness. If troubled with indigestion or constipation give these tablets a trial. They are certain to prove beneficial.

Vast Sums For Roads

The United States will have a total of at least $574,000,000 for co-operative road building during the next three years, according to the terms of the Federal Aid Road Act. The federal part of this fund is assured by an extra appropriation of $209,000,000 in the post-office appropriation bill just passed by Congress and signed by the President. This amount of funds is the largest ever appropriated for a similar period by any government. It will enable the government to carry out a road-building program of a magnitude never equaled.

A Timely Suggestion

The next time you have a cough or cold try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is pleasant to take and you are sure to be pleased with the relief it affords. This remedy has a wide reputation for its cures of coughs and colds.

Plots Against U. S. Government

The Government at Washington has made public some evidence of widespread plots to overthrow the Government of the United States and set up a Socialist Soviet rule like that in Russia. Hundreds of arrests have been made, and tons of fire-eater "literature" seized. The arrested ones are mainly Russians. Much of the literature is in the Russian language, and the money to pay the expenses seems to come from Russia. Our Government seems resolved to trifle no longer with the dissemination of this kind of vicious propaganda.

The Best Laxative

"My sedentary habits have necessitated the use of an occasional laxative. I have tried many but found nothing better than Chamberlain's Tablets," writes George F. Daniels, Hardwick, Vt. Mr. Daniels is proprietor of the Hardwick Inn, one of the model hotels of New England.

THE TEST

In April comes the real test of Americanism—the Fifth Liberty Loan.

There is not likely to be very much flag-waving, red fire and martial music attached to this campaign.

Citizens are not going to sign up for their share because they are swept off their feet by patriotic impulses induced by brass bands and fireworks.

They are going to buy bonds because they know that their country needs money to pay for the war just won.

They are going to buy bonds first, because they are patriots; second, because Uncle Sam makes it profitable to be patriots.

BUILD NOW FORWARD WITH PROSPERITY

You people in this section have secured your share of the country's prosperity. You are now prepared to lay the foundations for permanent prosperity.

Our farmers in some communities have been sending away thousands of dollars every year to purchase manure for fertilizing. We are going to tell them how they can save this money and still have all the fertilizer they need.

Some of our farmers have not been alive to the advantages and profits derived from the silo. We will tell them all about silos.

We will tell others how they can make money feeding stock and in dairying. The time is also here for the people in this section to build new homes, improve or enlarge their old ones, build new barns and other farm buildings.

You have the money now to do these things. We have the modern plant and facilities shown above to quickly supply you with everything needed for building at prices that save you money.

That is the reason why we say, "Build now, Forward With Prosperity."

Our advertisements will appear in this paper every week. We urge you to read them for the information they will give you and the ways they will point out for saving and making money.
